Our first air raid at Shiuchow was on August 31, 1937. The Japanese sent over their heavy, twin-engine bombers from Formosa. As nearly as we could tell, they had to fly 600 miles to reach us.

The Japanese planes were unlike any that I have seen illustrated in this country. They were equipped with modern Pratt and Whitney twin-wasp engines. Incidentally, the Japanese had no license to manufacture those engines, of American design.

I want to emphasize the tremendous striking power of the Japanese bombers. To our woe, we have discounted reports coming to us from the Chinese on those bombers—and I never have known a Chinese intelligence officer to exaggerate.

DEC 26 1941

Nanning Air Raid

Beginning in 1938 I saw repeated air raids by the Japanese involving twenty-seven and more bombers. They have used as high as 130 on one raid. These bombers have showed consistent improvement in design. They are not copies of foreign planes. They vaguely resemble German bombers only because they use a type of flap, or air brake, and a type of slotted aileron, or wing control surface, employed by the German Junkers factories.

The Japanese were smart. They learned early that bombers unaccompanied by protective pursuit planes were easy targets for Chinese flyers. One day we received word from Chinese intelligence officers that the Japanese were fitting their carrier-based fighters with extra fuel tanks.

Within a week we had a raid in which the bombers were protected by long-range, carrier-based pursuits.

Maximum Output Sought

The Japanese apparently concentrated on the production of a very few types of warplanes for maximum output. I saw in the service of the army apparently the same types used by the navy.

From time to time Americans in China told me that, sure, the Japanese had a lot of aircraft carriers, but they were no good, they were top-heavy. If that were so, it seemed singular that, at one time, the Japanese bombed us every day for six months, and sometimes twice a day, from a carrier lying at least 300 miles away.

The only letup we enjoyed was for a week or ten days when evidently the Japanese were replenishing their supplies.

Japanese bombs were unlike any I had seen used elsewhere. They began dropping 1,000-pounders but soon abandoned that. We could tell the size and type of bombs they used by recovering the fins, on the end, which guided them to the ground. The data was stenciled on the fins.

The Japanese discovered they could do much more damage with smaller bombs. A favorite of theirs was one of sixty kilos, or 132 pounds. It dug a small, shallow crater and it flew apart when it exploded with tremendous effect. It had what military men call wonderful fragmentation qualities.

The tactics used by the Japanese were clever. One day I watched Japanese bombers cause an alert at Kunming, Yunnan province, at the terminus of the Burma road. The Chinese pursuits went aloft, hunting.

A Neat Trick

The Japanese flew off, waited an hour until the Chinese planes were out of fuel and had to land, and then they roared over to destroy the Chinese planes on the ground.

The Japanese pursuit pilot is a good flyer, as good as any I ever have seen. The Japanese bomber pilot can hold his place in a formation perfectly. The bomber pilots fear nothing. I have watched them fly right through a rain of anti-aircraft fire without a quaver.

Their bombardiers' aim is good. I have watched a flight of twenty-seven planes come over, eighteen in one batch and nine following about two miles behind. The nine planes following would come over their target, circle widely, wait for the air to clear, and then drop their eggs squarely [illegible] wanted them.

Perfect Team Work

The first wave had advised the second wave by radio of any inaccuries in their aim and what to do to correct it.

The Japanese very effectively have shielded from us their advancements in aviation. When this war began I saw estimates published that they had only seven aircraft carriers. Then that jumped to nine, finally to thirteen. You can be sure they have every one of those 13, maybe more.

It is my hope that we are going to wake up to the job we have ahead of us if we are going to win the final victory.

Philippine Theatre: Intense fighting continues on all important fronts on Luzon Island. American and Philippine troops launched counter-attacks which met with local successes, particularly in the vicinity of Atinoman, southeast of Manila. Enemy aerial activity continued heavy, with attacks on various towns in Central Luzon.

West Coast: An American Army bomber from General DeWitt's western defense command successfully attacked an enemy submarine off the California coast. Soon after the submarine was sighted it made an emergency dive. A bomb was dropped and the submarine emerged and then sank. Two more bombs were dropped, apparently scoring direct hits, and filling the air with debris.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

It was a very quiet night. Pressure was still exerted in north and south, but action was limited to skirmishes and contacts by patrols. Tactical positions were unchanged.

DEC 26 1941

LONDON, Dec. 25 (AP)—The following communiqué from Hong Kong's now surrendered garrison was issued there Thursday morning and received here by Reuter:

The enemy made some progress during the early part of the night, despite losses in the East Point area.

Heavy fighting is progressing in the direction of Happy Valley, with our troops disputing every foot of the Japanese advance. Under strong enemy pressure we successfully evacuated our forces from Repulse Bay.

The Governor of Hong Kong regrets that he has been advised by the military and naval commanders that no further effective resistance can be made and he is taking action in accordance with that advice.

It will be remembered that the Japanese effected landings in strength at several points on the island [of Hong Kong] on Dec. 18. To many it seemed that the end must be near, yet for seven days under relentless artillery fire, not only from the mainland but from heights on the island, the garrison fought on, refusing three demands to surrender.

The water supply soon gave cause for anxiety. Important reservoirs fell into Japanese hands. Water mains were destroyed by bombardment. The public works department struggled bravely to effect a remedy but the enemy destroyed the pipes again and again.

Two days ago there remained but one day's supply. Military and civilian casualties were heavy, but under the inspiring leadership of Sir Mark Young the morale of all was admirable.

So ends a great fight against overwhelming odds. The courage and determination of the Royal Navy and troops from Britain, Canada and India as well as local volunteer units, including many Chinese, will long be remembered.

On the northwestern front [of Malaya] the situation remains unchanged. There has been some dive-bombing activity by enemy planes. The bombing was very haphazard, causing little damage and few casualties.

There is nothing to report from western Malaya.

Yesterday our aircraft attacked Japanese shipping anchored off Kuching. They scored one direct hit on the stern of a merchant vessel and at least six near misses against other vessels.

Reports received from Kuching [Sarawak] yesterday afternoon indicated that enemy landings were taking place. There has been no direct communication with Kuching since late yesterday.

Our troops yesterday occupied Bengazi. Royal dragoons were the first to enter the town. They report the town devastated.

Despite bad weather and heavy going after the rain our strong mobile columns are still striking at the retreating enemy everywhere in the area between Bengazi and Agedabia and even further west inflicting casualties, taking prisoners and capturing or destroying quantities of enemy transport and material.

Small bodies of enemy troops, believed almost entirely Italian, still remain in the area northeast of Bengazi and are being dealt with.

In the frontier area we eliminated yet another of isolated enemy posts near Bardia.

Our Air Force yesterday maintained their very effective attack against enemy columns of troops and motor vehicles destroying a large number of vehicles including petrol tankers and troop carriers.

When our ground forces occupied Benina airdrome yesterday a large number of enemy aircraft, which had been destroyed on the ground by our Air Force, were found.

DEC 26 1941

A Royal Air Force communiqué follows:

During yesterday aircraft of the R. A. F. and S. A. A. F. continued their attacks on enemy motorized convoys retreating westward into Tripolitania. Many vehicles were destroyed or damaged and casualties were again inflicted on enemy personnel.

In a low flying attack on the airdrome at El Agheila one JU-52 was set on fire while at En Nofilia another JU-52 and a JU-87 on the ground were destroyed. Other enemy aircraft were severely damaged.

It is now known that in the raid on the airdrome at Philaenorum by Maryland bombers of the S. A. A. F., Dec. 23, direct hits were obtained on two enemy aircraft.

Tuesday night this airdrome was again bombed as was the landing ground at El Agheila.

From these and other operations two of our aircraft are missing.

Early last night a few enemy aircraft flew over coastal districts of England.

Bombs which were dropped damaged some houses and caused a small number of casualties.

Netherland

Some days ago one submarine of the Royal Netherlands Navy on return from an important and successful mission struck a mine. All except one of the crew lost their lives, says the Netherlands Indies News Agency.

A flying boat of the Netherlands Indies Air Force in a combat over the South China Sea was attacked by enemy planes, but although hit several times, managed to escape in the clouds.

During an enemy attack on one of the airdromes in the Outer Possessions of the Netherlands Indies some of our bombers were slightly damaged.

Yesterday the airdrome at Tarakan in Borneo was machine-gunned by a four-engined naval aircraft of the enemy. Two workmen were killed in this attack and one soldier slightly wounded. Before the enemy had an opportunity to drop bombs they were driven off by fighters. One fighter was heavily damaged by enemy cannon fire while another fighter sustained slight damage.

On Dec. 25 an enemy plane dropped three bombs on Penarik on the Natuna Islands, northwest of Borneo. The village burned down; one infantry soldier and three Chinese were injured. The same plane later machine-gunned the village Ranai without hitting any victims.

One Dec. 23, two British officers and seven Gurkhas arrived at the mouth of the river Aer Asin in Atjeh on Sumatra after having been cut off from their unit in Malaya. They floated on the sea in a prau for nine days. They were taken to the hospital.

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau's midday communiqué broadcast by the Moscow radio said:

During the night of Dec. 24-25 fighting continued on all fronts. Our troops operating on the Kalinin sector freed fifty inhabited points from the Germans in one day of fighting, capturing ten enemy tanks, eighteen guns, sixty-eight trucks, twenty-five machine-guns and a large ammunition dump.

In a fierce engagement which

took place in one of the sectors of the southern front, our troops dislodged the Germans from several inhabited points, capturing eight guns, ten trench mortars, five machine-guns, and annihilating 300 German officers and men.

German soldiers taken prisoner during the last few days testify to the great losses sustained by the German armies and to further deterioration of the German fighting spirit.

During Dec. 25 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

On a number of sectors of the western, Kalinin and southwestern fronts our troops fought fierce engagements with the enemy and continued to advance, occupying a number of localities.

During Dec. 24 we brought down thirty-four German planes. We lost eleven planes.

Japanese

TOKYO, Dec. 25 (From Japanese broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The Imperial Headquarters communiqué tonight said:

The enemy at Hong Kong, no longer able to withstand our continuous attacks, surrendered at 5:50 P. M. [3:50 A. M., E. S. T.] Dec. 25. Consequently, Imperial troops were ordered to cease firing at 7:30 P. M. [5:30 A. M., E. S. T.]

DEC 26 1941

German

BERLIN, Dec. 25 (From German broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—Today's official German communiqué said:

Violent fighting continues along the entire front.

Fighting and bomber formations operating in central and northern sectors raided troop concentrations and dispersed columns of every kind.

East of Tikhvin numerous enemy transport columns were heavily damaged.

Long range guns of the German Navy shelled an enemy convoy sailing for Dover last night.

In North Africa operations continued according to plan. German fighter formations attacked in Cirenaica concentrations of British armored cars and also scored direct bomb hits on British planes which were taking off.

During the period between Dec. 17-23 we shot down fifty-four British planes, nineteen of which were shot down in the Mediterranean and in North Africa. We lost sixteen during the same period.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 25 (From Italian broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The Italian High Command communiqué today said:

The enemy with strong formations of armored cars and tanks has vainly attempted to overrun the region of Bengazi but was repulsed by mechanized Axis divisions.

Local counter-attacks of the German Air Force scored visible successes, resulting in the destruction of armored cars and guns of the enemy. Numerous prisoners were taken.

Repeated attacks of the enemy against Solum and Bardia were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

In the Central Mediterranean British sailors from the ship Neptune, mentioned Dec. 19, were rescued. They were found near our shores and brought in by the tide.

German air formations have raided and successfully bombed military targets and harbor facilities on Malta. Escorting fighters shot down two Hurricanes.

THE RUSSIAN SUCCESSES AGAINST THE GERMANS ON THE CENTRAL FRONT CONTINUED, AND THE SOVIET INFORMATION BUREAU ANNOUNCED THAT IN THE 5-DAY PERIOD OF DEC. 21-25 A TOTAL OF 10,220 GERMAN OFFICERS AND MEN WERE ANNIHILATED.

RED TROOPS WERE DECLARED TO HAVE ROUTED THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE 13TH GERMAN ARMY CORPS AND OF THE 268TH INFANTRY DIVISION, AND TO HAVE CAPTURED GREAT QUANTITIES OF GERMAN MATERIAL. THE REGULAR MIDNIGHT COMMUNIQUE TOLD IN ADDITION OF THE DESTRUCTION OF THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE 267TH GERMAN INFANTRY REGIMENT.

THE SUPPLEMENT TO THE MIDNIGHT COMMUNIQUE SAID THAT ON ONE SECTOR OF THE FRONT THE HEADQUARTERS OF THE 267TH GERMAN INFANTRY REGIMENT WERE DESTROYED, ALONG WITH LARGE QUANTITIES OF WAR MATERIAL WHICH INCLUDED 270 MOTOR VEHICLES AND 15 GUNS.

YESTERDAY THE RED AIR FORCE WAS DECLARED TO HAVE DESTROYED ON THE CENTRAL SECTOR 12 GERMAN TANKS, 400 VEHICLES, 426 MOTOR CARS, FOUR GUNS, NINE ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS AND 135 CASES OF AMMUNITION. A RAIL LINE WAS WRECKED BY THE SOVIET FLIERS AT THREE POINTS, THE COMMUNIQUE SAID, AND THREE DETACHMENTS OF INFANTRY AND ONE SQUADRON OF CAVALRY WERE SCATTERED.

THE COMMUNIQUE DETAILING THE RUSSIAN CENTRAL FRONT SUCCESSES OF DEC. 21-25 LISTED AS CAPTURED: 33 TANKS, TWO PLANES, 126 GUNS, 36 MINE-THROWERS, 174 MACHINE-GUNS, 293 AUTOMATIC RIFLES, 1,128 TRUCKS, 169 MOTORCYCLES, 1,552 BICYCLES, 625 HORSES AND FIVE RADIO STATIONS. THE REDS WERE SAID TO HAVE DESTROYED 170 CARTS WITH AMMUNITION.

DEC 27 1941

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26—Radiating supreme confidence in the future, Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Great Britain told the American Congress today that an Allied offensive to begin in 1943 would ultimately call the Axis nations "to terrible account" for their misdeeds.

The interim, he said, will be one of preparation, a period of marshalling our forces, of prodding to topmost speed the production of the weapons essential to the victory and —"a time of tribulation."

"Some ground will be lost which it will be hard and costly to regain," he said. "Many disappointments and unpleasant surprises await us. Many of them will affect us before the full marshalling of our latent and total power can be accomplished."

Aid to Britain Crippled U. S.

The British war leader addressed a Senate chamber jampacked with members of both houses and of the Supreme Court. It was an attentive and demonstrative audience which time and again interrupted his remarks with applause that was loud and prolonged. It cheered him enthusiastically as he entered, and when, on leaving, he raised his hand with fingers spread in the "V for victory" sign, it roared its applause again.

About the capital and along Pennsylvania avenue, throngs waited for an opportunity to see him go by. As he spoke crowds gathered about sidewalk radios, solemnly listening, and sometimes joining in the cheers which filled the Senate chamber. President Roosevelt was listening, too, in his office at the White House.

It was a message of hope and cheer and confidence, that Churchill brought to the Capitol and clothed with his incomparable gift of language. But it was also a sharp reminder that things might grow worse, much worse, before they take a turn for the better.

It was a speech which emphasized the vast stores of war implements and the huge and highly disciplined forces at the disposal of an enemy who stops "at nothing that violence and treachery can suggest."

DEC 27 1941

"It is quite true that on our side, our resources in manpower and materials are far greater than theirs," he said. "But only a portion of your resources are as yet mobilized and developed and we, both of us, have much to learn in the cruel art of war."

He intimated that he is keeping in mind plans for a post-war world which will find the United States and Britain stamping out "the pestilence" of war before it can spread. Five years ago, he said, the two nations could have done so easily and without shedding a drop of blood.

And very proudly he reported that the recent offensive in Lifya had demonstrated that when British troops meet the enemy in equal force and with equal equipment, they can make the enemy "feel the sharp edge of those tools with which he has enslaved Europe."

As always he had nothing but contempt for Mussolini—"crumpled already. . . lackey and a serf, the merest utensil of his master's will." Japan, too, came in for a share of the eloquent Briton's biting invective. In view of all considerations, he said, Japan's attack upon Britain and the United States could not be reconciled "with prudence, or even sanity."

"What kind of a people do they think we are?" he scornfully demanded.

Speaks to Cabinet

For his speech the Prime Minister interrupted the continuing joint planning of general war strategy that has been on since he and the commanding officers of the British forces arrived in Washington on Monday. During the day W. L. Mackenzie King, prime-minister of Canada, arrived to join in the discussions. When Churchill returned from the Capitol, the Cabinet was in session, and he spoke to it in a friendly greeting and gave it a report similar to that he had just given to Congress.

Meanwhile anxious officials were alert for news from the far Pacific, and considered it as good as could be expected. The Navy confirmed a previous report from Manila that American submarines had sunk one enemy transport and one mine sweeper and probably destroyed another transport and a seaplane tender. Word from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in command in the Philippines, was that he had reorganized his position on the front north of Manila.

A major tank battle, with heavy casualties on both sides, was raging to the southward of Manila. The city itself had been evacuated of troops and government officials and declared an open city to save its civilian population from Japanese bombs. Enemy bombers appeared over the city, but dropped their missiles upon military installations in the outskirts.

Churchill said the United States and Britain should be thankful that so much time was given them to prepare for their defense. If Germany had attempted to invade the British Isles and Japan had struck simultaneously, just after the collapse of France, he said, "no one can say what disaster and agonies might not have been our lot."

"But now, at the end of December 1941," he added, "our transformation from easy-going peace to total war efficiency has made very great progress."

He thought it "reasonable to hope" that the end of 1942 would see the Allies in a definitely better position and "that the year 1943 will enable us to assume the initiative upon an ample scale."

Sees 'Long, Hard War'

"Some people may be startled or momentarily depressed when, like your President, I speak of a long, hard war," Churchill said. "Our peoples would rather know the truth, somber though it be; and after all, when we are doing the most blessed work in the world, not only defending our hearths and homes but the cause of freedom in every land, the question of whether deliverance comes in 1942 or 1943 falls into its proper place in the grand proportions of human history.

"Sure I am that this day now, we are the masters of our fate; that the task which has been set us is not above our strength; that its pangs and toils are not beyond our endurance, as long as we have faith in our cause and unconquerable will power, salvation will not be denied us."

He dwelt at some length on the difficulties of deciding where available supplies of war materials should be sent.

"The onslaught upon us, so long and so completely planned by Japan, has presented both our countries with grievous problems for which we could not be fully prepared," he said. "If people asked me, and they have a right to ask me in England, 'Why is it that you have not got an ample equipment of modern aircraft and army weapons of all kinds in Malaya and in the East Indies?' I can only point to the victory Gen. Auchinleck has gained in the Libyan campaign.

"Had he diverted and dispersed our gradually growing resources between Libya and Malaya, we could have been found wanting in both places.

"If the United States has been found at a disadvantage at various points in the Pacific ocean, we know well that that is to no small extent because of the aid which you have been giving us in munitions for the defense of the British Isles and to the Libyan campaign, and above all because of your help in the Battle of the Atlantic, upon which all depends and which has in consequence been successfully and prosperously maintained . . .

Believes Choice Was Right

"The choice of how to dispose of our hitherto limited resources had to be made by Britain in time of war and by the United States in time of peace, and I believe that history will pronounce that upon the whole — and it is upon the whole that these matters must be judged — the choice made was right."

Despite the losses suffered and "the further punishment we shall have to take," the Japanese attack seemed irrational. He attributed it to secret sets of societies in the Japanese armed forces which have "enforced their will" upon successive Japanese governments, assassinating statesmen who did not sufficiently back their policies.

"It may be," he said, "that these societies, dazzled and dizzy with their own dreams of aggression and the prospect of early victory, have forced their country into war against its better judgment. They have certainly embarked upon a very considerable undertaking.

Churchill High Lights

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (AP) — Here are some excerpts from Winston Churchill's address to Congress:

The United States, united as never before . . . have drawn the sword for freedom and cast away the scabbard.

DEC 27 1941

What kind of a people do they (the Japanese) think we are? Is it possible they do not realize that we shall never cease to persevere against them until they have been taught a lesson which they and the world will never forget?

The United States have been attacked and set upon by the three most powerfully armed dictator states, the greatest military power in Europe, the greatest military power in Asia. . . . You do not, I am certain, underrate the severity of the ordeal to which you and we have still to be subjected. The forces ranged against us are enormous. They are bitter, ruthless.

We have, therefore, without doubt, a time of tribulation before us. In this same time, some ground will be lost which will be hard and costly to regain. Many disappointments and unpleasant surprises await us.

Not all the tidings will be evil. On the contrary, mighty strokes of war already have been dealt against the enemy—the glorious defense of their native soils by the Russian armies and people. Wounds have been inflicted upon the Nazi tyranny and system that will fester and inflame not only in the Nazi body but in the Nazi mind.

The boastful Mussolini has crumpled already. He is now but a lackey and a serf, the merest utensil of his master's will . . . He has been stripped of all his African empire.

There are good tiding also from the blue waters The lifeline of supplies which joins our two nations across the ocean without which all would fail—that lifeline is flowing steadily and freely in spite of all the enemy could do.

I am so glad to be able to place before you members of the Senate and the House of Representatives at this moment, when you are entering the war, the proof that with the proper weapons and proper organization, we are able to beat the life out of the savage Nazis. What Hitler is suffering in Libya is only a sample and a foretaste of what we have got to give him and his accomplices wherever this war should lead us in any quarter of the globe.

Immense strides have been made in the conversion of American industry to military purposes and now that the United States is at war, it is possible for orders to be given every day which in a year or 18 months hence will produce results in war powers beyond anything that has been seen or foreseen in the dictator states.

If the United States has been found at a disadvantage at various points in the Pacific Ocean, we know well that is to no small extent because of the aid which you have been giving to us in munitions for the defense of the British Isles and to the Libyan campaign, and above all, because of your help in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Here we are together, facing a group of mighty foes who seek our ruin . . . Twice in a single generation the catastrophe of world war has fallen upon us . . . If we had stuck together after the last war, if we took common measures for our safety, this renewal of the curse need never have fallen upon us.

Congress Approves Churchill's Talk

DEC 27 1941

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Congress generally liked the address of Winston Churchill, who told the American legislators that he was himself "a child of the House of Commons."

Senate and House members applauded and cheered him, then later expressed these individual views:

Senator Barkley (D.-Ky.), majority leader in the Senate—"The address was wonderful in its frankness, in its comprehensive discussion of the problems that face us and in the indomitable faith that out of it all shall come a great victory."

Representative Fish (R.-N.Y.)—"A fine, forceful speech."

Senator Nye (R.-ND.): "So far as his appeal for the two countries to get together to fight the war went, the speech was fine. But if there was any 'union now' to be read into his remarks, I would have to take definite exception."

Senator Van Nuys (D.-N.D.)—"Everyone will agree that the idea of union now for our military and naval forces is necessary. As to union in the future, the details and mechanics of that must wait but I believe it's got to be done."

Representative Michener (R.-Mich.) acting Republican leader—"The sincerity and frankness of the speech will meet with the entire approval of all of our people."

Senator Wheeler (D.-Mont.)—"It was a clever speech that, under the circumstances, would more or less appeal to the average American. He showed far more wit than the average Englishman does. He emphasized that it is necessary for us to set up an efficient organization in government with a view toward producing a maximum of defense materials."

Representative Kee (D.-W.Va.)—"It was a message of courage and it ought to give us a lot of courage."

Prime Minister Churchill's address to Congress today was praised generally by his listeners, and Senator Byrd, Democrat, of Virginia, called the speech "a demonstration of the fine unity that exists between the United States and Great Britain."

Senator Kilgore, Democrat, of West Virginia—"If England had worked with us twelve years ago in the Orient, Japan would not be the Power she is today. If we had worked with England on other things, conditions would be different. These two nations hold the balance of power in the world if we exercise it for peace."

Calls Conclusions Inescapable.

Senator Hayden, Democrat, of Arizona—"Churchill said all that was necessary to be said and his conclusions are inescapable."

Senator Bailey, Democrat, of North Carolina—"I told Churchill that we are very grateful for a great message."

Senator Bulow, Democrat, of South Dakota—"Close co-operation between Britain and the United States to prevent recurrence of war is essential. That's what we ought to do, if it can be done. If we don't do that, the war is useless."

Senator McFarland, Democrat, of Arizona—"The fact that we are having this war demonstrates that Churchill was right regarding the Democracies working closer together in the future to prevent a recurrence of such wars."

Senator Gurney, Republican, of South Dakota—"His appearance and his well considered words of determination indicate to me that our people can well tie to and bank on complete co-operation of all the citizens and resources of the British Empire. I believe he is the type of man who knows whereof he speaks."

Honor to Churchill Rare One

He Is Third Briton in History of Nation to Be Similarly Received.

DEC 27 1941

Washington, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill's history-making appearance before Congress today was the first by a foreign dignitary since the late Lord Tweedsmuir, then Governor-General of Canada, spoke to a similar meeting April 1, 1937.

Mr. Churchill was the third Briton in succession to appear at one of the rare meetings for foreign visitors. Ramsay MacDonald, a former Prime Minister, spoke to Congress October 8, 1929. The two Houses, in a body met King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in the Capitol rotunda on June 9, 1939.

Congressional historians said they did not have a list of visits by foreign dignitaries, but offered these other instances:

Gen. Lafayette was honored by the Senate December 9, 1824, and by the House the following day at a session to which Senators were invited.

King Kalakua of the Hawaiian Islands met both the Senate and House December 18, 1874.

A long list of missions from our Allies during the last war, including British, Belgian, Russian, French and Italian, called on the Senate. Leaders of these missions spoke to the Senate in recess.

Senate parliamentarians said the session today was held in the Senate chamber because it was vested with powers to ratify treaties. It met formally and then recessed for the Churchill speech. Members of the House and other dignitaries were invited to the Senate floor.

Wife of Senator, Ill Hears From Churchill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (AP)—Winston Churchill, leaving the capitol after his address today, was introduced to Senator McFarland (D.-Ariz.) who remarked that Mrs. McFarland was ill in a hospital and was disappointed at not seeing the Prime Minister.

At Churchill's request, a telephone connection with the hospital was made and the British leader told Mrs. McFarland he hoped she would have a speedy recovery.

CHURCHILL MAKES SIGN OF VICTORY

Washington, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Winston Churchill raised his fingers in a "V" for victory sign today as he left the Senate chamber after his historic address.

The Prime Minister sat down when he completed his speech. Several minutes of applause and roaring approval followed.

Then, as he left the rostrum, Mr. Churchill held up his right hand with the first two fingers forming the "V" and the crowd roared.

Members of the Senate and House of Representatives of the 1 States: I feel greatly honored that you should have thus invited me to enter the United States Senate chamber and address the representatives of both branches of Congress. The fact that my American forebears have for so many generations played their part in the life of the United States and that here I am, an Englishman, welcomed in your midst makes this experience one of the most moving and thrilling in my life, which is already long and has not been en[illegible] uneventful. (Laughter.)

I wish I [illegible] that my mother, whose memory I cherish across the vale of years, could have been here to see. By the way, I cannot help reflecting that if my father had been an American and my mother British, instead of the other way around, I might have got here on [illegible] own. (Laughter, applause.)

Democratic Way

In that case, this would not have been the first time you would have heard my voice. (Laughter.) In that case I would not have needed any invitation, but if I had it is hardly likely that it would have been unanimous. (Laughter.) So perhaps things are better as they are. I may confess, however, that I do not feel quite like a fish out of water in a legislative assembly where English is spoken.

I am a child of the House of Commons. I was brought up in my father's house to believe in democracy; trust the people, that was his message. I used to see him cheered at meetings and in the streets by crowds of working men way back in those aristocratic, Victorian days when, as Disraeli said, the world was for the few and for the very few. Therefore, I have been in full harmony all my life with the tides which have flowed on both sides of the Atlantic, against privilege and monopoly, and I have steered confidently towards the Gettysburg ideal of government of the people by the people, for the people.

Servant Of Commons

I owe my advancement entirely to the House of Commons, whose servant I am. In my country as in yours public men are proud to be the servants of the state, and would be ashamed to be its masters. On any day, if they thought the people wanted it, the House of Commons could by a single vote remove me from my office, but I am not trying it at all. (Laughter.)

As a matter of fact, I am sure they will approve very highly of my journey here, for which I obtained the King's permission, in order to meet the President of the United States (cheers), and to arrange with him for all that mapping out of our military plans and for all those intimate meetings of the high officers of the armed services in both countries which are indispensable for the successful prosecution of war.

I should like to say, first of all, how much I have been impressed and encouraged by the breath of view and the sense of proportion which I have found in all quarters over here to which I have had access. Anyone who did not understand the size and solidarity of the foundation of the United States might easily have expected to find an excited, disturbed, self-centered atmosphere with all minds fixed upon the novel, startling and painful episode of sudden war as it hit America.

Attack Upon U. S.

After all, the United States have been attacked and set upon by three most powerfully armed dictator states, the greatest military power in Europe, the greatest military power in Asia—Japan, Germany and Italy have all declared and are making war upon you, and the quarrel is open, which can only end in their overthrow or yours.

But here in Washington, in these memorable days, I have found an Olympian fortitude which, far from being based upon complacency, is only the mask of an inflexible purpose and the proof of a sure, well-grounded confidence in the final outcome.

We in Britain had the same feeling in our darkest days. We, too, were sure that in the end all would be well. You do not, I am certain, underrate the severity of the ordeal to which you and we have still to be subjected. The forces ranged against us are enormous. They are bitter, ruthless. The wicked men and their factions who have launched their peoples on the path of war and conquest know that they will be called to terrible account if they cannot beat down by force of arms the people they have assailed. (Heavy applause.)

Cruel Art Of War

They will stop at nothing. They have a vast accumulation of war weapons of all kinds. They have highly trained and disciplined armies, navies and air services. They have plans and designs which have long been contrived and matured. They will stop at nothing that violence or treachery can suggest. It is quite true that on our side our resources in man power and materials are far greater than theirs. But only a portion of your resources are as yet mobilized and developed, and we, both of us, have much to learn in the cruel art of war.

We have, therefore, without doubt, a time of tribulation before us. In this same time, some ground will be lost which it will be hard and costly to regain. Many disappointments and unpleasant surprises await us. Many of them will affect us before the full marshalling of our latent [illegible] power can be accomplished.

At Disadvantage

For the best part of twenty years the youth of Britain and America have been taught that war was evil, which is true, and that it would never come again, which has been proved false. For the best part of twenty years the youth of Germany, of Japan and Italy have been taught that aggressive war is the noblest duty of the citizen and that it should be begun as soon as the necessary weapons and organization have been made. We have performed the tasks and duties incident to peace. They have plotted and planned for war. Naturally, this places us in Britain and now places you in the United States at a disadvantage which only time, courage and untiring exertion can correct.

We have indeed to be thankful that so much time has been granted to us. If Germany had tried to invade the British Isles after the French collapse in June, 1940, and if Japan had declared war on the British Empire and the United States at about the same date, no one can say what disaster and agonies might not have been our lot. But now, at the end of December, 1941, our transformation from easy-going peace to total war efficiency has made very great progress.

Broad Flow Of Arms

The broad flow of munitions in Great Britain has already begun. Immense strides have been made in the conversion of American industry to military purposes, and now that the United States is at war, it is possible for orders to be given every day which in a year or eighteen months hence will produce results in war power beyond anything that has been seen or foreseen in the dictator states.

Provided that every effort is made, that nothing is kept back, that the whole manpower, brain power, virility, valor and (civic) virtue of the English-speaking world, with all its galaxy of loyal friends, and associated communities and states, we can be reunited by the simple but supreme God. I think it would be reasonable to hope that the end of 1942 will see us quite definitely in a better postion than we are now. (Heavy applause.) And that the year initiative upon an ample scale (applause). Some people may be startled or momentarily depressed when, like your President, I speak of a long, hard war.

Our people would rather know the truth, somber though it be; and, after all, when we are doing the noblest work in the world, not only defending our hearts and homes but the cause of freedom in every land, the question of whether deliverance comes in 1942 or 1943 or 1944 falls into its proper place in the grand proportions of human history. (Applause.)

Masters Of Our Fate

Sure I am that this day now, we are the masters of our fate; that the task which has been set us is not above our strength; that its pangs and toils are not beyond our endurance, as long as we have faith in our cause and an unconquerable will power, salvation will not be denied us.

In the words of the psalmist, Ye shall not be afraid of evil tidings; his heart is fixed, trusting in the Lord.

Not all the tidings will be evil. On the contrary, mighty strokes of war already have been dealt against the enemy—the glorious defense of their native soils by the Russian armies and people. (Heavy and long applause.) Wounds have been inflicted upon the Nazi tyranny and system which have bitten deep and will fester and inflame not only in the Nazi body, but in the Nazi mind.

The boastful Mussolini has crumpled already. He is now but a lackey and a serf, the merest utensil of his master's will. (Laughter ,applause.) He has inflicted great suffering and wrong upon his own industrious people. He has been stripped of all his African empire. Abyssinia is liberated. Our armies of the East, which were so weak and ill-equipped at the moment of the French desertion, now control all the regions from Teheran to Bengasi, from Aleppo and Cyprus to the confines of Libya. (Applause.)

Offensive In Libya

For many months we devoted ourselves to preparing to take the offensive in Libya. The very considerable battle which has been proceeding there for the last six months in the desert has been most fiercely fought on both sides. Owing to the difficulties of supplies upon the desert flank, we were never able to bring numerically equal forces to bear upon the enemy. Therefore, we had to rely upon superiority in numbers and qualities of tanks and aircraft—British and American.

For the first time aided by these, for the first time, we have fought the enemy with equal weapons. For the first time we have made the Hun feel the sharp edge of those tools with which he has enslaved Europe. The armored forces of the enemy in Cirenaica amounted to about 150,000 men, of whom a third were German. General Auchinlech set out to destroy totally that armored force and I have every reason to believe that his aim will be fully accomplished. (Applause.)

I am so glad to be able to place before you members of the Senate and the House of Representatives at this moment, when you are entering the war, the proof that with proper weapons and proper organization, we are able to beat the life out of the savage Nazis. (Applause.) What Hitler is suffering in Libya is only a sample and a foretaste of what we have got to give him and his accomplices wherever this war should lead us in any quarter of the globe. (Applause.)

Atlantic Life Line

There are good tidings also from the blue water. The life line of supplies which joins our two nations across the ocean, without which all would fail—that life line is flowing steadily and freely in spite of all that the enemy can do. The back of the British Empire, which many thought eighteen months ago was broken and ruined is now incomparably stronger and is growing stronger every month. (Applause.)

Lastly, if you will forgive me for saying so, the best tidings of all, the United States—united as never before and who have drawn the sword for freedom and cast away the scabbard.

All these tremendous steps have led the subjugated peoples of Europe to lift up their heads again in hope; they have put aside forever the shameful temptation of resigning themselves to the conqueror's will. Hope has returned to the hearts of scores of millions of men and women, and with that hope there burns the flame of anger against the brutal, corrupt invaders and still more fiercely burn the fires of hatred and contempt for the filthy Quislings whom he has suborned. (Applause.)

Hour Of Liberation

In a dozen famous ancient states, now prostrate under the Nazi yoke, the masses of the people await the hour of liberation when they, too, will once again be able to play their parts and strike their blows like men. That hour will strike and the people will proclaim that night is past and that dawn has come.

The onslaught upon us, so long and so secretly planned by Japan, has presented both our countries with grievous problems for which we could not be fully prepared. If people asked me, and they have a right to ask me in England, "Why is it that you have not got an ample equipment of modern aircraft and army weapons of all kinds in Malaya and in the East Indies," I can only point to the victory General Auchinleck has gained in the Libyan campaign. Had he diverted and dispersed our gradually growing resources between Libya and Malaya, we should have been found wanting in both theaters.

If the United States has been found at a disadvantage at various points in the Pacific Ocean, we know well that that is to no small extent because of the aid which you have been giving to us in munitions for the defense of the British Isles and for the Libyan campaign, and above all, because of your help in the Battle of the Atlantic, upon which all depends and which has in consequence been successfully and prosperously maintained.

Much Better

Of course, it would have been much better, I freely admit, if we had enough resources of all kinds to be at full strength at all threatened points; but considering how slowly and reluctantly we brought ourselves to large-scale preparations today, and how long these preparations take, we had no right to expect to be in such a fortunate position.

The choice of how to dispose of our hitherto limited resources had to be made by Britain in time of war and by the United States in time of peace, and I believe that history will pronounce that upon the whole—and it is upon the whole that these matters must be judged—the choice made was right.

Now that we are together, now that we are linked in a righteous comradeship of arms, now that our two considerable nations, each in perfect unity, have joined all their life energies in a common resolve, you will see milestones upon which a steady light will [illegible]

Astonished At Japan

Many people have been astonished that Japan, in a single day, has made the British Empire.

We all wonder why, if this dark design against the United States and sign, with its laborious and intricate preparation, had been so long filling their secret mind, they did not choose our moment of weakness eighteen months ago. But, quite dispassionately, in spite of the losses we have suffered and the further punishment we will have to take, it certainly appears an irrational act. It, of course, only proves it correct to assume that they have made very careful calculations and think they see their way through; nevertheless, there may be another explanation.

We know that for many years past the policy of Japan has been dominated by secret societies and junior officers of the army and navy who have enforced their will upon successive Japanese Cabinets and Parliament by the assassination of any Japanese statesmen who opposed or who did not sufficiently further their aggressive policies. It may be that these societies, dazzled and dizzy with their own schemes of aggression and the prospect of early victory, have forced their country into war against its better judgment. They have certainly embarked upon a very considerable undertaking. (Laughter.)

Stakes Are Enormous

After the outbreak at Pearl Harbor and the Pacific islands, in the Philippines, in Malaya, and the Dutch East Indies, they must now know that the stakes for which they decided to play are enormous. When we look at the resources of the United States and the British Empire compared to those of Japan, when we remember those of China, which have for so long valiantly withstood invasion of tyranny (great and long applause, cheers) and when also we observe the Russian menace which hangs over Japan, it becomes still more difficult to reconcile Japanese action with prudence or even sanity.

What kind of people do they think we are?

Is it possible they do not realize that we shall never cease to persevere against them until they have been taught a lesson which they and the world will never forget? (Great cheering, long applause.)

Members of the Senate and members of the House of Representatives: I'll turn for one moment more from the turmoil and convulsions of the present to the broader spaces of the future. Here we are together, facing a group of mighty foes who seek our ruin. Here we are together, defending all that to free men is dear.

Catastrophe Of War

Twice in a single generation the catastrophe of world war has fallen upon us. Twice in our lifetime has the long arm of fate reached out across the ocean to bring the United States into the forefront of the battle. If we had kept together after the last war, if we had taken common measures for our safety, this renewal of the curse need never have fallen upon us. (Applause.)

Do we not owe it to ourselves, to our children, to tormented mankind, to make sure that these catastrophes do not engulf us for the third time? t has been proved that pestilences may break out in the Old World which carry their destructive ravages into the New World, from which, once they are afoot, the New World cannot escape.

Duty and prudence alike demand, first, that the germ centers of hatred and revenge should be constantly and vigilantly served and treated in good time and that an adequate organization should be set up to make sure that the pestilence can be controlled at its earliest beginnings, before it spreads and rages throughout the entire earth. (Applause.)

Would Have Been Easy

Five or six years ago, it would have been easy, without shedding a drop of blood, for the United States and Great Britain to have insisted on the fulfillment of the disarmament clauses of the treaties which Germany signed after the Great War, and that also would have been the opportunity for assuring to the Germans those materials, those raw materials, which we declared in the Atlantic Charter should not be denied to any nation, victor or vanquished. The chance has passed, it is gone. Prodigious hammer strokes have been needed to bring us together today.

If you will allow me to use other language I will say that he must, indeed, have a blind soul who cannot see that some great purpose and design is being worked out here below, for which we have the honor to be the faithful servant. It is not given to us to peer into the mysteries of the future, yet I avow my hope and faith in the day inviolate, when the British and American peoples will, for their own safety and for the good of all, walk together [illegible] jesty, in justice and in peace. (applause.)

Roosevelt Calls War, Supply Parleys

DEC 27 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 26 — President Roosevelt arranged meetings today witn British and American supply, military and naval chieftains to continue planning war strategy as Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada came to join Prime Minister Churchill in the Anglo-American conferences.

Prime Minister King was due here in the early afternoon, and was to go to the White House immediately. The Cabinet had a regular meeting scheduled at about the time King was expected.

The Military Conferees

The White House military conference was to have these participants, in addition to the President and Churchill:

Gen. George C. Marshall, United States army chief of staff; Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the army air forces; Admiral Harold R. Stark, naval operations chief; Admiral Ernest J. King, United States fleet commander; Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of Supply; Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, commander of the British fleet; Gen. Sir John Dill, former chief of the imperial staff; Air Marshal Sir Charles Portal, and Harry L. Hopkns, American lend-lease supervisor.

The Supply Conferees

The supply conference was set an hour before the military one. Lord Beaverbrook was the only English representative scheduled to participate in this meeting with the President.

United States participants were to be: Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, chairman of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board; William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management; Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War; Robert A. Lovett, Assistant Secretary of War for Air; Donald Nelson, executive director of SPAB and OPM priorities chief; Leon Henderson, director of civilian supply; James V. Forrestal, Under Secretary of the Navy; Hopkins, and William L. Batt, chief of the OPM materials division.

Other Allies Posted

Asked whether Mackenzie King would stay at the White House while in Washington, Press Secretary Stephen Early said he doubted this because there was "standing room only" in the executive mansion right now.

Early said that although Russia, China, the Netherlands and other nations arrayed against the Axis had not yet formally taken part in the Roosevelt-Churchill discussions on unified action, diplomatic representatives of those countries were being kept informed of the progress of the talks to date.

Roosevelt Sees Litvinoff

Maxim Litvinoff, the Russian Ambassador, was received by the Chief Executive this morning, to hear what had taken place in the Anglo-American conferences.

Representatives of all the twenty-one American republics have been invited to the White House tomorrow, for the purpose of being apprised of the conferences thus far held. Later tomorrow the diplomatic representatives of China, the Dutch East Indies, Australia and New Zealand will be received by the President for a joint conference.

Sector Dwindles To Artillery Duel

Japanese Pressure Increases In Area Southeast Of Manila

DEC 27 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 26 — American-Filipino forces have fallen back twenty miles or more from the Lingayen Gulf coast north of Manila, the War Department indicated tonight in announcing a new defense position along the Agno river.

On this fighting front one hundred air miles north of the Philippine capital, action dwindled to heavy artillery duelling, a communique said.

Meanwhile, enemy pressure was reported to be increasing fifty-five to seventy-five miles southeast of Manila, where the Japanese effected a second landing from the sea.

Jap Planes Active

The communique, outlining developments in the fight for the Philippines up to 5 P. M. EST, added that hostile aircraft were particularly active during the preceding twenty-four hours.

Two successive communiques suggested that a major battle was shaping up north of Manila. An earlier report said Gen. Douglas MacArthur had advised that he had reorganized and strengthened the position held by his troops in the vicinity of Lingayen Gulf—presumably the new Agno river line.

Natural Defense Barrier

The Agno, a slow-moving stream draining the upper end of the great central valley extending north of the capital, wanders in a general southwestward direction across Pangasinan province before turning northward to empty into Lingayen Gulf.

Its course across the Manila north railway and the highways that parallel the railroad line make the river a natural barrier to further advances southward.

Japs In Fierce Attack From Southern Luzon

By R. P. Cronin, Jr.

Manila, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Japanese invaders struck today with heavy force on the main southern Luzon front, where a major tank battle raged inconclusively with heavy losses to both sides in the Lamon Bay region, but limited their offensive action in the more vital northern Lingayen Gulf sector to strong and concentrated artillery fire.

The late afternoon communique from headquarters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur made no mention of fresh Japanese landings or of any fresh advance; a United States Army spokesman summed up that fighting was "going well" for the American-Philippine forces in all sectors.

"We Will Fight To The Last Man"

From Manila itself, now declared an open city by General MacArthur, Francis B. Sayre, United States High Commissioner, and President Manuel Quezon prepared to remove their offices and carry on elsewhere, but in seven words Sayre made the pledge and challenge that typified the determination of the defenders:

"We will fight to the last man."

The decision to remove the civilian administration and all combatant military installations from Manila, to spare the city itself from any possible legitimate attack, was accompanied by assurances from a United States Army spokesman that this would not in any way lessen the power of the counter-blows falling upon the Japanese.

Just As Vigorously

On the contrary, he said, fighting "will continue as vigorously or more vigorously than at present."

Manila's anti-aircraft batteries were dismounted; military stores that could not be removed were destroyed; the last soldier and sailor left the city.

Japanese warplanes were busy over the Manila area all during the day, apparently striking at military bases near the city, but the people glanced only casually at them.

During the fifth alarm of the day, seventeen Japanese planes in two waves flew over the city after dropping bombs northwest of Manila and in the bay area. Apparently they were endeavoring to test the declaration that Manila is not now defended. No bombs were dropped in the city itself.

Leaflets Dropped

However, Manilans by 6.30 P. M. had spent five out of the past eight hours under air raid alarm and had picked up numerous leaflets dropped by the planes, addressed to Philippine soldiers, which said: "Dear friends: Our aim is to destroy American force. We have no quarrel with you. Are we not all of the Far East? Drop your guns, return home to your loved ones."

One group of Filipinos on a downtown corner read the leaflets derisively and gave the familiar Tagalog grunt of disgust.

In the south of Luzon, meantime, mining companies had exploded all magazines and burned many fuel stores and bus lines had decommissioned their vehicles in order to delay the Japanese advance from Legaspi.

"Very Heavy Pressure"

General MacArthur's afternoon communique thus described the situation:

"There has been very heavy pressure by the enemy on the southeastern front. (This is in the region of Lamon Bay, where Japanese beachheads had been established from fifty-five to seventy-five miles below Manila.) Tank battling on that front has resulted in heavy casualties on both sides.

"On the northern (Lingayen) front, the enemy has confined himself to heavy and concentrated artillery fire.

"Air activities over Manila have been very brisk for the last sixteen hours."

No New Landing

(In Washington the War Department reported Friday that General MacArthur had reorganized and strengthened his positions in the Lingayen Gulf area and that repeated enemy assaults there had been beaten off. Heavy Japanese reinforcements in that area were indicated.

Brisk fighting was reported from other Luzon fronts.

(The Navy Department meanwhile announced that it had confirmed press reports of submarine successes for the United States Asiatic fleet on Christmas Day. Sunk without question were an enemy transport and a mine sweeper; probably sunk were an additional transport and a seaplane tender.)

Cheering word came during the day that a Washington announcement that Japanese troops had landed near Nasugbu, on Southwestern Luzon at a point only 15 miles south of the entrance to Manila Bay, had proved incorrect.

An Army spokesman stated that a special patrol had checked the situation and had sighted no enemy troops.

Two Filipinos who escaped from the Japanese in the Legaspi region in extreme Southeastern Luzon arrived here today with word that the invading troops in that sector were all very young, mostly about 18, and poorly dressed. Similar reports concerning the youthfulness and apparently poor equipment of the Japanese had been received from the Lingayen Front.

Twice during Christmas Day Japanese warplanes visited Manila. The first wave, of 27, circled over the the city and bay area many times but dropped no bombs. Instead, they dropped propaganda leaflets alleging: "You are isolated. It is useless to resist."

The second wave, of nine planes, loosed bombs on the port area, damaged a few buildings and started fires. The piers, however, were unhit and casualties were light.

The Manila press estimated that more than 100 persons had been killed in Japanese air raids on provincial towns, the heaviest casualties having been caused at San Pablo, Laguna province.

Artillery Repulses Luzon Invaders in North---Pressure Heavier South of Capital.

DEC 27 1941

Los Angeles, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The Japanese-controlled radio at Saigon said in a broadcast today that Japanese military leaders have recognized Manila as an open city since yesterday.

By R. A. Cronin, Jr.

Manila, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—A two-way Japanese assault on Manila was intensified, with an artillery fight northwest of the capital and a tank battle to the southeast where Japanese pressure was increased and casualties were heavy, an army communique declared late today.

The war bulletin was the last issued from the United States armed forces of the Far East headquarters here before all staff officers left Manila, declared officially to be an open city to spare its residents further bombardment.

Japanese aerial activity over the city continued through most of the day, with one siren-sounded alarm after another. The Japanese bombers appeared, however, to be striking beyond the city itself, at military bases near by. Suburban Nichols Air Field was one objective.

Two waves of Japanese planes, seventeen in all, cruised over this open city for more than an hour beginning at 5:20 P. M. in Manila's fifth air raid alarm of the day.

Some bombs were dropped northwest of the city and in the Manila Bay area, but for the most part the planes, flying low, appeared bent on observation to test Gen. MacArthur's announcement that Manila itself now is not a military objective.

The army communique described aerial activity over the capital during the preceding sixteen hours as very brisk.

Troops Move Out of Manila.

All soldiers and sailors had been moved from Manila by this afternoon in accordance with the announcement that the city was not defended. Anti-aircraft batteries were dismounted and unmovable military stores destroyed.

For the first time since the war started no tanks or other motorized equipment moved through the city streets.

The final war bulletin from the Manila headquarters said that there has been very heavy pressure by the enemy on the southeastern front where the Japanese were attacking toward Manila from their Lamon Bay beachheads fifty-five to seventy-five miles from the capital.

"Tank battling on that front," the communique said, "has resulted in heavy casualties on both sides."

It repeated an earlier war bulletin that enemy action on the northern front, some 110 miles from Manila, was largely heavy and concentrated artillery fire.

Heavy Provincial Toll.

An army spokesman said investigation had disclosed that there had been no Japanese landing at Nasugbu, only fifteen miles south of the entrance to Manila Bay, as reported earlier in Washington.

He added that a special patrol sent to check the report said no troops were sighted in that section.

Manila newspapers, meanwhile, reported that more than 100 persons had been killed in Japanese air raids on provincial towns, with the heaviest toll at San Pablo, Laguna province, south of Manila. Santa Cruz and Los Banos, Laguna province, also were said to have been bombed heavily, along with the towns in Nueva Ecija and Turlac provinces north of the capital.

[The War Department in Washington issued a communique announcing the repulse of repeated enemy assaults near the Lingayen Gulf and brisk fighting elsewhere on Luzon, with heavy enemy air activity.]

On the Southern front, mining companies exploded all magazines and bus lines decommissioned vehicles in Camarines Norte Province in order to delay the Japanese northward advance from Legaspi. Numerous mining concerns destroyed fuel depoihts as well as their stores of explosives.

'We Will Fight to the Last Man.'

Despite the strength of the Japanese attacks the army declared the fighting was going well in all sectors. Francis B. Sayre, United States High Commissioner, pledged that we will fight to the last man.

An hour after General MacArthur, commander of the Far Eastern Army of the United States, officially proclaimed Manila an open city to spare the metropolitan area from the possible ravages of attacks either in the air or on the ground," the air raid sirens screamed.

However, no enemy planes appeared over the city proper and water front observers said the Japanese might be concentrating against the Corregidor Island fortress at the entrance to Manila Bay.

This belief was based on the fact that waves of Japanese planes, after circling over the city, flew to the west above Manila Bay. One wave dropped bombs in the direction of Nichols Airport, on the outskirts of Manila.

Meanwhile, the Army declared that fighting was "going well" on all fronts.

The U. S. High Commissioner, Francis B. Sayre, defied the Japanese with the statement that "we will fight to the last man."

General MacArthur in a proclamation dated two days ago—Dec. 24—said Manila was declared an open city "without the characteristics of a military objective."

In one mid-morning raid the Japanese bombers concentrated on a Government pier in the harbor, but most of their bombs fell in the water. One, striking the edge of the pier, killed at least two workers. A freighter tied up at the pier was not damaged.

Some oil stores were set afire in another raid near the city. Hardest hit were installations of the Standard Vacuum Oil Company. Flaming oil spread onto the Pasig River.

A spokesman for the United States Army said this action would not affect the course of the war.

DEC 27 1941

Text of Proclamation.

The text of Gen. MacArthur's proclamation follows:

"In order to spare the metropolitan area from the possible ravages of attack either in the air or on the ground, Manila is hereby declared an open city with the characteristics of a military objective.

"In order that no excuse may be given for a possible mistake, the American High Commissioner, the Commonwealth Government and all combatant military installations will be withdrawn from its environs as rapidly as possible.

"The municipal government will continue to function, with its police powers re-enforced by constabulary and troops so the normal protection of life and property may be preserved.

Business As Usual.

"Citizens are requested to maintain obedience to the constituted authorities and continue the normal process of business."

The spokesman disclosed that American troops in the field are becoming tough.

"The situation in general is better than heretofore," the spokesman said, "as our troops are becoming hardened to combat."

A co[illegible] from headquarters of the United States Armed Forces of the Far East said:

"Action on the northern lines is confined to artillery dueling. On the southeastern front from Atimonan to Mauban (on Lamon Bay) enemy pressure is increasing. The enemy air force is very active."

As soon as the proclamation was issued Commissioner Sayre said that he was transferring his office outside Manila and added: "We will fight to the last man. We know our fight is America's fight. America's help is sure. There can be no shadow of question as to the ultimate victory."

Quezon Leaves City.

President Manuel Quezon announced that he was leaving Manila on the advice of Gen. MacArthur, and would administer affairs of the civil government from the outside.

Japanese planes flew over Manila today at approximately 10,000 feet without drawing anti-aircraft fire. All guns apparently had been removed.

Baguio May Be Lost.

Earlier it was reported the Japanese driving southward from Aparri, on the northern coast of Luzon, had reached Tuguegarao, fifty miles inland, and that it was planned to declare the summer capital of Baguio an unfortified and open city.

Observers said that Baguio might already have been occupied by Japanese driving across the mountains from the Lingayen landing zone on the west coast.

At 8 A. M., the army spokesman declared: "Our line is still holding on both the north and south fronts, although Japanese pressure is continuing. No additional landings have been reported."

[Under normal procedure when a capital is declared an open city, the government, military forces and war industries are removed and civil officers are empowered to negotiate with the invaders if they should break through outlying defenses.]

Navy Confirms Sinkings Reports

DEC 27 1941

By the Associated Press.

Washington, Dec. 26—The navy announced today the Asiatic fleet had sunk one enemy transport and a mine sweeper and probably an additional transport and seaplane tender.

The information, the Navy Department said in a communique, came in a dispatch from Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the Asiatic fleet.

(Editor's Note—Hart, in an interview yesterday at Manila, told of the sinkings referred to today in the navy's communique.)

Operations Pushed

"Press reports of United States submarine activities in the Far East on Christmas Day are confirmed" the communique said.

Naval operations against enemy submarines are being vigorously prosecuted in the eastern Pacific, it added.

The text of the communique, No. 18, and covering the naval situation based on reports received up to 9 A. M., E. S. T.:

"Far East—Press reports of United States submarine activities in the Far East on Christmas Day are confirmed. A dispatch from Admiral Hart states that one enemy transport and one mine sweeper have been sunk. An additional transport and one seaplane tender are probably sunk.

"Declared Open City"

"Manila has been declared an open city as defined in the Hague convention (IV) of 1907, annex, Article 25. Our forces have complied with the stipulations of that convention.

"Central Pacific—Enemy reports that 3,000 naval and marine personnel were engaged in the defense of Wake Island are incorrect. The total strength of the garrison was less than 400 officers and men. There were approximately 1,000 civilians engaged in construction work on the island which may account for the enemy statement that 1,400 prisoners were captured.

"Eastern Pacific — Naval operations against enemy submarines are being vigorously prosecuted.

"There is nothing to report from other areas."

Propaganda: U. S. Philippine Fleet Destroyed

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—The German radio today broadcast an assertion attributed to Japanese imperial headquarters that all American naval units in Philippine waters had been destroyed.

The statement said Japanese naval and air forces had wiped out all vessels sent to the Philippines from the mainland (continental United States) as well as those stationed in the islands originally.

There was no information available to support such Japanese claims and the Berlin rendition of Tokio's statement offered no immediate details. This is a familiar Axis propaganda technique.

Citizens of Manila Fire at Jap Flyers With Own Weapons

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Dec. 26.—Many people in Manila cut loose at Japanese flyers today with their own individual anti-aircraft guns—rifles and pistols.

With Japanese planes over the city in waves, a number of persons on the street fired at them with light arms. The individual type of anti-aircraft fire was ineffective.

About two hours later the Philippine capital was formally declared to be an open city.

Japs Sending Waves Of Boys to Death

By CLARK LEE

Manila, Dec. 26 (AP).—Masses of Japanese troops—some of them boys of 15 to 18 years old and poorly equipped with .25 caliber guns—are dying in attacks on the Lingayen front as if simply accepting the inevitable.

An American officer who commanded one of the beach defenses told me there was "no hysterical exaltation" in the charge on the shore last Monday, when the major invasion began.

"They didn't charge, but crouched forward just a little, lifting their knees high in a sort of imitation goose step," he said.

"They kept coming forward in pairs, one directly behind the other. They were coming on to die and many of them did.

"Many times one of our heavy machine-gun or rifle bullets killed two men at once.

"When hit, they just threw up their hands and fell backward as if accepting an inevitable fate.

"The invaders carried .25 caliber rifles and about one-fourth of them had .25 caliber sub-machine guns."

The commander of the landing section said the .25 caliber bullet would not kill a man unless it struck a vital spot.

The battle in the Lingayen area started at 2 A. M. with an artillery duel between Japanese warships and American shore guns.

Opposing the Japanese were Americans and young Filipino troops who are being welded into a first class fighting force.

I spent four days in and around the fighting front, including a two-day hike over mountain trails after the Japanese cut the main road southward, forcing me to abandon and burn my automobile.

Part of the Japanese forces turned southward, and by Wednesday night, when I left the foremost area, they had reached Pozorrubio and Binalonan on the main highway to Manila.

Reporter Has Close Calls In Visit To Luzon Front

Editor's Note—Clark Lee, bearded and muddy, walked into the Associated Press office in Manila on Christmas night, grabbed a typewriter and worte a story.

Lee, a native of Oakland, Calif., a newspaperman since his college days, an Associated Press reporter since 1929, wrote the first detailed, eye-witness account of the Japanese invasion along Lingayen Gulf, a significant report on the condition, equipment and temper of the invaders.

But back of this report is another story — Lee's personal experiences at and near the front in gathering the story of military operations. These experiences were related to a co-worker, Russell Brines.

By RUSSELL BRINES

Manila, Dec. 26 (AP)—Big, genial Clark Lee was a mass of mud. Even his four-day growth of beard was matted.

Four days earlier when he departed for the Lingayen battlefront he was dressed in immaculate whites. Now he wore a borrowed khaki shirt and denim trousers. He had no socks. Ditches had served him as air raid shelters after repeated Japanese air attacks on his car.

He looked every inch a dramatic story, and he had one — a yarn of personal experiences to top that of any newspaperman in the Philippines in this war.

Japanese bombs were a constant overtone in his recital. Dozens of times Lee and two friends had to abandon their car in the middle of the road near the battle front and dive for cover on the way out.

On their way back to Manila, the party reached the mountains just as a Japanese column began marching up the back mountain roads. Through the darkness, Lee and his companions followed a winding road leading down the other side of the mountain to the Manila highway.

They almost had reached the bottom, in a narrow canyon, when suddenly they found themselves in the midst of a skirmish between several truckloads of Filipino soldiers and a squad of assailants hidden in the darkness across the canyon.

Bullets splattered overhead as Lee's car tried to get through behind the trucks. The fighting went on for a long time before Lee quit his vantage point and decided to try to reach Baguio. But both roads leading there were blocked.

The next morning Lee and his friends followed a long caravan of Americans and Filipinos heading into the rugged mountains. At the end of a dirt road they set fire to their car in order to keep it out of the hands of the Japanese, and then struck off on a series of narrow trails into wild, "indescribably beautiful" country.

But Japanese bombers gave them a sendoff.

"I jumped behind a rock, seeking shelter from the shrapnel—and found myself suspended over the edge of a 200-foot precipice," said Lee. "It was all right, because I had a good hold on the rock. But it was a funny feeling to be hanging there."

Using Igorot native boys as guides, they followed the mountain trails that whole day, and toward dusk reached a small village. The village headman took one look at the strange visitors, disappeared, then returned in what he apparently considered was the proper dress—three silk shirts and a coat, despite the heat, but below the waist only a native loin cloth.

Lee and his friends spent that night in the headman's house, a thatched, two-story structure set up on stilts. The windows in their room were closed tightly, and there was no light, for the headman explained that even in this remote region blackouts were enforced.

Later Lee, who had gone downstairs for a breath of air, met a Belgian priest who had spent many years alone among the tribesmen.

"Be careful," he warned. "These people suspect you; they think you're spies sent here to bring them an air raid. Don't show any light—and you'd better hide if any planes should come over."

After taking a look at the wicked bolos (knives) which all the Igorots carry, the party spent an apprehensive night, imagining they heard plane motors every time the wind whooshed overhead. But no planes appeared, and in the morning even the bolos looked less ominous.

The headman supplied a guide this time, who took the party on a trail that led first along the brink of a mountain, where the agility of a mountain goat came in handy, then dropped down to a swiftly-flowing river. For "miles and miles" they followed this canyon, fording the river at least 16 times — taking their shoes and socks off the first few times, but finally just sloshing through the water without bothering to remove them.

At dusk the party reached a small lowland town where, after showing their credentials to the suspicious police, they were allowed to catch a ride on a slow-moving, horse-drawn cart that formed part of a column.

Suddenly there was a shattering explosion. The car just ahead of Lee's was blown up by a land mine.

By now Lee and his mates were sure they had exhausted their allotment of close shaves. More at ease, they hopped an Army truck which took them to a main railway center, and there they boarded a train for Manila the next morning.

Ordinarily this is a pleasant trip through the rice paddies. But this time their train was halted six times as low-circling Japanese bombers appeared overhead. Once they sat in on a bitter duel between an anti-aircraft battery and a formation of 27 Japanese bombers.

Finally safe in Manila, Lee learned that 15 minutes after he had boarded the train for the capital the station from which it departed was smashed by the Japanese, with 21 dead and scores wounded.

Responsibility For "Untoward Incidents" Is Placed On English

DEC 27 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Dec. 26 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—The Japanese completed the occupation of the fallen British fortress of Hongkong at 11 A. M. today, the official news agency Domei announced, and the surviving British garrison—estimated here to number 6,000 men—was ordered to stack arms.

Japanese demands accepted by the defenders provided that "a certain number" of Japanese troops would be stationed in Hongkong for what was described as maintaining order; that the British must be fully responsible for the prevention of "untoward incidents" and that further details of the surrender would be worked out later.

White Flag Raised Atop Hill

The final attack on Hongkong was at 5.50 P. M. yesterday—a bombing assault upon the Canadian, British and Indian defenders.

Domei asserted that at 5 o'clock four British officers stood atop a Hongkong hill with a white flag and were led to Japanese headquarters.

They had no authority to negotiate, it was added, and shortly after 5.30 P. M. the British Governor, Sir Mark Young, and the British commander, General Maltby, were taken across the strait to the mainland to negotiate in the Peninsula Hotel at Kowloon.

Can Concentrate On China Now

Unconditional surrender by the British was announced by a Japanese staff officer at 7.05 A. M.

Domei announced that the Japanese in taking Hongkong had shown "almost unbelievable bravery" and said that the Japanese forces now were able to "concentrate more" on the Chinese armies.

It was stated that a detachment of swimming soldiers, trained by two Olympic swimmers, had aided in capturing Hongkong. They swam across form the Kowloon mainland to the island, it was asserted, and exploded British mines by rifle fire, thus enabling Japanese transports to cross safely.

ROME, Dec. 26 (Official broadcast recorded by AP)—The Stefani news agency reported tonight from Tokio that the Japanese had announced occupation of Baguio, in Northern Luzon, the summer capital of the Philippines.

Crown Colony Yields After 11-Day Fight—Day-to-day Report Given.

Tokio, Dec. 26 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—The remnants of the British imperial garrison at Hongkong, estimated at 6,000 men, were reported to have been ordered to stack arms by noon today in conformity with yesterday's surrender to Japanese siege assault. The disarming got swiftly under way at various points of the now-occupied British Crown Colony following the British command's formal acceptance early this morning of demands presented by representatives of the Japanese Army and Navy.

The Japanese demands provided:

1. Stationing of a certain number of Japanese troops for maintenance of order.

2. British assumption of full responsibility for cessation of hostilities and prevention of untoward incidents.

3. That decisions on further details of the British surrender should be made later.

Meanwhile, Seki Yano, Japanese Consul-General at Hongkong, together with twenty-two other Japanese nationals, including members of the consular staff interned by British authorities since the start of the Anglo-Japanese conflict, have been freed. Escorted by a British official, Japanese Army and Navy representatives found part of the consular staff at the Consulate-General and other Japanese, including Yano, living in a tent camp on Stanley Peninsula—all unharmed.

Bombs Dumped on Island.

It was learned, meanwhile, that the final Japanese military action against Hongkong was at 5:50 P. M. (3:50 A. M., Eastern standard time) on Thursday, when Japanese bombers dumped their last load of bombs on the besieged British troops—Canadians, Britons and Indians. The British surrender came at 5:50 P. M.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, said that a fifteen-minute parley of Japanese authorities late yesterday with Sir Mark Young, Governor of Hongkong, led to an unconditional surrender.

The Governor met Lieut.-Col. Tokuchi Tada of the Japanese staff at the Peninsula Hotel, Kowloon. He was quoted as saying: "I am here to become a prisoner by ordering the entire British forces to cease all resistance." He remained at the hotel overnight under Japanese guard.

Unconditional Surrender.

Domei said that it was an unconditional surrender and told this story of Hongkong's last hours under the British flag:

At 4:30 P. M., Christmas Day, the Japanese attacking one hill found that the British had ceased firing and at 5 o'clock four British officers were seen on top of the hill with a white flag. These men were led to headquarters, where they said they represented the Governor, but since they had no authority to negotiate, the Japanese requested that the Governor, Sir Mark Young, and the British commander, Gen. Maltby, appear before the Japanese lines at 5:30 P. M.

A short time later, the Governor, commander and four staff officers presented themselves and were taken across the strait to the mainland to talk in the Peninsula Hotel, at Kowloon.

At 7:05 P. M., a Japanese staff officer announced the unconditional surrender of the British garrison. Gen. Maltby returned to Hongkong to prevent any further hostilities and Sir Mark remained at the hotel.

(DNB, German news agency, reported in a dispatch from Tokyo that the full British strength at Hongkong had been 24,000 troops—13,000 regular army forces, "mostly Indians," 2,000 well-equipped Canadians who arrived as reinforcements, 4,000 armed police and 5,000 volunteers.)

Domei was quoted as reporting that the Japanese navy sank or totally disabled a British destroyer, submarine, gunboat and six torpedo boats during the attack on Hongkong. It added that Japanese marines occupying Stonecutter Island seized forty to fifty vessels and quantities of ammunition after surrender of the British garrison.

Jap Navy Claims Vast Destruction Of Ships, Planes

Tokyo, Saturday, Dec. 27 (Official Broadcast Recorded By AP)—Navy Minister Shigetaro Shimada told the Japense Diet today that the Japanese Navy had sunk nine British destroyers and damaged four in the Hongkong area and asserted the Navy had air and sea control over "four oceans."

He asserted British and American naval losses included seven battleships sunk, three heavily damaged and one less seriously damaged; two cruisers sunk and six damaged; a destroyer sunk and four damaged; nine submarines, nine gunboats, seven torpedoboats and 16 merchantment sunk, and 50 captured.

He said Japanese naval aircraft in the Philippine fighting had destroyed 338 United States planes, and that total British and American plane losses in the air were 803.

Japanese losses he listed as three destroyers and a minesweeper sunk, five "special" submarines missing, a cruiser and a minesweeper damaged, and 52 planes destroyed.

He claimed that aviation and military facilities at Johnston, Palmyra, Wake and Baker Islands had been almost destroyed by the Japanese Navy.

Premier Tojo, addressing the Diet in his capacity as War Minister, asserted the Japanese forces at Davao in the Philippines had freed 18,000 Japanese nationals who had been imprisoned.

He said American forces on the island of Mindanao had killed 48 Japanese civilians.

Swimming Japs Aided in Capture Of Hong Kong

DEC 27 1941

By the Associated Press

TOKIO, Dec. 26 (Official Broadcast).—A special detachment of "swimming soldiers" who had been trained by two Olympic games point-scorers helped prepare the way for the Japanese capture of the British island stronghold of Hong Kong, it was revealed today.

The members of this newly-formed troop swam across the narrow waterway between the Kowloon mainland and the island, located British mines and exploded them by rifle-fire, thus enabling the Japanese troop transports to cross in safety.

The soldiers were trained by Reizo Koike and Saubro Ito. Koike took second place back of a teammate in the 200-meter breaststroke championship at the 1932 Olympic games at Los Angeles and was third in the same event at Berlin in 1936. Ito finished fifth in the latter race.

Americans Go To Yule Services

Hongkong, Dec. 25 (Delayed A.P.)—The American colony here, headed by Consul General Addison Southard, attended Christmas services today in battered churches and later had luncheon at the American Club despite the thud of Japanese shells.

(Hongkong surrendered a few hours after this dispatch was filed.)

All Americans were reported safe with the exception of one missing person.

Southard's Victoria Peak residence has been demolished, but the morale of both civilians and soldiers here is excellent.

Were 396 There.

London, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—A census of Hongkong taken in March, 1941, listed 396 Americans in that city. Later withdrawals have somewhat reduced that figure. The March census, taken for air raid precaution purposes, showed that there were 7,982 British, 1,420,629 Chinese, 7,379 Indians, 2,922 Portuguese and 2,094 other nationalities in the city.

Hongkong Loss Heavy One, London Admits

DEC 27 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 26—The Christmas day surrender of Hongkong was a considerable strategic triumph for the Japanese, informed sources conceded today.

Word that the garrison's remnants, with only meager water supplies left, had finally yielded was received almost thankfully by most Britons. They had been expecting the capitulation.

There still were no details on Hongkong's last hours under the Union Jack.

Fuel, Supply And Repair Base

Informed sources said these advantages were gained by the Japanese in seizing the century-old British bastion:

1. An important refueling, supply, and repair base halfway between Japan and the coveted riches of British Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies.

2. Elimination of Britain's foothold on the China coast, which would have served eventually as an Allied springboard for an attempt to oust the Japanese from the entire Canton river area and thus open a new supply route to the Chungking regime.

Useful Against Philippines

3. Absolute domination of the mouth of the Canton river, and thus security from the rear if the Japanese decide to start a new thrust northward against the Chinese.

4. Valuable additional facilities for dispatching more landing forces to the Philippines. Manila is only 600 miles from Hongkong.

Brooklyn Man Believed Killed In Hongkong

DEC 27 1941

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—William Kailey, of Brooklyn, has been missing in Hongkong for several days, and is believed dead, the State Department reported tonight.

News of Kailey's disappearance and probable death was received in a cablegram from the American consul general at Hongkong, who several days ago reported the death of another American, Miss Florence Webb, from wounds inflicted by shellfire.

1,000 Americans In Hongkong

In today's message the consul general estimated that there are in Hongkong about 1,000 American citizens and 200 Filipinos. He said that during the twenty-four hours preceding noon of Christmas Day there had been no other reports of death or injury to Americans. In a previous message he mentioned that living conditions in Hongkong had become "very dangerous."

The State Department announced that the most recent reports received here through the Swiss Government from its representatives in Tokyo said that officials of the United States Government in Japan and Japanese-occupied lands in China are safe and well.

Other Americans In Far East

In addition to the Americans in Hongkong, the State Department disclosed, there are about 1,300 American citizens and 700 Philippine citizens in Burma, British Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies.

The American consulate in Rangoon reported December 21 there were 492 American citizens in Burma, including a group of thirty Americans who had recently been evacuated from Thailand.

Day-to-Day Report.

London, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Rioting among the native population preceded the invasion of Hongkong Island, the British War Office disclosed tonight in a day-to-day story of the last days of the crown colony.

The recapitulation covered three weeks of fighting, and it was a graphic if matter-of-fact record of a brave but hopeless defense.

"December 13," said the narrative, "was a difficult day. Shelling increased in intensity and accuracy, and various guns and searchlights were put out of action.

"The enemy appeared to be collecting launches and junks in Kowloon and some activity was observed on Lamma Island. The difficulty with the civilian population is reported grave, though under control.

"On the 14th of December there was systematic shelling by the enemy and this was extremely accurate when directed against the old well-known batteries. Bomb damage was negligible. The morale of the civilian population is still shaky owing to difficulties over distribution of rice. But otherwise control has improved.

"16th December: Aerial bombing and artillery shelling on an increased scale with a high standard of accuracy on military objectives.

Plight Realized.

By December 19, when the invasion of the island was well started, the civilian population was reported surprisingly calm. But the day's entry added: "The troops are growing very tired and problems of supply and communication are difficult."

"22d December—The enemy landed further troops on the northeast and attacked continuously. A counter attack on the 21st December toward Ty Tam Tak had failed, although a certain number of the enemy was killed at the cost of about 100 Canadian casualties. A counter-attack by a company of Winnipeg grenadiers to retake Wong Nei Chang gap also failed in the face of concentrated mortar and light machine-gun fire which inflicted heavy casualties.

"23rd December—For 24 hours ending at 5 P. M. the enemy had kept up incessant attacks accompanied by intensive bombardments from the air and by mortars and artillery.

"It was impossible to conceal the fact that the situation had become exceedingly grave. The troops who have been fighting continuously for many days were tired out but their spirits remained high, for they realized that with every day of their resistance, so much was gained for the allied cause. But the food and water supply was desperate, for the reservoirs and depots were in enemy hands.

"24th December—The enemy continued to subject the garrison to heavy fire from dive-bombers and mortars, and by means of incendiary bombs set the countryside all around Mount Cameron on fire.

"25th December—The military and naval commanders informed the Governor that no further resistance could be made."

Hongkong Diary

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 26—Following is Hongkong's official diary of its last eighteen days of one hundred years of British rule, leading up to its Christmas Day fall to the Japanese, as taken from a British War Office statement issued tonight:

December 8—During the morning Japanese forces estimated at one division, with a second division in immediate reserve, crossed the frontier of leased territories on the mainland. All our demolitions were successful and our troops withdrew according to plan.

There was patrol activity by both sides and a Bren carrier patrol ambushed and annihilated a Japanese platoon on Castle Peak road—operations in which a Chinese company of sappers took a leading part.

December 9—During daylight the enemy made no attempt to press forward, but in the afternoon our forward troops on Taipo road withdrew into the prepared "Gin Drinkers' Line."...

At about 11 P. M. Sing Mun redoubt, which was held by a platoon of Royal Scots, was captured by the enemy by surprise. Otherwise, "Gin Drinkers' line.". . . remained intact. The enemy's progress thus was confined to establishing a pocket south of Jubilee reservoir.

Breakthrough Attempt Foiled

December 10—Attempts of the enemy to break through towards Taipo road from the pocket failed. . . . On this day Hongkong's only airdrome was evacuated after demolition of the plant and obstruction of the ground.

December 11—In the morning strong enemy pressure developed on our left flank, held by the Royal Scots. Two left companies were driven in by heavy and accurate mortar fire, but the situation was stabilized by use of all available reserves, including a company of Winnipeg grenadiers. The Royal Scots nevertheless suffered severe casualties.

By mid-day it was decided the time had come fr the mainland, except for Devil's Peak position, to be evacuated under cover of darkness. Withdrawal to the island was successfully carried out despite some rioting in the streets of Kowloon and despite constant pressure by superior numbers of the enemy, who were quick to turn the flanks of our small units.

Stonecutters' Island was heavily bombarded all day, but our casualties were slight. The island was evacuated during the night. . . .

Mainland Evacuated

December 12—During the night two companies of the Punjabi battalion had lost contact, but they concentrated successfully on Devil's Peak peninsula, one company being evacuated early the evening of the twelfth. All troops were back on the island of Hongkong except for the battalion of Rajputs, one mountain battery of the Royal Artillery on Devil's Peak, and part of the Punjabis.

December 13—The remaining forces on the mainland were successfully evacuated in the night.

The island was subjected to sporadic bombardment by artillery and from the air, but casualties were few. The civilian population was reported calm, but their morale was considerably shaken. Monetary problems and rice distribution gave cause for serious anxiety.

A Difficult Day

It was a difficult day.

Shelling increased in intensity and accuracy and various guns and searchlights were put out of action. The enemy sent a delegation to negotiate a surrender but the proposal was summarily rejected by the Governor.

The enemy appeared to be collecting launches and junks in Kowloon and some activity was observed on Lamma Island.

December 14—There was systematic shelling by the enemy, and this was extremely accurate when directed against old and well-known batteries. Battery positions recently sited apparent were still not located. Bomb damage was negligible.

Morale of the civilian population was still shaking owing to difficulties over distribution of rice but otherwise control had improved.

Pillboxes Out Of Action

December 15—It was reported that more than half the pillboxes between Lyemun and Bowrington were out of action. . . .

Movements of the enemy toward High Junk and Clear Water bay areas were observed and further parties were seen to have landed on Lamma Island.

December 16—Aerial bombing and artillery shelling on an increased scale with high standard of accuracy on military objectives. One enemy aircraft was brought down into the sea.

During the night there was heavy enemy mortar fire along the waterfront between Star Ferry and Taikoo. . . .

December 17—Aerial bombardment was directed against the Peak wireless station and other places, but no military damage resulted. . . .

On this day the enemy sent to the island staff officers under a flag of truce bearing for the second time a written proposal for our surrender. This demand was similarly rejected.

Japs Land On Island

December 18—During the night the enemy succeeded in crossing the bar 500 yards of intervening water and in landing on Hongkong Island in the Tai Koo area ad Lyemun, whence they steadily infiltrated to Won Nei Chong gap and Tytam gap.

Stanley peninsula and the hill to the northward as far as a line running east and west through Stanley Mound were held by a battalion of Canadians, two companies of Indian infantry and a scratch force of gunners and machine gunners. . . .

Lyemun and Saiwan were overrun and the personnel of Fort Colinson and D'Aguilar were successfully withdrawn after the destruction of heavy guns there.

Counter-Attacks Fail

December 19—In the afternoon a counter-atack was atempted to regain Mount Parker, Mount Butler and Jardine's Island, but this was unsuccessful. The civilian population was reported to be surprisingly calm. The trops, however, were growing very tired and problems of supply and communication were difficult.

December 20—(This date is blank, without explanation).

December 21—A counter-attack toward Ty Tam Tak failed, although a certain number of the enemy were killed at a cost of about one hundred Canadian casualties. A counter-attack by a company of Winnipeg grenadiers to retake Wong Nei Chong Gap also failed in the fact of concentrated mortar and light machine-gun fire which inflicted heavy casualties.

December 22 — The enemy landed further troops on the northeast coast and attacked continuously. The island now has split roughly into three parts — an isolated British force in Stanley; the enemy to the east of the gap and the British to the west, with small pockets of British remnants holding out in isolated positions.

Water And Munitions Fail

The water and transport situation was critical and it was not possible to replenish the ammunition supply as necessary.

December 23—For the twenty-four hours ending at 5 P. M. the enemy had kept up incessant attacks, accompanied by mortars and artillery.

The Middlesex regiment successfully repulsed a determined attack on Leighton Hill.

It is impossible to conceal the fact that the situation has become exceedingly grave. . . . The water and food supply have become desperate; reservoirs and depots in enemy hands.

December 24—The enemy continued to subject the garrison to heavy fire and dive bombers and mortars, and by means of incendiary bombs set the countryside all around Mount Cameron on fire.

December 25—The military and naval commanders informed the Governor no further resistance could be made.

Pownall Assumes New Post

Jap Patrols Active In New Part Of Malay Peninsula

London, Saturday, Dec. 27 (AP) — Lieut. Gen. Sir Henry Pownall has assumed command of the British forces in the Far East, succeeding Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham.

The War Office announcement said Sir Henry had arrived at Singapore to assume the duties to which he was appointed in November. A War Office announcement on Nov. 19 said only that he had been "selected for special appointment."

Prior to that he was Vice-Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

The new commander's chief immediate tasks will be to stem the Japanese invasion of Malaya and co-ordinate British Far Eastern military activity with that of her Allies.

He was director of military operations and intelligence at the War Office from 1938 to 1940 and became chief of the general staff of the British Expeditionary Force in 1940.

Subsequently, as Inspector General of the Home Guard, he had a big role in the swift reorganization and arming of the British to meet the German invasion threat after Dunkerque.

Commanded Troops In Ulster

Afterward he commanded British troops in Northern Ireland, then was appointed vice-chief of the General Staff in May, 1941.

Pownall won the distinguished Service Order and the Military Cross in France and Belgium in 1914-18 as an artillery officer. He participated in operations on the northwest frontier of India in 1930-31 and later commanded the artillery school in England.

A change in the Far Eastern command has been generally expected in Britain since the Japanese launched their Malaya attack, but the announcement that Sir Henry had taken over was the first official disclosure his replacement of Brooke-Popham, which was intended before the attack started.

Criticism Over Malaya

The British press has been highly critical of military operations in Malaya, stressing particularly the failure to provide adequate defense for advance air fields such as Kota Bharu whose capture gave the Japanese a strong foothold from the start.

Only last Sunday Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, white Rajah of Sarawak, declared in Sydney that the British position in Malaya was due to "gross incompetence and almost criminal negligence" of military and political leaders at Singapore.

Sir Charles branded the Singapore authorities "brass hats . . . lah-di-dah, old-school-tie incompetents who should be sacked immediately."

The Air Ministry withheld immediate announcement today whether Brooke-Popham would remain in the Far East in connection with air operations against the Japanese or would return to England.

Hong Kong's Fall Aids Jap Malaya Drive

Crown Colony Surrendered by British After Gallant Defense

Singapore, Dec. 26 (AP). — The Christmas Day fall of Hong Kong after a week of fighting upon the island itself was expected by observers today to signal intensification of the Japanese offensive against Singapore, British bastion at the tip of Malaya.

Hong Kong's garrison, under assault by land, sea and air since the outbreak of the Pacific war, was forced to yield the island, the heart of a crown colony established by Britain at the mouth of the Canton River 100 years ago, by the overpowering numbers of the invaders.

(London officials said destruction of all water supplies handicapped the British, Indian, Canadian and Chinese defenders.

(The Colonial Office commented: "So ends a great fight against overwhelming odds." The Foreign Office, while giving no figures, said "military and civilian casulties were heavy."

(A Chungking statement said Hong Kong's defense was an inspiration "to all the Allied forces."

(Domei, the Japanese news agency, said a 15-minute parley of Japanese authorities late yesterday with Sir Mark Young, governor and commander in chief of Hong Kong, led to an unconditional surrender. The governor met Lieut. Col. Tokuchi Tada of the Japanese staff at the Peninsula Hotel in Kowloon. He was quoted as saying

(Domei was quoted as reporting that the Japanese navy sank or totally disabled a British destroyer, submarine, gunboat and six torpedo boats during the attack on Hong Kong. It added that Japanese marines occupying Stonecutter Island seized 40 to 50 vessels and quantities of ammunition after the surrender of the British garrison.)

Official reports indicated that the Japanese drive southward down the Malayan peninsula against British defenses 300 miles north of Singapore had been stemmed, although there was haphazard divebombing by Japanese planes.

(The British radio reported a Japanese push developing down the center of the Malay peninsula toward Kuala Lipis, 280 miles north of Singapore. The report, heard here by CBS, said the Japanese were following a rail line and keeping to the jungle on either side.

(The report also said British casualties in Malaya were lighter than expected and many units, which had been considered lost, were turning up. The Japanese, arriving on small carriers and moving up rivers on rafts, were reported very lightly equipped and armed only with tommy guns.)

"The situation remains unchanged," a Christmas night communique said.

Across the South China Sea 475 miles from Singapore, hardy native troops, constabulary and barefooted, tattooed jungle rangers were reported rallying against Japanese who landed Wednesday at Kuching, capital of the oil-rich kingdom of Sarawak, North Borneo.

A Singapore communique this morning also said "the situation remains unchanged." There were engagements between patrols in the area of Sungei Siput, Perak and north of Kemanana, in Trangganu.

Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, the white Rajah of Sarawak, was reported to be hurrying home from Australia, where he was on vacation at the outbreak of the war. His wife, the Ranee Sylvia, was last reported in New York.

The 380-mile coastline provides no ports for the anchorage of any vessels except small craft. The coast is a mass of mangrove swamps and mud flats cut by many rivers which, except for 30 miles of roads around Kuching, are the state's only channels of transportation.

British Far East headquarters said Allied forces had already sunk three large transports and a tanker in defense of Sarawak and the official Netherlands East Indies news agency, Aneta, reported that a Dutch submarine sent a 2,100-ton Japanese destroyer to the bottom with a torpedo.

Now that Hong Kong is captured, Domei said specially trained "swimming troops" who located British mines in the one-mile channel between Kowloon mainland areas and the island made possible the first landings the night of Dec. 18.

New Naval Tactics Are Expected to Appear in Conflict

Jap Patrols Active On Malay Peninsula

Singapore, Dec. 26 (AP)—British headquarters announced tonight without explanation that there was Japanese patrol activity north of Kenaman, which is on the east coast of Malaya only 175 miles north of Singapore.

Observers expressed belief the patrols were units which the Japanese landed at Kuantan, 35 miles farther south, on Dec. 12 and concerning which nothing has since been heard.

The communique also reported patrol activity along the Sungei River in Central Perak State, which forms a line the British have held several days about 300 miles north of Singapore.

Most of the women and children have been removed from Ipoh, next major town threatened by the Japanese drive in that inland area.

In general, the situation was described as unchanged, with Singapore and Southern Malaya making good use of the time completing air shelters and educating the public in expectation of renewed bombings.

Control of sugar, flour, butter and rice purchases was further tightened.

(This dispatch, filed at 6 p. m. Singapore time—6 a. m., E.S.T.—made no mention of the appointment of Lieut. Gen. Sir Henry Pownall as Commander-in-Chief of forces in the Far East, as announced in London).

There were reports of random dive bombing by Japanese planes on the peninsula, but Singapore itself was quiet and official accounts indicated the Japanese southward drive generally had been stemmed.

(A British radio report said the Japanese were developing a push down the center of the peninsula along a rail line toward Kuala Lipis, 280 miles north of Singapore, but gave no details. It added that British casualties had been lighter than expected and that the Japanese were lightly equipped and armed only with sub-machine guns).

JAP SHIP A DAY AVERAGE OF DUTCH AIRMEN

Another Destroyer Or Transport Sunk Off Coast Of Borneo

Indies Bombers Aiding Allies Over Malaya And Philippines

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, N. E. I., Dec. 26—Dutch airmen who have been steadily biting chunks out of the Japanese fleet today reported the sinking of another destroyer or transport off the Borneo coast where Japanese troops secured a foothold at Kuching, capital of Sarawak.

A Dutch submarine crew only yesterday reported the destruction of a 2,100-ton Japanese destroyer of the Amagiri class in the grim fight to keep the invaders out of the East Indies.

Averaging Ship A Day

Thus far Dutch air and sea successes have set a daily average of one Japanese ship sunk or seriously damaged. Big Netherlands bombers have been operating over land as well—over British Mayala and the Philippines—to help the Allies.

One Japanese bomber was shot down by anti-aircraft guns in a Japanese attack on a Dutch airdrome, and the loss of a Knilm passenger plane was admitted by the Dutch.

The eleven passengers of the plane were uninjured, but three wireless operators were killed. The operators were serving as air-raid wardens which suggested the plane was destroyed on the ground.

Battle Above Wrecked Ship

Another Dutch plane sighted a Japanese seaplane circling around a wrecked ship apparently "a 6,000-ton freighter of foreign nationality," and engaged in a brief inconclusive fight, a communique said.

Japanese raiders scattered leaflets over various Dutch Indies towns urging the natives to overthrow the Government.

Planes Sink Japanese Transport, Destroyer, Netherlands Reports

Enemy Ships Off Sarawak Targets; White Rajah's Troops Rallying

By the Associated Press.

BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies, Dec. 26.—The Dutch, whose air and submarine forces have set a daily average of one Japanese ship sunk or seriously damaged since they went to war with Japan, announced today the sinking of a Japanese destroyer and transport in an air attack on enemy shipping concentration off Kuching, capital of Sarawak, Island of Borneo.

(Aneta, official Dutch news agency, telephoning the communique to New York, appeared to say that a "destroyer or a transport" had been sunk. The New York office of Aneta was rechecking this passage.)

On the basis of the latest report the Japanese had lost two destroyers in recent days to the Dutch, who reported only yesterday that one of the 2,100-ton Amagiri class was torpedoed and sunk the night of December 24-25 by a submarine which escaped the depth bombs dropped by an accompanying destroyer to report its victory.

Just when the other destroyer was hit was not clear, since the Dutch naval air force has been hammering at shipping off Kuching for the last three or four days.

A Dutch reconnaissance plane was said today to have spotted a Japanese seaplane circling around the wreck of a burned out and abandoned ship. The Dutch plane, an American-built Maryland, attacked but the fight was broken off, with the Dutch plane slightly damaged.

The abandoned ship appeared to be a 6,000-ton freighter of "foreign nationality."

The communique said that in an air raid on a Dutch airdrome in the outer possessions yesterday morning a heavy Japanese bomber was shot down by antiaircraft guns.

Bombardment of one of our local airdromes by Japanese bombers caused only a little material damage. The airdrome, however, cannot be used for the time being. No persons were killed or wounded," it said.

An Admiralty statement said that six additional members of the crew were saved from a Dutch submarine which struck a mine and sank.

The sinking was announced yesterday. First repots said only the quartermaster was rescued.

The Batavia radio announced today that a passenger plane of the Dutch K. L. M. Air Lines had been shot down by a Japanese fighter plane.

The airliner was shot down yesterday. Three members of the crew were killed, but the eleven passengers escaped without injury.

An Admiralty statement said that six additional members of the crew were saved from a Dutch submarine which struck a mine and sank. The sinking was announced yesterday. The first reports said that only the quartermaster was rescued.

Allies Launch Effort To Reverse Japan's Offensive Advantage

Growing Reinforcements Encourage Australia's Prime Minister

By the Associated Press.

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec. 26.—Prime Minister John Curtin, broadcasting today, said Britain, the United States and Australia had launched an effort to reverse Japan's present offensive campaign.

Speaking only in general terms, Mr. Curtin said he could not state the precise form of the movement, but added that he was greatly encouraged by growing reinforcements for the Allies.

Mobilizing Allies.

"The decisions of the Far Eastern War Council," Mr. Curtin said, "demand action and the support which is being given by Australia, the United States, China, Russia, the Netherlands, Great Britain and their allies. We are mobilizing the Allies against the Axis."

He said Australia never was "satisfied with the air position in the Pacific," but added that "in the past 18 days we have taken stock and, although the conclusion is not glowing with optimism, there is sober confidence. The meeting in Washington (presumably of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill) shows the democracies are fully alive to the need for cohesive action in directing operations in the Pacific."

Courage and Determination.

The Prime Minister said that if Australia were attacked by Japan, "we would have casualties and material losses, but we must steel ourselves. It must be realized that we do not have sufficient forces to guard all our people from bombing and shelling, but we have the courage, determination and capacity to beat off the invader."

The Allies' ability to meet the onslaught, Mr. Curtin declared, had been reduced by the inevitable lapse of time between the drafting and execution of a plan covering Britain, the United States, Australia, the Netherlands and China.

ABC MILITARY COUNCIL SET UP AT CHUNGKING

Created By America's Brett, Britain's Wavell And China's Chiang

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, China, Dec. 26—An ABC military council has been created here by America's Maj. Gen. George A. Brett, Britain's Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell and China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, it was disclosed officially today.

Wavell and Brett were in Chungking for three days, reviewing with Chiang and his military commanders every aspect of the Pacific war, and creating the military council for common prosecution of hostilities on December 23.

Complete Harmony Announced

They were in complete harmony, a British Embassy communique said.

General Wavell, who is general officer commanding Britain's Indian command, and General Brett, chief of the United States Army Air Corps, came to Chungking Monday from Rangoon and returned together to that Burmese capital en route to their respective headquarters.

The Japanese have bombed Rangoon viciously this week. Only today the commander of the United States volunteer flyers protecting the Burma road telegraphed that United States and British pilots had shot down seventeen Japanese planes during a raid there yesterday.

Chinese In Big-Scale Fighting

China's armies, meanwhile, were engaged in large-scale fighting, both above fallen Hongkong and in the North Hunan front.

Chinese units cut the Japanese main line of land communications with Hongkong in a battle of considerable intensity along the Canton-Kowloon railway, a communique said. The Japanese were reported using 5,000 men now in this sector.

Twenty thousand Japanese were thrown into operations in North Hunan, which may become another battle for the provincial capital, Changsha.

1,000 Japs Cross Sinsiang

A Chinese military spokesman said 1,000 Japanese had forded the Sinsiang river, where there was heavy fighting in September. The thrust appeared to be designed to prevent the Chinese from sending reinforcements to the Kwangtung front above Hongkong.

Still other enemy forces were driving from four bases in the mountainous border region of Kiangsu, Anhwei, and Chekiang provinces, but this was regarded as either a smoke screen to cover troop withdrawals or a grandstand play for the Japanese at home.

Japs Drive Toward Changsha

Later the Chinese acknowledged the Japanese drive in Hunan was making substantial headway, with one column already advanced twenty-five miles toward Chinese-held Changsha. Fighting was reported to have progressed within sixty miles of the city.

There are about twenty American missionaries in Changsha, who have remained at their posts during two previous Japanese drives, but they are expected to leave if the present threat becomes more pronounced.

U.S., Britain and China Form War Council At Chungking

Brett, Wavell and Chiang Discuss 'Every Aspect' Of Far East Campaign

By the Associated Press.

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 26.—United States, British and Chinese Army leaders have reached "complete harmony of views" and this week formed a military council here for prosecution of the war against Japan, officials announced today.

Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander in chief of British forces in India; Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, chief of the United States Army Air Corps, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek took part with other officers in discussions of "every aspect of the campaign in the Far East," a British Embassy communique said.

Gen. Wavell and Gen. Brett arrived here Monday from Rangoon, Burma, a Chinese government statement announced, and called on the generalissimo that evening concerning joint war action by democratic countries.

"A military council was created in Chungking December 23," the statement said.

"On the third day of their stay, having completed their work, both Gen. Wavell and Gen. Brett left Chungking together for Rangoon, where they are to proceed to their respective headquarters."

JAPS ATTACK CHINESE

Large Scale Operations in Hunan Developing.

Chungking, Dec. 25 (delayed) (A. P.).—The Japanese Army is hurling 20,000 troops into large-scale operations in Northern Hunan which may develop into another battle for Changsha, the provincial capital, a Chinese military spokesman said today. He said that 1,000 Japanese had succeeded in crossing the Sinsiang River, the scene of heavy fighting in September, in a possible thrust which may be intended to prevent the Chinese from sending re-enforcements to Kwantung Province, facing Hongkong, on the South China coast.

The spokesman reported that other Japanese forces, operating from four bases, had started a drive in the mountainous border region of the provinces of Kiangsu, Anhwei and Chekiang. The Chinese, he said, were offering stubborn resistance against an operation which he labeled either a smoke screen for troop withdrawals, or an attempt to show the people of Japan that their army is able to fight both in China and on the Pacific.

China Reports New Blows At Japs

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, Dec. 26—A Government communique today said the Chinese attacks on the Canton-Kowloon railway, originally designed to relieve the siege of Hongkong, were "developing satisfactorily."

The communique said Chinese who recaptured Nanling early this week were now opposing a Japanese force of 5,000 after the arrival of Japanese reinforcements.

(The location of this Nanling was not given precisely, but the term, also called Nan-shan, covers an irregular mountain region roughly separating the Kwang provinces from those of Kweichow and Hunan and might be two or three hundred miles northwest of Hongkong.)

Jap Communications Cut

The communique said Chinese units also succeeded in cutting the Japanese main line of land communications with Hongkong in a battle of increasing intensity along the Canton-Kowloon railway.

Large-scale warfare was also developing again on the north Hunan province front where the Chinese have claimed two major victories in the past two years, the communique said.

U.S. Fliers Downed Nine Enemy Planes

Kunming, China, Dec. 24 (Delayed) (AP)—Pilots of the American volunteer group are credited with getting nine of 13 Japanese planes shot down during Tuesday night's mass raid on Rangoon.

The Americans lost three planes but only one pilot was killed.

Today the same squadron took off to meet possible raiders when the alarm shrilled at Kunming, China's Burma Road terminus, but the Japanese turned back, avoiding the Americans.

JAPANESE OPERATE IN GILBERT ISLANDS

London Tells of Moves in Group Between Australia and Hawaii

LONDON, Saturday, Dec. 27 (AP)—The British Colonial Office announced today that Japanese forces "recently have been operating in the northern Gilbert Islands," roughly midway between Australia and Hawaii.

The announcement expressed fears that some European residents of the little chain of sixteen Coral Atoll islands might have been taken prisoner.

The population of the islands, just south of the Japanese-mandated Marshall group, in 1931 was 26,528. There was no immediate information what proportion of these were Europeans, some of whom, the announcement said, had been removed recently.

The Colonial Office did not specify whether the Japanese actually had seized the islands.

Aussies Attack Japanese Island

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Royal Australian Air Force announced tonight:

"R.A.F., planes bombed enemy stores and installations on Greenwich Island (Japanese mandated.) All returned safely."

Portugese Troops Sail

Berlin, Dec. 26 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—The German radio reported in a dispatch from Lisbon today that 1,100 Portuguese soldiers had left Mozambique, East Africa, for Portuguese Timor, north of Australia, which was occupied by Australian and Netherlands East Indies troops last week.

The broadcast said the soldiers sailed from the port of Lourenco Marques aboard the 6,363-ton steamer Jaoa Belo.

Stimson Tells Quezon U. S. Will Send Force To Drive Enemy Out

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Secretary of War Stimson told the President of the Philippine Commonwealth in an exchange of Christmas messages published today that "as soon as our power is organized, we shall come in force and drive the invader from your soil."

President Manuel Quezon, in reply, assured the War Secretary the Philippine defenders were doing everything possible to uphold the honor, rights and interests of America in the Philippines.

The exchange was published by the War Department. Stimson and Quezon are friends of long standing, having been closely associated when Stimson served as Philippine Governor General more than a decade ago.

TOKIO, Dec. 26 (official broadcast, AP).—The 79th ordinary session of the Japanese Parliament opened today and will continue until January 21.

JAPS SEIZED IN CUBA

Files Of Organization Are Taken Over By Police

Havana, Dec. 26 (AP)—Seven Japanese were arrested by the Federal Bureau of the National Police today and charged with being members of a Japanese society having branches throughout Cuba.

Files of the organization were seized, police said, and orders were issued for detention of its members in the interior and on the Isle of Pines, where a wholesale roundup of Japanese subjects was made following Cuba's declaration of war on Japan.

FORCES ON MIDWAY STILL HOLDING OUT

"Merry Christmas," Embattled Defenders Cable To This Country

Sailors And Marines Continue To Fight Off Japanese Attacks

DEC 27 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 26—As yet unsung but undoubtedly as gallant and as determined as were the defenders of Wake Island, a band of United States fighting men apparently still holds Midway Island.

A cheering Christmas message to the New York Times saying "We are still here: Merry Christmas," was the first public word since the navy announced in a December 16 communique that Midway was "countering the blows of the enemy."

The navy said today it had been in communication with Midway yesterday but that no information concerning the situation there would be given out.

No Word Of Force There

Under the wartime regulations no information is permitted of the strength of the forces of the 850-acre island—a naval air station and a post of a commercial cable company.

Fewer than 400 battling marines held Wake against tremendous odds until December 23. Then a break in communications signaled that they had fought as long as they could—down to the last smoking battery of anti-aircraft guns that fired against boats as well as planes.

Now, perhaps, the navy men and marines on Midway must fight even harder than they fought before. With the fierce stand of Wake ended the Japanese probably can spare men and planes.

1,300 Miles West Of Hawaii

Midway is 1,200 miles northeast of Wake and 1,300 miles west of Hawaii. There are two main islands, the larger of which is smaller than Wake.

A barren, sun-bleached place is this midway point between the United States and Asia. Except for crabs and turtles and innumerable sea birds, the islands have no animal life. There is humor, though, in the comical appearance and habits of the numerous albatrosses of the islands. For their antics they have been dubbed "gooneys."

The navy has had Midway since 1903. In 1936 Pan American Airways made it a stopping for the transpacific service.

Luzon Invaders Veterans, With Special Arms

U. S. Army Reports Most Are Shock Troops, Able to Go Days Unsupported

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (AP).—The Japanese invading troops were pictured today in military advices from the Philippines as being especially equipped with light weapons and emergency rations to fight for days without support from their supply ships.

The invaders pouring ashore in the Lingayen Gulf area north of Manila and at other points on the key island of Luzon are armed with .25-caliber rifles and machine guns as standard equipment, official reports said.

These are considerably lighter than the harder-hitting weapons of the American-Filipino defenders, and dispatches have said they often inflict only slight wounds, but the lighter weight gives the compensating advantage of mobility. The weapons are credited with ample accuracy up to 1,000 yards.

The Japanese soldier is able to carry upward of 400 rounds of ammunition, possibly twice the burden of .30-caliber bullets the individual American or Filipino soldier can lug in cartridge belts and bandoleers, even though the enemy, on the average, is smaller in stature than an American.

Bulk of Foe Shock Troops

The bullet of a .25-caliber weapon would be only slightly larger, in diameter, than the .22 familiar to almost every American 'teen-age boy. The velocity and effectiveness of the missile, however, would depend on the length of the bullet and the size of the powder charge and on other factors not known here.

The invaders were said also to be equipped with rations sufficient for five days, consisting of rice and concentrated meat. The standard American Army ration for use when field kitchens cannot be brought within reach of the firing line suffices for only one day.

Although reports from the islands said some of the Japanese were ill-trained, poorly armed youths, officials here said they had military dispatches stating that the bulk of the invading army was composed of veteran shock troops with a background of fighting experience in China.

General Douglas MacArthur, the American commander, fighting against odds, has to rely heavily on incompletely trained Filipino troops, who nevertheless have been commended repeatedly for behaving well under fire.

Recently mobilized troops of the Philippine Commonwealth make up the bulk of the defense forces, although General MacArthur has a substantial stiffening of American units and such native professional soldiers as the Philippine Scouts, who are an integral part of the United States Army.

Diversion of U. S. Navy to Patrol Duty And Disruption of Shipping Are Aims

WASHINGTON-Dec. 26-(AP)-

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

In both campaigns the two main objectives are the same—diversion of naval units from combat duty with the fleet for strictly defensive patrol operations in home waters and the disruption of American shipping.

Although the Japanese are not considered by naval men to be in the same class with the grimly efficient U-boat veterans of World War I, and although their submarines must operate over vastly greater distances, they were conceded two advantages the Germans lacked.

Japan is believed to have a much larger fleet of long-range submarines, with about 40 capable of operating off the Pacific Coast, and her raiders are not menaced close to their home bases by the deadly type of anti-submarine warfare which the Allied navies were able to wage in the North Sea during 1917-1918.

Follows 1918 Patern.

The current renewal of submarine warfare in American waters is expected to follow the general pattern of the last conflict, and the World War experience of the Atlantic Coast gives the Pacific Coast some idea of what to expect.

During one six-month period in 1918 the Germans sent six huge cruiser type U-boats into American waters. They planted mines at the entrance to New York harbor, cut communications cables to Europe and south America, attacked coastal shipping with gunfire and torpedoes and, according to naval records, sank 170,000 tons of merchant or war craft.

Imposing as this record sounds, the U-boats did not achieve their objective. The World War Secretary of the Navy, Josephus Daniels, set down the verdict in a book some years later.

"In their chief mission of preventing transportation to Europe, the U-boats failed utterly," he wrote. "The flow of troops and munitions to France and England was not for a moment interrupted. In fact, it was precisely in this period that it was increased and we transported to Europe over 300,000 soldiers a month."

freighter. On July [illegible] two small Norwegian vessels days later, to the amazement natives and a host of alarmed summer visitors, she suddenly appeared off Massachusetts at Cape Cod.

The tug Perth Amboy, towing four barges, was making her way along the coast and the submarine promptly opened fire with her deck guns. From nearby Chatham Air Station planes went aloft with depth bombs to destroy the raider.

Only One of Six Raiders Sunk.

Hundreds of persons watched the battle, many in fear that the sub's guns soon would be turned on the coast. She poured shells into the tug and barges until the little vessel went up in flames and the barges sank. The airplane attack proved futile for the depth bombs failed to explode.

The U-156 went her way unharmed and for several days worked havoc with the New England fishing industry, but when finally she turned homeward it was to meet her doom. She struck a mine attempting to run the North Sea mine barrage and sank within a short time, the only one of the six U-boats that operated on the American side of the Atlantic which failed to return home safely.

Some years after the war the Navy Department's historical section printed a long record of German submarine activities on the American side of the Atlantic. This showed that submarines captured and sank by explosives or sank in battle by gunfire 89,405 tons of shipping. Another 68,141 tons were sunk by submarine torpedoes and 52,289 tons were either damaged or destroyed by mines—a total of 209,835 tons. Of these, 40,329 tons were salvaged, resulting in a net loss of 169,506 tons.

Japs Told U. S. Will Abide By Prisoner Of War Rules

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—Japan has been informed through the Swiss Government that the United States will abide by the rules covering prisoners of war adopted at the 1929 Geneva Convention, a Y. M. C. A. executive said today.

DEC 27

Dr. D[illegible]s A. Davis, executive secretary of the war prisoners aid of the World's Committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations, said that his organization received a letter from the State Department today declaring that the American Government was adhering to the Geneva rules.

The letter also stated, Dr. Davis said, the rules would be extended, in so far as they were adaptable, to any civilian enemy alien who might be interned here.

Japan's representatives to the Geneva Convention signed the agreement, Dr. Davis added, but their action was never ratified by the Tokyo Government. He also asserted that Russia was the only major power which attended the convention but did not sign the pact.

Dr. Davis, who returned from a tour of European prison camps last Wednesday, said the millions of war prisoners held in Germany were being used mostly for farm and industrial work on non-military projects, and that Germany gave them sufficient food to keep them capable of labor.

Dr. Davis said the Germans admitted frankly that they are not giving the Russians the same variety of diet as other prisoners. He said he had seen Russian prisoners who were fed for one week on turnips and a little codfish daily as their only prepared warm food in addition to daily portions of German bread and ersatz coffee.

Evacuees Convoyed Safely From Hawaii Praise Morale There

Wounded Sailor Tells How His Skipper Ordered Men to Hurl Spuds at Japs

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 26.—Hundreds of evacuees and wounded, convoyed safely through waters infested with Japanese submarines, today related acts of heroism and praised the morale in embattled Hawaii.

Lifebelts were worn during the trip by all passengers—even by the many children while they played games—and the ships were blacked out completely at night.

Stirring scenes took place at entrances to piers. No public announcement was made of the convoy's arrival, but it was seen moving through the Golden Gate. There was a rush toward the water front.

Threw Potatoes at Japs.

Soldiers and sailors carrying rifles and pistols had blocked off an area extending three blocks from the docks.

Ambulances hurried to the water front and removed the Navy and Army wounded. The city sent four ambulances to care for the civilian injured.

"Our skipper was a little fellow," the sailor said. "But he certainly was full of fight.

"We had only a 3-inch gun where we were, but he wouldn't let anybody else fire it. He peppered away at the Japs as they came over.

"All of a sudden a bomb hit nearby and blew the skipper into the water. Our executive (officer) gave the order to abandon ship."

The sailors started down and just then the skipper's head bobbed up from the water. They told him they were abandoning ship.

"The hell you are!" he shouted. "Get back to your stations!" Then he ordered a messenger to get a big sack of potatoes.

"I mean potatoes," the skipper cried to the surprised messenger. "I got to keep the men occupied at a time like this. Let 'em throw potatoes at the Japs!"

Didn't Know Hawaii Was Attacked.

Football players of Willamette University at Salem, Oreg., and San Jose, Calif., State told on their return of doing guard duty after the raids. Coach R. S. "Spec" Keene said his Willamette squad worked their way home by caring for wounded men. San Jose players said they didn't even know Honolulu was being attacked till they read it in the papers.

The three children of Capt. Merle Williams of the Air Corps told of a Christmas party on the convoyed ships at sea which was long on fun but short on candy and nuts.

"My daddy," said the 6-year-old, "can lick any 10 Japs."

6,000 Reported Killed In German Rout Southeast Of Leningrad

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 26—The British radio reported tonight that the Russians had recaptured Kliasma, described as "an important town on the Oka river," in their advance against the Germans from Tula. NBC heard the broadcast here.

Moscow, Saturday, Dec. 27—The Russians announced today the rout of German forces southeast of Leningrad and the smashing of new Nazi lines which Adolf Hitler himself exhorted his troops urgently and frantically to hold at all costs on the Oka river below Moscow.

Upward of 6,000 Germans were declared killed in the Soviet offensive which sent the Germans reeling from the Volkhovo area, on the main Leningrad-Moscow Railroad about eighty miles southeast of the long-besieged Baltic port.

36,200 Killed Within Week

This brought to 36,200 the number of Germans reported killed within a week by the westward surging Red army forces all the way from the Crimea in the south to the northern front.

The new victory on the Leningrad front brought liberation of thirty-two additional localities, the Soviet Information Bureau announced.

Matching this achievement, the Russians said their forces on the central front have reoccupied Narofominsk, thirty-five miles southwest of Moscow, and blasted the frost-bitten Nazis from stubbornly defended positions on the west bank of the Oka river.

Reds Advance In All Sectors

Narofominsk is between Moscow and Mozhaisk on the railroad running southwest to Bryansk. In this area as well as at all other sectors of the front the Soviet communique said Red forces continued their advance.

In taking one Oka river town, the Russians said their troops crawled across the ice by night, smashed the German flanks and took their objective in fierce hand-to-hand street fighting.

[This may have been Kaluga, communications center about 110 miles southwest of Moscow on the Oka river and a junction on rail lines running northwest to Vyazma and to Bryansk on the southwest. It was reported authoritatively in London that the Russians had recaptured Kaluga as well as the town of Oskuye, sixty-two miles southwest of Tikhvin on the Leningrad front.]

"According to Hitler's order, the offensive of Soviet troops was to be checked here," the Government newspaper Izvestia said in an account of the Oka river victory.

"The Germans had strongly fortified this place and exerted every effort to stop our offensive. Stubborn street engagements ensued and the place was shortly occupied by our troops."

Germans on the Moscow front apparently were trying desperately to hold new positions on the Orel-Kaluga-Mozhaisk-Rzhev line but Red armies were declared pressing forward unchecked despite repeated Nazi counter-attacks.

Reds Throttling Mozhaisk

The Nazis in the Orel sector, 210 miles south of Moscow at the lower end of the line, were declared under immediate Soviet threat while Red forces steadily were throttling Mozhaisk, fifty-seven miles west of Moscow.

Prisoners captured on the west bank of the Oka told the Russians they had been ordered to halt the Red armies there at all costs and Red officers said this was substantiated by a German order of the day dated December 19, captured in another sector of the Moscow front.

Nazis Told Retreat Must Cease

This order, signed by Colonel General Helmesterbert, commander of the Twenty-third German Infantry Division, said:

"General conditions of the war require imperatively that the present retreat cease now.

"The division must clean up its entire rear line and bring back to regiments the soldiers who remain at the rear.

"In the future it is necessary through energetic action of all personnel to keep one's own and collect other abundant arms and munitions. . . .

"I expect the division, despite great weariness of soldiers and officers, to be able to stand up under these critical days. After close study of this order it is to be destroyed."

Another order by the commander of the Seventh German Infantry Division was reported to have instructed officers how to act under conditions of "temporary enemy superiority of the air, how to face a munitions shortage and how to maintain discipline of troops."

Red Successes In Arctic

In a review of the campaign on the Arctic front, Vice-Admiral A. Golovko, commander of the Soviet northern fleet, said the German plan to take Murmansk and the Kola peninsula had failed and that the Axis now are intrenched on the defensive.

Early in July the German "Norway Corps" attacked the Rybachi peninsula, he wrote in Izvestra, but were checked on the isthmus. A second offensive along the road to Murmansk was declared halted by the Red fleet, while still a third drive in September was smashed by naval infantry.

Admiral Golovko said that in the first six months of the war the northern fleet operating in the Barents Sea destroyed forty-two German transports, two destroyers, four submarines and five auxiliaries totaling 200,000 tons.

Christmas Assaults Retake 100 Villages, Red Army Claims

13th German Corps Staff Headquarters Destroyed And 10,200 Nazis Slain

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Dec. 26.—More than 100 villages were declared today to have been captured by Red Army troops on the central front Christmas Day in the giant counteroffensive against the withdrawing divisions of Adolf Hitler.

The Moscow radio broadcast a Pravda dispatch claiming fresh territorial gains and said the staff headquarters of the 13th German Army Corps were destroyed and some 10,200 German officers and men were killed before the capital from December 21 to 25.

"Estimates of the booty and the number of casualties are far from complete," the radio said, "since many of the dead and much equipment is buried under the snow."

Losses at Sevastopol.

Germans were said to have lost about 20,000 killed in a six-day battle at the approaches of Sevastopol, besieged Crimean naval base.

A correspondent of the army newspaper Red Star said casualties amounted to more than half of Germany's effectives on the peninsular front.

(Authoritative British circles said in London that Russian forces, maintaining their pressure, had taken Oskuye, 62 miles southwest of Tikhvin, and Kaluga, about 110 miles southwest of Moscow and some 65 miles northwest of Tula on the Oka River.)

The newspaper Izvestia which reported capture of a "large populated place on the western bank of the Oka River" after two days fighting, said that "according to Hitler's order the offensive of Soviet troops was to be checked here."

"* * * The Germans had strongly fortified this place and exerted every effort to stop our offensive," Izvestia said. "Stubborn street engagements ensued and the place was shortly occupied by our troops."

The Soviet Information Bureau communique said that in one sector on the western front a Russian unit had recaptured 30 communities in five days fighting.

In another engagement on the southern front the Russians were said to have killed 700 German soldiers and officers.

The correspondent of Komsomolskaya Pravda said that in another sector of the front about 3,000 Germans were killed and 31 villages recaptured in one day.

Leningrad Break-Through Foiled, Germans Say

BERLIN, Dec. 26 (Official Broadcast) (AP).—Italian and Slovak troops were reported by the high command today to have assisted Germans in repelling attacks on the Russian front and inflicting heavy losses on Soviet soldiers.

Numerous Russian tanks were declared to have been destroyed in the east and the Soviet forces were said to have lost more than 1,000 men and 19 of the tread-tracked vehicles about Leningrad alone.

Finns Report Red Army Attacking Entire Front

HELSINKI, Dec. 26 (AP).—The Red Army is attacking along the entire Finnish front, a Finnish Army communique said today. It declared that the onslaught, although general, was not heavy in any one sector, and was being repulsed.

Soviet Guerrilla Unit Returns After Harrying Nazis 4 Months

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Dec. 26.—A Soviet guerrilla detachment which for almost four months harried German communications and garrisons behind the Russian-German battle lines in the north has returned from its mission safely, Tass, the official Russian news agency, reported today.

The detachment, traveling on foot or on skis, covered more than 1,250 miles in operations in Latvia and Estonia, around the cities of Pskov and Novgorod, southwest and south of Leningrad, and in the entire Leningrad area.

Tass reported the guerrilla troops did most of their damage to Nazi communication lines along the highway and railroad between Pskov and Porkhov, both of which were used to transport Nazi reinforcements, provisions and ammunition for troops attacking Novgorod and Leningrad.

On information received from the guerrillas' portable radio station, bombers from the nearest Russian air base were said to have destroyed 24 Nazi planes in their first attack and to have set afire a large fuel supply in their next raid. The detachment itself blew up an important bridge over the River "N" just as a German light armored detachment was crossing it, Tass said.

The detachment also reported that guerrilla warfare is being carried on successfully against the Germans by groups of sailors along the northwestern coast of Latvia and that in most of the territory they covered the Germans have stationed only small, poorly trained garrisons, made up chiefly of reservists.

Hitler Spends 'Serious' Yule

BERLIN, Dec. 26 (Official Broadcast).—A former press officer of the British Legation at Sofia, Bulgaria, and nine other persons were sentenced to death today on charges of espionage aimed at preparing for invasion of Bulgaria.

The court martial proceedings at Sofia lasted 15 days. The principal defendant (presumably the former press officer) was condemned to death in absentia. Twenty-four other defendants received long prison terms.

AXIS LAST STAND LOOMS IN LIBYA

DEC 27 1941

Desert Army Tries to Stem British Advance 90 Miles South of Bengasi Port

CAIRO, Dec. 26 (AP)—The last organized units of the Axis desert army were trying to make a stand tonight 90 miles south of British-captured Bengasi, along the great arc formed by the shores of the Gulf of Sirte.

Here, in the Agedabia region some 80 miles this side of the line which divides Cirenaica from Tripolitania, the bulk of the force which remained to Nazi Gen. Erwin Rommel was struggling with heavy casualties in a last attempt to escape complete destruction and resume the hazardous flight westward.

13,000 Taken

More than 13,000 of the Axis troops were in either prisoners' camps or hospitals in the British-occupied rearward areas, and a large number—yet uncounted—still remained in the forward sections, awaiting evacuation.

It seemed unlikely that Rommel was trying anything more at Agedabia than a brief rear-guard action to permit at least some of his men to get back toward Tripoli. The flat desert terrain of this sector does not lend itself to long defensive action, especially since some British advanced columns are already behind the enemy, operating deep in Tripolitania.

Few Likely to Reach Safety

(In London a military commentator conceded that some Axis forces might be able to fight their way westward to temporary shelter, but said that few tanks were likely to reach safety due to their mechanical condition after weeks of constant action. To be even momentarily secure, the Germans must at least get to Sirte, 160 miles inside Tripolitania.)

DEC 27 1941

"Although isolated bodies in various stages of disorganization still remain around Barce and south of Bengasi, the bulk of the retreating enemy now appears to be in the Agedabia area.

"North of Agedabia there is a certain amount of confused fighting in which our troops are taking a toll of enemy parties attempting to escape southward.

"During this fighting six enemy tanks were knocked out yesterday and in addition, three Italian tanks, 11 Italian armored cars, 11 German light tanks, some German and Italian aircraft, together with a considerable amount of material, was found abandoned in the Barce area."

British wounded found in hospitals in this area were recovered along with the capture of prisoners.

Hundreds of miles behind the front lines, on the Egyptian Frontier, desperate members of one of several isolated and beleaguered Axis garrisons near Salum tried to break out to get food and water. They were rolled back and four of their light tanks wrecked.

A small Axis vessel trying to supply still another of these "Axis Tobruks" from the sea was caught squarely by British field artillery, driven ashore, fired and burned out on the beach. This was at Halfaya, or "Hellfire Pass."

The R.A.F. again was pounding methodically in force at the lines of enemy motor transport, tanks and guns southwestward from Agedabia and elsewhere. Tripoli and Misurata were raided heavily.

British Take Heavy Toll in Libya Drive

Engage Axis Troops in 'Confused Fighting' 60 Miles From Bengasi

Cairo, Dec. 26 (AP).—The British army, with the ruins of Bengasi in its possession, hammered home its advantage today and was reported by the Middle East command to be taking a heavy toll of German forces seeking to retreat farther westward after loss of Libya's second-largest city.

The bulk of the Axis troops, said today's communique, was engaged by the British in "confused fighting" north of Agedabia, 60 miles south of Bengasi on the coast road to Tripoli, capital of Italy's North African empire. Near Bengasi itself and around Barce only "isolated bodies in various stages of disorganization" still were offering resistance.

The R. A. F. in operations ranging as far west as Tripoli itself, also harried the Axis forces in the Agedabia sector. Its communique reported "considerable damage" done to armored cars, guns and motor transports southwest of Agedabia. The air force said direct hits were scored on the Karamanli mole at Tripoli.

(British occupation of Bengasi was acknowledged today by the Italian High Command, which claimed the Axis supply port had fallen only after Italian and German troops had destroyed and abandoned it.)

The British communique said 3,000 Axis prisoners already had been shipped to the rear.

(A London military commentator said that in spite of the repeated stabs by British armored patrols which were whittling down his tank strength, German Gen. Erwin Rommel still might succeed in getting some of his forces through to Tripolitania.)

They Need Overhauling

(Other informed quarters, however, asserted few of the Nazi tanks were likely to reach safety, even if they managed to break past the British interceptors near Agedabia. They pointed out that during a withdrawal the Germans would not be able to repair even relatively minor breakdowns, while actually their tanks probably were in need of thorough overhauling after weeks of constant action.

(They added that RAF strafings, as well as the British patrols, were certain to take a heavy toll along the barren, exposed coastal road, and that Rommel faced a tremendous task if he hoped to effect a speedy withdrawal as far west as Sirte, 160 miles into Tripolitania. He would have to get at least this far, observers said, to feel at all safe.)

The British communique said 13,000 German and Italian prisoners already had been shipped to the rear for hospitals and prison camps.

More Prisoners To Come

Besides these, the communique said, a large number still are to be transported from the forward areas of a British advance which has driven more than 300 miles westward into Libya.

In the fighting north of Agedabia, the middle east command said, six Axis tanks were put out of commission. Three Italian tanks and eleven armored cars and eleven German light tanks and an unspecified number of Axis planes and war material were found abandoned in the Barce area, it was said.

A small ship seeking to bring supplies to Axis forces besieged at Halfaya was hit by British field artillery caught fire and had to be beached, the communique reported.

Axis Rout Will Speed Mopup, British Say

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 26 (AP).—The capture of Bengasi, second city of Italy's North African empire, means that an Axis threat to Egypt has been removed and large British forces eventually will be freed for the mopping up of Libya, authoritative circles said today.

The chief supply port east of Tripoli, the provincial capital, Bengasi, fell to the British December 24. While some units took over the ruined port, other air and land forces continued pursing Axis troops to the west.

Word of the recapture of Bengasi was received with satisfaction in London. It lies at the 300-mile mark on the drive westward from the Egyptian frontier begun November 18.

A London military commentator said that in spite of the repeated stabs by British armored patrols which were whittling down his tank strength, Gen. Erwin Rommel still might succeed in getting some of his forces through to Tripolitania.

Axis Admits Bengasi Loss

Rome, Dec. 26 (Official Broadcast Recorded By AP).—The Italian command today acknowledged British occupation of Bengasi, saying it fell only after forces had destroyed and abandoned it.

"Our troops continued their previously planned movements in western Cirenaica which the enemy, despite repeated attacks, was unable to hinder," the high command declared.

The British were declared to have lost several armored cars in vain attacks upon Axis garrisons at Bardia, Libya, and Salum, Egypt.

A British plane was shot down in flames by Italian fighters during a raid on Tripoli, the Libyan capital, the high command said.

Berlin Also Admits Loss

Berlin, Dec. 26 (Official Broadcast Recorded By AP).—The German high command admitted today a reverse in North Africa in the fall of Bengasi, but said this was according to plan and that the British occupied the Libyan port without fighting.

Germany Is Not Bombed During Yuletide.

London, Dec. 26 (A. It was said that no R. A. F. planes had crossed the channel and only routine fighter patrols along the coast were in the air.

A communique said:

"In the early part of last night enemy aircraft were active near the east coast of England. Incendiary bombs were dropped at one place on the coast, but caused neither damage nor casualties."

Largest Contingent Of Empire Airmen Reaches Britain

U. S. Naval Units Escort Convoy Part of Way Across Atlantic

By the Associated Press.

A BRITISH PORT, Dec. 26.—The largest contingent of British empire airmen ever to cross the Atlantic arrived here today to join the British, Canadian, New Zealand and Australian squadrons which already are waging the anti-axis air war on the European front.

En route from a Canadian port, their convoy was escorted part of the way across the North Atlantic by United States naval units.

More than half of the airmen—flyers as well as ground personnel—were Canadians. The rest of the contingent included R. A. F. men trained in Canada, United States members of the Royal Canadian Air Force, Norwegians from the "Little Norway" training base near Toronto, and Australians and New Zealanders.

They said their crossing had been uneventful.

A further contingent of Canadian troops, including Maj. Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, commander-designate of the 2d Division, also landed with the airmen from their flotilla of troopships.

The convoy also landed reinforcements for infantry regiments, an Ordnance Medical Corps, engineers, anti-aircraft signallers, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, a company of Canadian Forestry Corps lumbermen bound for duty in Scottish forests, and an orthopedic unit with 19 nurses.

Other units included drafts of the Polish and Netherlands Armies trained in Canada, some personnel of the Dutch fleet air arm and tradesmen from Jamaica for the British Army.

Canada Trained Fliers Were Escorted By U. S. Warships

A British Port, Dec. 26 (AP)—The largest group of airmen ever to cross the Atlantic arrived here by the thousands today, telling Britons, "we have come to bring you victory in 1943."

More than half of them were Canadians, but they included a number of United States members of the Royal Canadian Air Force. Australians, New Zealanders, Britons, Norwegians, Poles and Dutch, all trained in Canada.

Besides pilots, gunners, navigators and radio men, the convoy included thousands of reinforcements for the Canadian Army Corps in the united kingdom, some personnel of The Netherlands fleet air arm, and Jamaica tradesmen for the British Army. the convoy part of the uneventful United States warships escorted voyage.

With the troops was Maj. Gen. H.D.G. Crerar, who will assume command of the second division and will be acting commander of all the Canadian Corps pending the recovery of Lieut. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton from a minor lung infection.

Among the Americans in the R.C.A.F., who identified themselves were Pilot Officers E. W. Sanders of Houston, Tex.; L. M. Solomon of Chattanooga, Tenn., and D. B. Hodd of Boston.

De Gaulle States Parley Over Island's Occupa

St. Pierre, St. Pierre-et-Miquelon, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Free French news agency said tonight that Gen. Charles de Gaulle would confer with the interested Allied governments on the diplomatic question involved in the occupation of these islands off the Newfoundland coast.

Meanwhile, the islands' fisherfolk population continued to hold plebiscites in which they cast secret ballots stating they wished to follow de Gaulle instead of Marshal Petain's Vichy regime, the agency said. The plebiscite in this main population center yesterday was said to have resulted in 650 votes for alignment with the Free French, while only 10 persons voted for continued Vichy rule.

The plebiscite on Miquelon Island will be held tomorrow. All persons over 18 years old were allowed to vote.

Governor Is Seized.

St. Pierre, St. Pierre-et-Miquelon, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The Free French news service announced today that these islands off the Newfoundland coast were occupied under a formal order by Gen. Charles de Gaulle and that the "diplomatic question" arising would be discussed between him and the "interested governments."

Gen. de Gaulle is the leader of the Free French movement, with headquarters at London.

The agency said that Baron de Bournat, the Vichy-appointed Governor here, had been taken into custody by the Free French forces.

L. E. Emerson, Newfoundland Defense Minister, telegraphed his congratulations to Admiral Emile Muselier, whose seamen occupied the island.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Free French leader, also sent congratulations to the admiral, who was busy organizing the colony into an anti-Axis ally despite the seeming reluctance of the United States to accept it.

Ninety-eight per cent of the 3,500 population voted in favor of Free French rule, the news agency said, with only ten opposing votes cast in yesterday's plebiscite.

Two persons were said to be under house guard, a customs administrator and a notorious Nazi-minded official, the agency reported.

"Arbitrary Action": U. S. Vi

(The United States Government reliably reported to be endeavoring to restore the status quo of the islands in conformity with an agreement made recently with French authorities in Martinique to keep France's western Atlantic islands out of the war line-up.

(The purpose of the Martinique agreement was to keep the Vichy Government from moving farther toward the Axis. The United States State Department yesterday characterized the seizure as "an arbitrary action contrary to the agreement of all parties concerned and certainly without the prior knowledge or consent in any sense of the United States Government."

A British [illegible] (British officials in London also reported "complete surprise."

(The British radio quoted the Berlin radio as reporting that Admiral Jean Darlan of the Vichy Government had gone to Toulon, big French Mediterranean naval base, where several major units of the French fleet are berthed.)

A description of the landing of the four corvettes and Admiral Muselier's movement was furnished by Jean le Bret, reporter for the Montreal newspaper Le Jour.

Le Bret said the vessels left with other Free French naval vessels from an eastern Canadian port ostensibly for Atlantic maneuvers.

Naval Maneuver Described

After an afternoon of routine practice moves, the four war vessels detached themselves from the squadron and steamed away to St. Pierre, he said. At dawn Wednesday morning they moved into Le Barachois, the port of St. Pierre. Armed sailors went ashore and occupied all strategic points. They quickly removed the islands' administrator, M. De Bournat, who voiced a final "Vive Petain!" as he was taken aboard one corvette.

Today the Free French sailors stood guard over the quays, police station, telephone, telegraph and radio offices and Government buildings.

Radio Broadcast Material Useful to Foe, Is Charge

DEC 27 1941

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—The French National Committee (Free French) charged today that it was "common knowledge" that the radio at St. Pierre, when it was under Vichy domination, "was broadcasting meterological information useful to the enemy."

St. Pierre is the seat of administration of the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon off the southern coast of Newfoundland which naval forces of the Free French have taken out of Vichy control.

The National Committee issued a statement in explanation of the seizure of the islands, which the United States State Department has condemned.

Says Populace Wished Move.

"Several months ago," it said, "the National Committee was informed that the populations of the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, situated at the entrance to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, wished to join Free France at the side of the Allies to resume the struggle for liberation of the mother country and the triumph of liberty throughout the world.

"Furthermore, it was common knowledge that under the governor, who had received dictatorial powers from Vichy, the St. Pierre radio was broadcasting meterological information useful to the enemy.

"Admiral Muselier, commanding the Free French Navy, having recently gone to inspect Free French warships in Newfoundland waters which are collaborating in protection of Allied shipping, went to St. Pierre on December 24 on orders of the National Committee in order to clear up the situation.

Welcomed By People

"As soon as he landed with a few ratings (seamen) he was welcomed with enthusiastic cheers and, meeting with no resistance, took over the administration of the colony. He immediately organized a plebiscite asking the population to choose between the Free French cause and collaboration with the powers who starve, humiliate and martyrize our country.

"Ninety-eight per cent. of the population, amid general rejoicings, expressed their wish to throw off the shackles of the armistice and to resume the struggle at the side of the Allies under the ægis of Free France.

Their First Chance To Choose

"This manifestation of French popular will is all the more significant, for it is the first time since June, 1940, that the populaton, exclusively composed of French citizens, has been able to express its feelings in accordance with democratic principles and the right of peoples to self-determination."

Free French headquarters announced receipt of a cable from Admiral Muselier stating that he had occupied the islands as quarters of General De Gaulle.

DEC 27 1941

The report said officers and men of the landing party held a Christmas service in memory of Frenchmen killed in the last war.

U. S. Will Confer With Other Powers On French Islands

DeGaullist Occupation Seen As Alienating Vichy Leaders

(By The Associated Press)

London, Dec. 26—British, American and Canadian government leaders meeting in Washington apparently will decide soon whether to restore to Vichy the North Atlantic Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon which tonight were under the banner of Gen. Charles De Gaulle after a Christmas Eve occupation.

The Free French news agency said "the diplomatic question" raised by the United States protest against the seizure would be discussed by General De Gaulle with the "interested governments."

The United States branded the occupation by seamen under Adm. Emile Muselier as an "arbitrary action contrary to the agreement of all parties concerned," and asked Canada what steps it would take to restore the status quo. The islands are just off the Newfoundland coast.

The American reaction apparently was in keeping with an agreement made recently with French authorities in Martinique whereby it was hoped to keep French Atlantic possessions out of the opposing war camps, and also keep the harried Vichy government from moving farther toward the Axis.

Complicating factors in the dispute are the status of all parties involved. Although the United States still recognizes Vichy, the government has given Lease-Lend aid to the Free French forces in the fight against Germany.

Britain and Vichy long ago severed their diplomatic relations, and last Nov. 26 Foreign Minister Anthony Eden told the House of Commons that Britain recognized Gen. Charles De Gaulle's national committee as "representative of all Free Frenchmen."

This recognition, however, does not take care of all those Frenchmen who are at the same time anti-German but are loyal to aged Marshal Petain.

General De Gaulle, who broke with Marshal Petain's Armistice government and later was branded a traitor by Vichy, ordered the occupation of the islands which was occomplished without incident.

When the United States reacted unfavorably, official quarters in London and Ottawa said they, too, were "completely surprised" by the Free French action.

Admiral Muselier conducted a plebiscite yesterday in which he announced that the colony, in secret balloting, voted overwhelmingly to drop Vichy's administration and follow General De Gaulle. Only 10 opposing votes were cast, it was said.

Baron De Bournat, the Vichy-appointed Governor, was taken into custody, and two other men were placed under House arrest. The Free French charged that it was "common knowledge" that the radio at St. Pierre had been "broadcasting meteorological information useful to the enemy."

The Free French news agency said that L. E. Emerson, Newfoundland Defense Minister, wired his congratulations to Admiral Muselier, as did General De Gaulle.

The French National Committee here declared that the colonial plebiscite showed that the islanders wanted to "throw off the shackles of the armistice, and to resume the struggle at the side of the Allies under the Aegis of Free France."

"This manifestation of French popular will," the statement concluded, "is all the more significant, for it is the first time since June, 1940, that the population, exclusively composed of French citizens, has been able to express its feelings in accordance with democratic principles and the right of peoples to self-determination.

Precedent Would Force United States to Restore All Land Free French Captured.

By H. TAYLOR HENRY

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The Vichy regime expressed appreciation today over Washington's swift denunciation of the De Gaullist (Free French) seizure of St. Pierre and Miquelon and said that it counted on prompt re-establishment of Vichy control.

A communique said: "The forcible De Gaullist action in fact is a formal contradiction of assurances made many times and again recently to the French Government and to representatives of the Federal (United States) Government touching on maintenance of the status quo in French possessions in the New World."

The statement added that the French Government appreciated "the promptness with which the Federal Government made known its wish to maintain its position and see that the status quo is restored in the French islands."

They added that "the Washington and Ottawa governments," in the state of their relations with the French Government, cannot admit any new blow against the existing situation."

It was asserted that the De Gaullist action depends on "the decision of the Anglo-Saxon countries" and "France consequently counts on prompt re-establishment of the situation existing before December 25 to give her satisfaction."

St. Pierre Radio Source Of Concern To Allied Powers

U. S., Canada And Britain Considering Action By Free French

DEC 27 1941

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Conversations looking toward settlement of the St. Pierre-Miquelon situation by an agreement satisfactory to all were under way here today, and informed quarters indicated a possible solution was:

(1) Withdrawal of Free French forces and restoration of Vichy Sovereignty over the islands.

(2) Close supervision of the St. Pierre radio station by representatives of the British-Canadian-American Allies.

The sudden seizure Wednesday of the little islands off the Canadian coast by a Free French force under Adm. Emile Muselier was described by the State Department yesterday as "an arbitrary action contrary to agreement."

Officials would not amplify that statement today, but it was made known that the talks in progress here were concerned with reaching a common understanding among the governments involved.

Prime Minister King, who arrived in Washington today, was understood to be ready to take up the St. Pierre-Miquelon situation in conferences also with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Canada's attitude toward reversal of the "conquest" and return of the islands to Vichy is of particular importance because St. Pierre and Miquelon lie close to her strategic waters and because, like the United States, Canada is a Western Hemisphere nation vitally interested in maintaining the hemispheric status quo.

In addition, Canada, like the United States, maintains diplomatic relations with the Vichy government. Britain does not, but the British government in the past has taken the Canadian and United States policies into consideration in framing its own policy towards France.

It was pointed out that uncontrolled operation of a radio station close to the route followed by convoys plying between Canada and Britain could be a source of potential danger which could not be disregarded. The possibility of Axis submarines obtaining secret bases on the islands was not so seriously regarded, since St. Pierre and Miquelon lie so close to Newfoundland that they are constantly under the eyes of the British and American Navies.

U. S. Diplomats Leave Sofia for Istanbul

By the Associated Press.

BERN, Switzerland, Dec. 26.—Stefani reported today from Sofia that the American diplomatic corps in the Bulgarian capital left last night for Istanbul, Turkey.

Nine Americans were in the group leaving the country which declared itself at war with the United States.

TWO FASCIST LEADERS LEAVE OFFICIAL POSTS

DEC 27 1941

Serena, Tassinari Are Replaced by Younger Men

ROME, Dec. 26 (Andi Agency to AP)—Mussolini accepted the resignations of Fascist Party Secretary Adelchi Serena and Agriculture Minister Giuseppe Tassinari today in another "changing of the guard" which found younger men taking over executive posts.

Officials Resign

Serena was declared to have quit because of a wish "to participate in the war as a volunteer," and Tassinari "for reasons of health."

Aldo Bidussoni, only 26, who served with Italian troops in the Spanish civil war, replaced the 46-years-old Serena, whose photographs recently were banned from display in party or public buildings.

Salvatore Gatti, vice-secretary of the Fascist Party, also was dropped, his place being taken by an unknown journalist, Carlo Ravasio.

RANKING FASCISTS OUT

Party Officer and Minister Lose Posts at Rome.

Serena's resignation was explained as result of a desire to participate in the war as a volunteer and Tassinari's for reasons of health.

Urges Indians To Join Fight Against Axis

Sir Bijoy Prosad Sineh Roy Addresses National Liberal Federation

Madras, India, Dec. 26 (AP)—Sir Bijoy Prosad Sineh Roy, in a presidential address to the twenty-third Indian National Liberal Federation, today said Indians should join all branches of the fighting forces despite grievances against British rule.

"As realists we cannot be indifferent to the need for cooperation in the war effort," he asserted. "War already has reached our frontiers and to stand by and watch the vandalism of infamous aggressors is to invite disaster.

"Our grievances against British rule are great and grave, but we have a duty to our own country. We cannot calmly see our country overrun by plunderous hordes."

"This is no time to bargain on a doctrinal plane, although we should not stop impressing on the British government that for the fuller utilization of India's willing cooperation settling of political accounts is urgent."

Bullitt Ends Stay In Holy Land

Pope Makes Third Yule Peace Plea

DEC 27 1941

Vatican City, Dec. 26—(Andi Agency to A. P.)—For the third time in three Christmas season days, Pope Pius XII today called upon warring nations of the world to sheathe the sword. Addressing his Noble Guards, the Pontiff said, "in this sea of tempest and human catastrophes, may the fury of the winds cease; may the waves become calm, and on the undisturbed ship of bounty and faithfulness may men shake hands and embrace justice and peace."

Wars, Bismarck Sinking Voted Top 1941 Stories

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—Japan's war on the United States, sinking of the German battleship Bismarck and Germany's invasion of Russia were unanimously voted the three biggest news stories of 1941 by seven leading British and American news agency editors, it was announced today.

The judges were Robert E. Bunnelle of the Associated Press, James Oldfield of the Associated Press of Great Britain, Ed Beattie of the United Press, C. A. Smith of the International News Service, R. N. Neale of Reuters, F. H. Fisher of the British United Press and D. R. Spendlove of the British Press Association.

Fall of Hongkong Citadel Gives Japanese Base for Greater Attacks

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

The Christmas story from the Far East lacks the cheer of the season for the anti-Axis forces, since on the whole the Japanese have driven their spearheads closer to the heart of the Allied defense—the all-essential base of Singapore. The citadel of Hongkong has surrendered finally after a gallant stand, thereby giving the Japs a highly important base from which to strike at Singapore and the Philippines.

The Nipponese also reportedly have captured Kuching, capital of Sarawak, on the great island of Borneo, which lies close to Singapore, thereby creating another threat against the British stronghold. Thus, the Japs have continued to whittle down the vast line of island defenses which shield Singapore from the east and permitting the passage of aid to this beleaguered base from this direction. That's the Japanese strategy, for they can't reach the western approaches to Singapore now.

Weakness in Philippines.

Over the most important position in this defensive Eastern goup—the Philippines—the Stars and Stripes fly to broadcast proudly to the world today's declaration by our command that "we will fight to the last man." The move in declaring Manila an open city isn't a very good sign, for it emphasizes our lack of control of the air there—a vital weakness. The battle would seem to have resolved itself into a test of endurance, which will determine if our forces can hold out until re-enforcements arrive.

While this wartime Yuletide has brought its burdens, it has had its good spots as well. The Russians report that they have captured another hundred villages and continue their devastating counter-offensive against the Germans.

The Allied triumph in Libya has vastly strengthened the British control of the Mediterranean and has removed any immediate threat to Egypt.

This is a total war, the like of which the world never before has seen. It calls for total sacrifice—total unselfishness. In short, the certain way to victory is for every man, woman and child to jump in and fight like Hell, each after his own capabilities.

Battle of Resources.

We can't lose if we do that, because the United States, in particular, and the Allies, in general, are blessed with resources which can smother the Axis—if we utilize those resources to the utmost. Let me tell you a story to the point.

The other day a relative of mine discovered one of my old trunks which hadn't been opened since just after the world war and was believed lost. It was filled with treasured souvenirs of the great conflict and of visits to many countries. In going through these mementos, I found a little box filled with ordinary cement marbles and the way I got them was this:

On a September day of 1917, during the height of the war, I was walking across what had been the public square of the French city of Peronne, on the Somme. The fighting there had been terrific and even then the battle raged not far away. As I scuffled through the brick dust which was all that remained of the fine old town, I spied these marbles.

Poor little men and women, I thought to myself—and wondered what had become of the owners of these toys. Then I saw more and still more of the pellets, in fact so many that it became obvious they weren't marbles at all. Suddenly it dawned upon me what the find meant.

They were German shrapnel bells! The greatest fighting machine the world had ever known—the army which had overrun huge reaches of Europe—the force which couldn't be stopped—this mighty Power finally had been reduced to making shrapnel bullets out of concrete because of the lack of metal. British General Headquarters confirmed this and the jubilation was great, for it was a clear indication of what the end must be.

Army and Navy Communiques

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (AP).—A War Department communique:

1. PHILIPPINE THEATER: Military operations in the Lingayen Gulf area were limited to heavy artillery dueling. American and Philippine soldiers are defending a position along the Agno River.

Hostile aircraft was particularly active during the last twenty-four hours.

The War Department has been officially advised that the commanding general, United States Army forces in the Far East, had declared Manila an "open city."

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

An earlier communique from the War Department:

1. PHILIPPINE THEATER: From his headquarters in the field, General Douglas MacArthur, commanding the United States Army forces in the Far East, advises that he has reorganized and strengthened the positions held by our troops in the general vicinity of Lingayen Gulf. Repeated enemy assaults in this sector have been successfully resisted. Indications point to heavy reinforcement of Japanese troops in this area.

Brisk fighting is also reported from other fronts on the Island of Luzon.

DEC 27 1941

Heavy enemy air activity in the Philippines continues.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

A Navy Department communique:

FAR EAST: Press reports of United States submarine activities in the Far East on Christmas Day are confirmed. A dispatch from Admiral Hart states that one enemy transport and one mine sweeper have been sunk. An additional transport and one seaplane tender are probably sunk.

Manila has been declared an open city as defined in the Hague Convention (IV) of 1907, annex, article 25. Our forces have complied with the stipulations of that convention.

CENTRAL PACIFIC: Enemy reports that 3,000 naval and marine personnel were engaged in the defense of Wake Island are incorrect. The total strength of the garrison was less than 400 officers and men. There were approximately 1,000 civilians engaged in construction work on the island which may account for the enemy statement that 1,400 prisoners were captured.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

MANILA, Dec. 26 (AP).—A communique from the headquarters of the United States armed forces of the Far East:

There has been very heavy pressure by the enemy on the southeastern front. Tank battling on that front has resulted in heavy casualties on both sides.

On the northern (Lingayen) front, the enemy has confined himself to heavy and concentrated artillery fire.

Air activities over Manila have been very brisk for the last sixteen hours.

An earlier communique from the same headquarters:

On the southeastern front from Atimonan to Mauban (on Lamon Bay) enemy pressure is increasing.

The enemy air force is very active.

British

SINGAPORE, Dec. 26 (AP)—The British Far Eastern Command issued the following communiqué today:

The situation remains unchanged. There were engagements between patrols in the area of Sungei Siput, Perak and north of Kamaman in Trengganu.

There was no further news from Kuching.

Although isolated bodies in various stages of disorganization still remain around Barce and south of Bengazi, the bulk of the retreating enemy now appears to be in the Agedabia area.

North of Agedabia there is a certain amount of confused fighting in which our troops are taking a toll of enemy parties attempting to escape southward.

During this fighting six enemy tanks were knocked out yesterday and in addition three Italian tanks, eleven armored cars, eleven German light tanks, some German and Italian aircraft together with a considerable amount of material was found abandoned in the Barce area.

In the same general area, in addition to taking prisoners, we recovered a number of British wounded who were found in Italian hospitals.

In the frontier area an enemy detachment from one of the isolated garrisons near Solum attempted to make a sortie with the object of obtaining food and water. The attempt was defeated and four enemy light tanks were disabled.

A small vessel bringing supplies to Axis forces beleaguered at Halfaya was engaged by our field artillery. The vessel received direct hits, as a result of which it ran ashore, caught fire and was burned out.

Our Air Forces again carried out sweeps over the area of operations in support of our troops and continued attacks on enemy columns.

Over 13,000 German and Italian prisoners now have reached hospitals and prisoner-of-war camps in the area, in addition to which a large number still remain to be evacuated from the forward areas.

Concentrations of enemy motor transport, armored fighting vehicles and guns southwest of Agedabia were effectively attacked by our fighter aircraft yesterday and considerable damage was done.

Other enemy motorized units in the El Agheila area were bombed Wednesday night. Direct hits were obtained and a number of lorries destroyed.

Tuesday night objectives at Tripoli and Misurata were raided. At Tripoli direct hits were scored on the Karamanli Mole, while at Misurata bombs fell on barracks, motor transport parks, the ordnance depot and other military buildings. The fires which broke out were seen many miles from the target.

Formations of enemy aircraft which attempted to raid Malta Dec. 24 were intercepted by our fighters and two JU-88s were shot down. A third JU-88 was shot down by anti-aircraft gun defenses.

From these and other operations three of our aircraft are missing.

In the early part of last night enemy aircraft were active near the East Coast of England. Incendiary bombs were dropped at one place on the coast, but caused neither damage nor casualties.

A communiqué by the Home Security Ministry said tonight:

Two enemy fighters made a brief appearance over the Southeast Coast this morning. Slight damage was done at one point by cannon and machine-gun fire but no one was injured seriously.

Otherwise there has been nothing to report during daylight today.

Netherland

DEC 27 1941

During the area reported bombardment of an enemy concentration of ships by our army bombers near Kuching, the capital of Sarawak, a destroyer or a transport ship was sunk.

A bombardment of one of our airdromes in the Outer Possessions by a large number of Japanese bombers caused relatively little material damage. The airdrome, however, cannot be used for the time being. No people were killed or wounded. It has been stated already that one enemy bomber was shot down by the anti-aircraft.

Enemy planes have been seen over various towns in the Outer Possessions and in some cases pamphlets and leaflets with suggestive pictures were dropped in which in twisted English propagated the New Order.

discovered a Japanese seaplane circling around the wreckage of a burned-out and abandoned ship. Our plane attacked but the engagement was broken off because the Japanese plane escaped. The Netherlands naval plane got slightly damaged during the fight. Wreckage appeared to be a freighter of foreign nationality of about 6,000 tons.

DEC 27 1941

Russian

During the night of Dec. 25-26 our troops engaged the enemy on all fronts.

A unit commanded by Vronsky, which operates in one of the sectors of the Western Front, in five days' fighting dislodged the Germans from thirty populated places and captured forty-seven guns, fifty-six trucks, fifty-four motor cycles, seventy-six bicycles, fifteen heavy machine guns, eight mine-throwers and many other trophies.

In a violent engagement on the Southern Front Red Army men captured twenty-two machine guns, thirteen mine-throwers, seventeen guns, eight trucks, 11,000 cartridges, 1,000 shells and killed 700 enemy soldiers and officers.

One unit operating in one of the sectors of the Leningrad front in two days' fighting captured four German heavy guns, eighteen machine guns, fifteen mine-throwers, thirty automatic rifles, twenty-six trucks and a large quantity of ammunition.

A group of Red Army men commanded by Lieutenant Popoff in one recent encounter killed six German officers and over forty men. Popoff personally killed one officer and three soldiers.

During Dec. 26 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

On a number of sectors of the Western, Kalinin and Southwestern Fronts our troops fought fierce engagements with the enemy and continued to advance, occupying a number of localities, including the town of Naro Fominsk.

On Dec. 25 two German aircraft were destroyed.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 26 (From German broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The German High Command communiqué today follows:

Italian and Slovak troops in the Donets sector of the Eastern Front assisted in repelling enemy attacks, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

Numerous Soviet tanks have been destroyed.

The enemy here lost over 1,000 men and nineteen tanks, among which were heavy and monster tanks. Six further tanks were set on fire.

Units of the Air Force attacked enemy columns, troops' quarters and railway installations with bombs and machine guns and cannon fire in the central sector of the Eastern Front, as well as on the front before Leningrad.

In the battle against British supply shipping the Air Force last night sank off the English coast a freighter of 3,000 gross registered tons.

Four further large merchant ships were partly heavily damaged by bomb hits.

In North Africa fighting is continuing. Bengazi was evacuated according to plan and occupied by the enemy without fighting.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 26 (From Italian broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The Italian High Command today issued the following communiqué:

Our troops continued their previously planned movements in Western Cyrenaica, which the enemy, despite repeated attacks, was not able to hinder.

Bengazi, which had in fact been completely destroyed, as confirmed by the enemy radio, was occupied by Indian troops without resistance by our forces.

New enemy attacks in the Solum and Bardia areas were repulsed. The enemy lost several armored cars.

During a raid on Tripoli a British plane was shot down in flames by our fighters.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 26 (AP)—A Finnish military communiqué today said:

The enemy attacked our lines at a couple of points with a strength of one to two companies. The attacks were repulsed with machine-gun and trench-mortar fire.

Svir Front—Along the whole front weak enemy forces attempted to attack but were repulsed.

Eastern Front—In the southern sectors the enemy launched a couple of attacks with a strength of two to three companies. The attacks were repulsed with the enemy losing nearly 200 men killed. On other sectors there was the usual artillery and patrol activity.

Roosevelt Selects D. J. Winton As Minister—Also Nominates Marine Colonel For Promotion

DEC 27 1941

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—President Roosevelt today nominated David J. Winton, of Minnesota, to be the first American Minister to New Zealand.

Colonel Larsen, 51 years old, was born in Chicago, and his usual residence is listed as Denver, Col.

Since July, 1940, he has commanded the Eighth Regiment of the Second Marine Division. He served with that division in the American Expeditionary Force of the first World War. He has been in the service twenty-eight years.

SENATORS WEIGH BASIS FOR PEACE

Lucas Says Japan Should Be Reduced and Restrained for Period of 1,000 Years

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (AP)—Senators, looking ahead to ultimate victory over the Axis, are already discussing peace terms. Senator Lucas of Illinois said today that "Japan should be reduced to the point where for 1,000 years she will have no control or force in the family of nations."

"That goes for Germany and Italy, too," he told reporters.

"We can never have a lasting peace until Hitlerism and the philosophy which exists among the Axis powers are destroyed," he continued. "The peace we make is just as important as the war we are conducting."

"When we win the war," said Senator Davis of Pennsylvania, "we should put a steel wall around Japan." He added that this country should help make China a powerful, independent nation which could become "a stabilizing force in the Orient."

Senator Norris of Nebraska said he believed that the Allies first should disarm Germany, Italy and Japan, provide sufficient food to keep the inhabitants of those nations alive immediately after the cessation of hostilities and then work out a long-range peace program.

Senator Clark of Idaho, who opposed Administration foreign policies prior to American entrance into the war, said that "when we are able to negotiate a peace, one of the first things we must consider is giving all countries access to raw materials. Unless there is equal access to the materials that make for the comforts of life there will be an interminable series of wars."

From Senator McCarran, Democrat, of Nevada came a statement that in any peace treaty "we should take care of America first. Every other country is looking out for itself, and we should look out for ourselves."

Would Disintegrate Germany.

The Nevada Senator suggested that Germany be broken up into small states. "These old German states should be separated and kept separated," he continued. "But the peace should be written without hatred. It was the hatred written into the Treaty of Versailles that brought about present conditions."

Senator Van Nuys, Democrat, of Indiana, said he did not know of any peace terms which could be acceptable to the United States at present. Senator Bridges, Republican, of New Hampshire, took the same line, asserting "we've got to lick the Japs before we even think about peace."

Meanwhile, Senator George, Democrat, of Georgia, ranking member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared he saw no possibility that Germany could offer Russia any terms which would induce the Soviet to make a separate peace and leave this country and Great Britain and China to oppose the Axis alone.

NAZI ENVOYS TO U. S. HOUSED AT HOTEL

State Department Reports They Are Receiving Considerate Treatment

All Members Of Embassy Staff Are Now Living At White Sulphur Springs

DEC 27 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 26—All members of the German Embassy staff and their dependents have been housed comfortably at the Greenbriar Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and are receiving considerate treatment, the State Department said tonight.

The department has requested the American legation in Bern to inform the Swiss Government, for transmission to the German Government, of the conditions under which their embassy personnel and dependents are living.

Free Movements In Park

In particular, the following conditions apply:

1. The whole group is permitted freely to move about in an extensive area of park grounds outside the hotel. This arrangement includes the mineral springs.
2. The German charge d'affaires with his wife, can, upon request, also visit the town.
3. The representative of the Swiss legation is permitted free access to the German group at all times.
4. There is unrestricted two-way telephone communication at all times between the German group and the Swiss legation at Washington.
5. Postal communication between the Swiss legation and the German group is also permitted.

Reciprocal Treatment Basis

The department pointed out that since diplomatic relations were severed, the United States Government, under international law, has treated on a reciprocal basis the former representatives of the governments with which it is now at war.

The department understands that reciprocal treatment is being accorded the American diplomatic representatives in Germany.

Censor Names Press, Radio Aids

DEC 27 1941

Washington, D. C., Dec. 26 (AP).—Byron Price, director of censorship, announced today the appointment of John H. Sorrells of New York and John H. Ryan, of Toledo, Ohio, as assistant directors of consorship.

Sorrells is executive editor of the Scripps-Howard newspapers and Ryan is vice president and general manager of the Fort Industry Co., of Toledo, which owns and operates radio stations at Toledo, Wheeling and Fairmont, W. Va.; Atlanta, Ga., and Lima and Zanesville, Ohio.

Price said both Sorrells and Ryan were coming to Washington on leave of absence from their present positions, each at a considerable personal sacrifice.

"Sorrells is a newspaper man of wide experience and recognized ability," Price said. "Ryan is a practical radio executive and has the endorsement of the broadcasting industry."

TIRE RATIONING LIMITS SALES TO 7 GROUPS

Rule Bars Purchases Of New Ones Except For Essential Services

Henderson, Issuing Order, Urges Autoists To End Unnecessary Driving

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 26—All the nation's average motorists—including even traveling salesmen, taxi drivers and residents of isolated rural areas lacking other transportation—will be prohibited from buying new automobile tires, under eligibility requirements established today for the Government's new tire-rationing program.

The regulations, issued by Price Adminstrator Leon Henderson for the guidance of local tire-rationing boards which begin operating January 5, bar issuance of tire-purchase certificates except to owners of motor vehicles which fall within seven sharply defined classifications, covering essential services for health, safety and industrial and commercial operations.

Simultaneously, Henderson urged the millions of motorists who will be unable to buy new tires to stop unnecessary driving immediately and "double up" in driving to work.

Only Ones Available

Only retreaded, recapped or other used tires, on which no rationing limits have yet been set, will be available to them.

The regulations provide that purchase certificates for new tires may not be issued unless an applicant certifies that the tires or tubes sought "will be mounted" on:

1—Vehicles used by physicians, surgeons, visiting nurses or veterinarians, principally for professional services.

2—Ambulances.

For Fire And Police Use

3—Vehicles used "exclusively" for fire-fighting services, necessary public police services, enforcement of specific laws affecting public health and safety, garbage removal or other sanitation services, or mail delivery.

4—Vehicles with a capacity of ten or more passengers operated "exclusively" to carry passengers as part of "services rendered to the public by a regular transportation system," as school busses, or to carry employes to and from any industrial or mining establishment or construction project "except when public transportation facilities are readily available."

For Use Of Trucks

5—Trucks used "exclusively" for ice and fuel delivery, transportation of materials for construction and maintenance of public roads, public utilities or production facilities, defense housing and military establisnments; trucks used by essential roofing, plumbing, heating and electrical repair services, or waste and scrap dealers; by any common carriers; and for transporting raw materials, semi-manufactured goods and finished products —except that no certificates may be issued to transport such raw materials, semi-manufactured or finished goods "to the ultimate consumer for personal, family or household use."

6—Farm tractors or other farm implements — except automobiles or trucks — for which tires are essential to operation.

7—Industrial, mining and construction equipment — except auto nobiles and trucks—for which tires are essential to operation.

May Affect Newspapers

The prohibition against new tires for vehicles used to transport commodities directly to consumers was interpreted here as affecting such services as delivery of newspapers by automobile to suburban and rural subscribers—although newspaper delivery trucks within a city would not be involved since they carry a "finished product" to a dealer or distributor.

In connection with the ban against sale of tires for use on vehicles delivering to consumers, it was pointed out that while the prohibition applied to such vehicles as milk, bakery and department-store trucks, there were factors that could help relieve this situation.

Officials suggested informally that there could be a pooling of retail delivery facilities.

As an example, they said that as many as four or five milk trucks now delivered milk along one street and that it would be possible for the four or five companies to agree on one truck for the one route.

Have Stocks On Hand

They also said that at least some of the larger truck fleets had stocks of tires on hand which would carry them on for some time.

No exemptions other than those specified in the seven classifications of eligibles are provided for persons who use their automobiles in the daily conduct of their business.

Motorists and truck owners on the eligible list who seek new tires must fill out application forms. These forms then must be taken to an "inspector" —dealers or garage men appointed by the local rationing boards—who must inspect and report on the condition of the applicant's tires.

Needs To Be Certified

If the inspector finds the tire or tires are unsafe and cannot be repaired, reconditioned or retreaded, he will certify the need for a new tire to the local board. The board must then review and take final action on the application.

The Office of Price Administration will establish six quotas on the number of tires which may be sold within a State or county.

Henderson estimated recently that the nation's supply of new tires was sufficient to last about two months under normal, unrestricted demand.

DEC 27 1941

Production Halted

All production as well as sale of new tires and tubes has been halted temporarily, except to fill defense orders, and today's announcement said that only a "very small" supply of tires would be available for civilians after rationing begins.

"Few tires will be manufactured for civilian use until the rubber supply situation is cleared up," it added.

The war in the Pacific has cut off crude rubber imports from the Far East which annually accounts for nearly ninety-eight per cent. of the entire United States supply.

DANDELION RUBBER CALLED POSSIBILITY

Research Workers Find Russian Species May Solve U. S. Problem

Declare Plant Can Be Grown In America And Latex Produced In Bulk

London, Saturday, Dec. 27 (AP). Confronted with loss of Malayan rubber supplies as a result of Japanese invasion, the Ministry of Supply today prohibited further manufacture from rubber of a large number of articles ranging from corsets to golf tees and garden hose.

At the same time, the manufacture of many other rubber articles was made subject to licensing by the Ministry.

[By the Associated Press]

Columbus, Dec. 26—American farmers ~~may be~~ able to help solve a crude rubber shortage by large-scale cultivation of a rubber-bearing dandelion plant, agricultural researchers disclosed today.

Discovered in Russia, the plant known as kok-sagyz is grown there exclusively now. It resembles the dandelion of the United States and could be produced on American farms almost as easily and prolifically as that of its lawn-menacing cousin.

Those findings announced by the National Chemurgic Council, scientific agricultural research group, came as the United States' loss of its Far Eastern crude rubber supply grew more imminent in the light of Pacific war developments.

DEC 27 1941

More Readily Adapted

Dr. Paul J. Kolachov, who investigated the ~~possibilities~~ of new rubber supply sources in the United States for the council, reported that kok-sagyz could be more readily adapted to mass latex production than the bush-like guayule, now grown in southern California.

"Kok-sagyz is a highly adaptable plant," said Dr. Kolachov. "It is readily acclimatized and can be cultivated in a wide variety of soils. The rubber in this plant is easily utilized in manufacturing, as compared with that of other plants."

Roots from which the milky latex juice is derived can be harvested at the end of the first or second year. They yield 150 to 200 pounds of crude rubber an acre. Guayule produces about 300 pounds an acre, but only after four or five years of cultivation.

Needs 20 Inches Of Rain

Kok-sagyz develops a maximum yield on highly structural black soil in localities with at least twenty inches of rainfall yearly distributed heavily in April, May, July and September.

The United States, which uses half the world's rubber supply, will increase synthetic rubber production to about 70,000 long tons next year, far below the normal consumption of nearly a half million tons.

Farm research men said the United States undoubtedly could cultivate the dandelion plant and produce crude rubber for considerably less than the 40 to 50 cents a pound production cost for synthetic rubber.

"Unlimited acreage and 30,000,000 farmers are available to us," added Dr. Kolachov. "A comparatively small fraction of these resources is required to secure a domestic supply of rubber for war and peace requirements. The means has been found; the application is vital."

New York, Dec. 26 —War has created four major problems for the oil industry—production of aviation gasoline, toluene for T. N. T., synthetic rubber and transportation—The Lamp, Standard Oil Company (N. J.) publication, said today.

(1) The industry must treble facilities for making 100 octane gasoline for airplanes, The Lamp said. The Government anticipates a need for 150,000 barrels daily of this type fuel. The industry could meet this extraordinary demand only by the construction of new facilities.

(2) Demand for supplies of toluene, used in the manufacture of T. N. T., has increased enormously. The petroleum industry has placed the requisite raw materials and its technical staff at the disposal of the Government, which is financing needed expansion.

(3) Synthetic rubber is a petroleum industry responsibility, The Lamp said, because the raw materials are found in large part in natural gases and refinery gases produced along with petroleum and its products. To offset the possible loss of raw rubber supplies from the Netherlands East Indies the Government has projected the financing of synthetic rubber plants capable of an initial production of some 40,000 tons per year.

(4) Adequate transportation must be supplied to carry oil across the seas to our ships, airplanes and submarines wherever they are stationed, as well as to our allies, the report added. By the fourth quarter of 1942 tanker tonnage in the allied countries is expected to reach the equivalent of 2,700,000 dead-weight tons annually, which would be well in excess of any tanker losses which Axis aircraft and submarines have been able to inflict so far.

There was, The Lamp also disclosed, a new policy affecting oil-company employes who enter the armed services. The company will make a lump sum payment of two months' wages to such employes, and pay dependents the difference between the employe's salary and service pay provided this payment by the company does not exceed 50 per cent. of the employe's normal company pay.

1917 ACT IS CITED IN SABOTAGE CASE

U. S. Appeals Court Refers To Intent Of Congress In Upholding Convictions

Two Of Italian Ships Involved Were Tied Up In Baltimore Harbor

DEC 27 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Richmond, Dec. 26—The intent of a Congressional act passed shortly after the United States entered World War I was cited in an opinion handed down in the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals here today affirming lower court convictions in Italian ship sabotage cases, two of the ships having been in Baltimore harbor.

"The purpose of the section was not to protect the owners of vessels against the malicious acts of others, but to protect the vessels themselves, as instrumentalities usable in the vital foreign commerce of the country, from destruction or injury by any one," Senior Justice John J. Parker said, in the opinion.

Cites Reaction In 1917

"Fresh in the mind of Congress in 1917 must have been the acts of the crews of German vessels in American ports, who, shortly prior to the passage of the act, had been guilty of dismantling the machinery of the vessels and doing other acts to render them practically worthless."

Three separate cases were incorporated i nthe one opinion. Appellants were forty-one officers and crew members of the Italian vessels Pietro Campanella and Euro, anchored in Baltimore harbor, and the Villarperosa, anchored at Wilmington. The men were arrested when FBI men raided the ships March 30.

Grounds For Appeal

The defendants appealed on the grounds that the statute under which they were tried should not apply, the bills of indictment were insufficient, the evidence was insufficient in that it failed to show criminal intent and the convictions violated the Fifth Amendment.

Tried in the district court at Baltimore, Capt. Paolo Pieraccini, of the Euro, and Capt. Luigi Schiaffino, of the Pietro Campanella, each were given three years and twenty-nine members of the ships' crews received sentences ranging from three months to two years.

Tried at Wilson, N. C., Capt. Adriano Merlano Bersio and First Mate Carlo Novella, of the Villarperosa, were sentenced to three years each, and eight crew members were given eighteen months each.

Defense Plant Employe Held For Sabotage

FBI Reports Suspect Placed Piece Of Steel In Mill At Louisville Company

DEC 27 1941

Louisville, Dec. 26 (AP)—Arrest of Wan[illegible] Virgil Skelton, 22, of Louisville, for sabotage at one of the local plants of the Reynolds Metals Company, producing defense materials, was announced today by Herbert K. Moss of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Moss said Skelton stated to FBI agents "that he placed a piece of steel between rollers of a mill producing national defense materials, with the result that this mill was damaged, causing the particular mill to be taken temporarily out of operation for repairs. It curtailed defense production."

The FBI reported Skelton is a native of Warrick county, Indiana, and had been employed at the aluminum sheet rolling mills of the Reynolds Company since January. The prisoner pleaded guilty before Ray Kirchdorfer, United States Commissioner, who held him under $25,000 bond.

Major Davis Going to Argentina

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (AP)—Major Sherlock Davis of Brooklyn, now on duty at headquarters, Washington, Provisional Brigade, was ordered by the War Department today to duty as assistant military attaché at Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Ambassador To Cuba On Way To Washington

G. S. Messersmith To Go Then To Mexico City To Succeed Josephus Daniels

Miami, Fla., Dec. 26 (AP)—George S. Messersmith, United States Ambassador to Cuba, left for Washington today on the way to Mexico City, where he will succeed the retiring Ambassador Josephus Daniels.

Messersmith said Cuba showed its intention of standing with the United States by declaring war promptly on the Axis. He predicted the island republic would be steadfast.

The Ambassador urged that morale be maintained, despite early setbacks in the war. "Remember," he said, "the Axis powers were ready for this war; had been preparing for years. We're in it now and we are Americans. The answer should be self-evident," Messersmith will reach Washington by train early tomorrow for conferences with Cordell Hull, Secretary of State.

HARMON MAY HEAD AIR COMBAT FORCE

DEC 27 1941

He Is Reported Chosen to Succeed Emmons.

Washington, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Major-Gen. Millard F. Harmon, veteran flyer, was reported reliably today to have been chosen to head the Army Air Force Combat Command and thus to be general field director of army air fighting operations.

Gen. Harmon, recently commander of the Second Air Force with headquarters at Fort George Wright, Wash., would succeed Lieut.-Gen. Delos C. Emmons, who has been put in charge of Hawaii's defenses.

An Air Force officer since he flew into Mexico with the 1916 punitive expedition, Gen. Harmon is 53 years old and a graduate of the Military Academy.

How was Japan able to conceal from the world the extent of her preparedness? Glenn Babb, veteran of many years' service as a correspondent in the Far East, tells for Wide World News how this secrecy was accomplished.

By GLENN BABB.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—No matter what further surprises the Japanese may spring in this war, they will produce no secret weapon half as effective as secrecy itself.

No midget submarines or other innovations of war can approach, in deadliness, the utter surprise of that first blow at Pearl Harbor.

The same is true in less degree of the preparations for the conquest of Hongkong, the first drive into Malaya and the landings on the Philippines, all of which surpassed in numbers employed, efficiency of staff work and quality of weapons the expectations of the Anglo-Saxon powers.

The Japanese owe all this to the most effective veil of secrecy that any modern nation has been able to throw about its military projects. Nearly the entire nation of 70,000,000 people had been mobilized in the greatest counter-espionage effort of history.

Reds and Nazis Boasted.

The accomplishments of the German and Russian Armies have stunned or electrified the world, but of these ample warning was given. The Germans boasted of their might, hoping to make an ally of fear. Even the Russians were given to parading their new weapons through the Red Square for foreign military men to see.

Not so the Japanese. During four and a half years of war in China they kept their best divisions hidden in Manchukuo, their battlefleet inactive, and gave demonstrations of military ineptitude in China that made many experts assay their land and air forces as second rate.

Behind the curtain, the Japanese Army and Navy elaborated a tremendous plot against the Anglo-Saxon world, of proportions that would have seemed fantastic had they been disclosed before December 7.

The purpose of the Japanese military clique, to drive the white man out of East Asia, had its inception at least a generation ago. Even while Japan was the ally of Britain and the United States in the first World War, some of her generals and admirals were plotting to make Nippon the mistress of the whole Orient, a program which involved tossing the Occidentals out.

Simmered Down After War.

Tokio made the first passes at mastery of China and Russian Siberia in the years 1915-1919, while the Anglo-Saxons were engaged elsewhere. But when the war was over, leaving the United States the world's greatest military power with a rapidly-growing navy, the Japanese were prevailed upon to forgo their expansionist ambitions and for nearly a decade liberal governments ruled Tokio.

Before this change of heart, the Japanese navy had embarked on a tremendous "eight-eight" building program—eight huge battleships and eight battlecruisers, some of 40,000 or 50,000 tons. The Washington conference put this in the discard, but in 1931 the generals ended civilian control of imperial policy by seizing Manchuria and committing the empire to a new expansionist program, and soon the admirals found ways to revive their long-silent dockyards.

The beginning of the China War in 1937 removed all restrictions on the militarists and placed at their disposal just about all the funds they could spend. Industry was harnessed, the whole people regimented, all agencies of information and propaganda drafted for the tremendous effort to prepare for the day.

Two Big Anti-Spy Assets.

Westerners may well wonder how such deep secrecy could wrap an undertaking so vast, how 40,000 or 50,000-ton fighting ships could be hidden away, millions of men armed and armadas of shipping made ready.

But the Japanese have two tremendous counter-espionage assets to begin with. Their language is the most difficult used by any major people, in practice almost a secret code of which knowledge is shared by only a handful of foreigners. And the Occidental in Japan is a marked man by the very color of his skin; a foreign agent has two strikes on him before he begins.

For years foreigners have been barred from certain zones, and elsewhere their most innocent travels and activities have been spied on and fully reported to the police. The Japanese people, naturally secretive and suspicious, lent themselves readily to the anti-spy campaign, at the same time satisfying an all-pervading, childlike curiosity.

Foreign Outlets Corked.

Japanese translators for foreign embassies and news correspondents were told forcefully by the gendarmerie how far they could go in letting the white man know what was in the Japanese press.

This was more effective than it appears, because only a very few Occidentals have a reading knowledge of Japanese. Most of these are missionaries who in order not to jeopardize their own work have avoided involvement in political or military matters.

Foreign naval and military attaches — especially the Americans and Britons—have worked almost entirely in the dark for the last 10 years. Their visits to the big naval bases or army centers have been confined to brief ceremonial occasions and then they were kept carefully away from those sections where real work was in progress.

Another factor has been the racial solidarity of the Japanese, the lack of traitors willing to sell their country's secrets to the alien. From time to time an American or British naval man would be approached by a shady individual professing readiness to deliver maps or plans, but the Americans followed the rule of always turning these over to the authorities—on the theory that such persons would turn out to be government agents.

"Economic Sabotage" a Catchall.

As war preparations gained momentum and the day of action approached the wall of secrecy was reinforced by laws against "economic sabotage," which would cover almost any form of inquiry into the state of the nation. Half a dozen prominent British residents were arrested on such charges in 1939 and held for months of rigorous imprisonment which ended their careers in Japan.

American newspaper correspondents found it inadvisable to keep files of any sort beyond the dispatches sent through the Japanese censorship. The arrest of a British colleague and his death—officially labeled suicide—while in custody pointed to the wisdom of this precaution.

Even foreign technicians who were engaged to install machinery or supervise processes used in the military effort had to go about their work almost blindfolded. They were confined to small areas of the factories in which they worked and made to go to and fro by carefully designated routes from which nothing could be seen. Even Germans have complained of such treatment.

All this secrecy at home was complemented by a vast espionage and fifth-column organization extending to all the shores of the Pacific and beyond. Some of this was poorly concealed. The Japanese naval officer who turned mess boy in a white man's club or fisherman along the American Pacific Coast has been a half-joke for a decade.

It All Comes Out Now.

We knew there were dngerous fifth columns in Hawaii and at Davao in the Philippines, that Japanese were showing a strange enthusiasm for level farmlands in Central America near the Panama Canal.

But the war has shown how sinister all this was. Secretary Knox said the Hawaii fifth column surpassed anything of its kind except perhaps in Norway. The little soda-pop peddler of Aparri becomes Maj. Hara of his imperial Japanese majesty's army. Fishermen on the Cuban and Costa Rican coasts are seized as spies. Japanese cotton pickers in New Guinea and merchants in Borneo have to be "rounded up."

Everywhere through the South Seas the Japanese spread their shopkeepers who made no money, their ubiquitous camera shops, their barbers—more persuasive, even, than the Nazi "tourists" who swarmed through Europe.

The first weeks of the Pacific war have produced many weird stories of Japanese secret weapons, the two-man submarines of Pearl Harbor, one-man tanks, parachute troops, special landing boats.

Strength Now Exposed.

But the most important secret was the extent and thoroughness of their preparation and their readiness to risk it all in a gamble that staggers the imagination.

Their first blows indicated that they had more strength in aircraft carriers and naval planes than had been expected; that some of their planes were German Messerschmitts—perhaps made in Japan under German supervision—and that they were able to send tanks into action thousands of miles away from home.

The Americans and British have yet to learn whether there are Japanese counterparts of the great battleship Bismarck ranging the Eastern seas, whether the Japanese really have built pocket battleships for raiding the distant reaches of the Pacific, whether they have developed a really formidable armored force and whether the experts have underestimated their capacity for training and equipping with modern weapons of an army greater than the 2,000,000 at which their strength had been estimated.

Reserves Still a Mystery.

Another question to be answered is whether the striking force displayed in the first weeks means the Japanese are shooting the works—all their best weapons—in their desperate effort to win quickly, whether the Messerschmitt and tanks encountered in Malaya are only the forerunners of hundreds or thousands still in reserve.

The depth of Japan's reserves of weapons and her productive capacity are mysteries still to be solved.

Certainly, however, Japan has neither the industrial strength nor the materials to match the American effort when it reaches flood tide.

MANILA, Dec. 26.—Douglas MacArthur, son of a general and a four-star general in his own right, is probably the coolest man in Manila these days as he directs the defenses of the Philippines.

Even when the thud of Japanese bombs and the bark of anti-aircraft fire penetrate to the heart of his headquarters, the general spurns air raid shelters and continues to study the war maps which cover the walls and desks of his spacious office.

When an aide suggested the American flag on the headquarters might serve as a guide to enemy airmen MacArthur said the now historic words:

"Take every other normal precaution for protection of the headquarters, but let the flag flying."

And as he studies war plans, Gen. MacArthur paces back and forth—a MacArthur trait that some might call nerves, but I name it habit, having known the general over a period of years.

When he devised Philippine defense plans six years ago he told me he wasn't saying the Philippines could be defended successfully against invasion by a major power, but that he could make the conquest of the islands so costly in money and ships that any major power would hesitate to attempt large-scale invasion.

From the start of hostilities he has indicated the enemy couldn't induce him to waste manpower or ammunition at isolated invasion points; that he would hit back hard when any invasion became a definite threat. And he did.

The other day he passed me in his automobile near Army headquarters. He gave me a broad smile as I saluted with a two-finger V, and he came back snappily with both hands displaying a double V.

Today, at 62, Gen. MacArthur appears much younger. He has changed little physically since the days of World War I and his tour of duty as chief of staff.

The general always has been proud of the MacArthur family military record. Time and again he has reminded me that he is a professional soldier.

But this man from Wisconsin is far more than that. To those who know him personally he is a family man who adores his wife and makes a hobby of his young son, Arthur, 3½ years old and named after his grandfather.

Like a true Army wife, Mrs. MacArthur, the former Jean Faircloth of Murfreesboro, Tenn., has declined to move to safer hinterlands. She remains at home with her son and the general spends his few free hours with them.

Manila Mass Of Flame After 3-Hour Bombing

Buildings, Piers, Ships Destroyed

DEC 28 1941

By R. P. Cronin, Jr.,
Associated Press Staff Correspondent

Manila, Dec. 27—A large area of Manila's ancient walled city was a roaring mass of flames tonight as the Japanese air force answered Gen. Douglas MacArthur's proclamation that this capital was an open city with a devastating rain of death and destruction.

Baguio Still Holding

And while waves of glistening bombers methodically roared over the stricken city, reports reached it that the Japanese, advancing more than thirty miles, had driven down the corridor leading south toward Manila from their beach-head at Damortis. One report, telephoned to the Manila Bulletin, said they were at Moncada, about eighty-three miles north of Manila, and other sources said they had pushed still another five miles and captured Paniqui.

Baguio, the Commonwealth's summer capital, was still in American hands up to this morning, high military sources said, and was being defended by American regulars guarding roads leading both north and south into the mountains from the shore of Lingayen Gulf. The defenders included a Negro regiment which withdrew to the mountains after fighting Japanese landings Monday and Tuesday.

Fire and bombs ruined many of Manila's most ancient religious institutions, but by sundown the flames appeared to have been confined to an area of about six blocks.

Fifty Dead, Scores Wounded

The dead among Manila's more than 600,000 inhabitants were estimated tentatively at about fifty, and scores of others were wounded—most of them by a direct hit on the roof of the Treasury building.

From atop the Manila Hotel on the bay front, this correspondent watched squadron after squadron of twin-engined bombers attack the undefended city in a leisurely raid which lasted 3 hours 17 minutes.

All their targets were in a half-mile radius around the hotel, where several hundred Americans and Britons were sheltered.

Port's Last Sizable Ships Sunk

For the first two and a half hours, the Japanese attacked the harbors and piers. They came in circling waves in groups of nine, then nine more, another nine, then eight and finally seven, picking one target after another and going back to it if they missed the first time.

After several attempts, they scored direct hits on two freighters of about 3,000 tons each anchored off the piers. These two ships, the last sizable ocean-going vessels in Manila, sank within an hour. One capsized. The other slowly settled. It was not known whether there were any persons aboard.

Piers And College Blasted

The planes then attacked the piers themselves, doing heavy damage and sinking four Philippine Government Coast Guard cutters.

Besides the churches and Treasury, bombs fell squarely on other Government buildings.

One college building was hit in the walled city. Also in that area bombs dropped close to a hospital.

A church (identified by an NBC broadcaster as the ancient Church of Santo Domingo) was smashed by one direct hit.

City's Longest Raid

This afternoon's attack was the longest and heaviest in Manila's three weeks of war.

One wave of seven raiders, flying very low, scored a direct hit on the Commonwealth building near the Pasig river and set fire to a near-by inter-island ship. These bombings were near the Escolta, Manila's most prominent business street.

Ten persons were reported killed in the Commonwealth building, and an undetermined number of firemen died in a bombed fire station.

Heavy Blasts At Fortress

So numerous were the swarms of raiders that the populace began to feel that the Japanese had turned loose most of their air power upon the city.

Flying in from the north, the planes first crossed the city in waves of seven, nine or twelve each; then headed westward over Manila Bay toward the island fortress of Corregidor.

36 Bombers In Sight At Once

Then the blasts came closer as the Japanese began to bomb ships on the bay, and finally the planes were back over Manila itself.

From the Associated Press lookout post, three waves totaling thirty-six planes were in sight at one time, two flying westward, one north. Several minutes later two more waves appeared from the north.

The bombers roared over without any opposition whatever only a day after General MacArthur, commander of the American and Filipino forces defending the Philippines, proclaimed the city an open one n the hope of savng it from raids.

Four Other Towns Raided

Undetermined casualties also were reported in the bombing of four towns below Manila in Laguna province. They were Santa Cruz, Calamba and Los Banos, all on a railroad running north to the capital, and Calauan, just below Los Banos.

Manila had five raid alarms yesterday and bombs fell in various areas around the open zone. During the fifth alarm seventeen planes flew over, apparently in an endeavor to test the declaration that the city was no longer defended. They met no opposition.

Raid alarms then had sounded in Manila at 8.27 this morning, but no Japanese planes appeared over the city at that time. The all-clear came at 9.11 A. M. Reports said a wave of Japanese planes visited the abandoned Nichols Field area, which presumably was included in the open zone.

Old Walled City Described

Intramuros—the walled Spanish city where much of the important civilian damage was done in today's mass raid—is only a mile in length and half a mile in width, but it is the historical, artistic, ecclesiastical and architectural center of the metropolis.

CONDITIONS FOR HOLDING MANILA OPEN CITY COME AFTER FIERCEST BOMBING

Heart Of City Left Aflame, With More Than 50 Killed, As Planes Make Leisurely Attack On Undefended Area

DEC 28 1941

By R. P. CRONIN, JR.
Associated Press Correspondent

Manila, Sunday, Dec. 28—The Japanese bombed undefended Manila savagely for more than three hours Saturday, leaving the heart of the capital in flames, and then belatedly offered to consider the city open on condition that the Filipino army "cooperate" with them and "cease all resistance."

This manifesto was broadcast by the Tokyo radio and addressed to President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines as bomb-pocked Manila heard the heartening word that reinforcements have been dispatched to outnumbered defenders battling Japanese invaders bearing down from both the north and south.

[A CBS broadcast from Manila said the Japanese offered by radio to consider Manila an open city on two conditions: First, removal of all military camps and establishments from the city, and second, that Filipino forces cooperate with the Japanese invaders and halt all resistance.]

Greeted With Scorn And Derision

The Tokyo broadcast, which demanded that the Filipino army "cooperate with the Japanese army and cease all resistance," was greeted with scorn and derision by Filipino listeners. The Filipinos are taking a major role in defense of the islands against the invaders.

It came over the air in English, Tagalog (Filipino dialect) and Spanish as Manila residents angrily watched red pyramids of fire rising into the skies from the heart of their bombed capital.

Waited For Stripping Of Defenses

The Japanese airmen, waiting until the city had been stripped of its anti-aircraft guns and other defenses in accordance with Gen. Douglas MacArthur's declaration of Manila as an open city, swarmed overhead shortly before noon Saturday and in an almost leisurely assault laid waste entire blocks of the historic walled town of Spanish churches and schools, buildings of the Commonwealth Government and sections of the modern shop district.

There were fifty known dead and no one would venture a guess as to how many more might be buried under the tumbled and flaming buildings.

Mayor Tightens Control

While flames shot skyward last night Mayor Juan Nolasco met with city authorities to formulate means of maintaining order.

City officials also took steps to tighten Manila's conformity to the definition of an open city under international law.

Police and constabularymen were ordered to cease firing their sidearms at Japanese planes circling overhead. This futile gesture was observed during a visit of Japanese planes Friday night.

DEC 28 1941

Details were lacking meanwhile on the strength of reinforcements sent to the northern and southern fronts, where heavy fighting continued.

Japanese Advance Reported

In the southern sector, a Japanese advance guard moving west from Mauban, on Lamon Bay, was said to have reached Luisiana, eighteen miles inland, while another detachment moving inland from Atimonan was said to have reached Sariaya, twenty-eight miles to the west.

The latter is only eight miles northwest of Lucena, capital of Tayabas province, and reports said the provincial capital had been transferred to Dolores.

Engineers, meanwhile, were said to be dynamiting bridges in the line of the Japanese advance.

In the raid on Manila scores of men and women—firemen at their posts, Government employes, nuns in the ancient convent quarters—were killed and wounded.

Demand Fight To Finish

Crowds of indignant civilians, watching the flames sweep through the dry wooden buildings of the walled town, demanded a "fight to the finish"—with the open-city declaration revoked and troops and anti-aircraft batteries brought back to defend the capital.

For the first two and a half hours the Japanese attacked the harbor and piers. They came in circling waves—in groups of nine, nine, nine, eight and seven—smashing at one target after another, then wheeling back to get it if they missed the first time.

One squadron then roared in from the bay over the walled town and dropped about ten bombs, one of which scored a direct hit on the roof of the Treasury building and accounted for most of the casualties. Their target might have been ships in the Pasig river, but the majority of the bombs fell within the mile-square walled town which runs from the waterfront to the river.

Direct Hit On Church

Three bombs struck the Santa Domingo church, which dates back to 1588, and others scored direct hits on the Santa Rosa girls' primary school and the Santa Satalina girls' secondary school. They crashed down on the ancient roofs, their explosions blowing out the walls of nearby buildings and filling the streets with wreckage.

Casualties would have fibeen far greatr but for the fact that the schools were closed when the war started and many inhabitants of the walled town were eveacuated when Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his staff left Fort Santiago in complying with the terms of the open-city declaration.

Even as the silver-winged bombers circled and struck ceaselessly for three hours and seventeen minutes starting just before noon Japanese land forces driving from the north were said to have thrust within eighty miles of the hard-hit capital.

30-Mile Advance Reported

One report telephoned to the Manila Bulletin said the steadily reinforced Japanese had advanced more than thirty miles down the mountain-bordered corridor from their beach-head near Damortis.

One source said the Japanese had reached Moncada, eighty-three miles north of Manila, and another said they were at Paniqui, five miles closer to the capital.

Heavy pressure also continued against American and Filipino defense forces southeast of Manila in the Lamon Bay area near Atimonan.

Dem. Baguio Is Lost

High military forces said the Philippine summer capital at Baguio, seventeen miles northeast of Damortis, still was being held this morning by American regulars.

The terrific aerial attack on Manila came only a day after Gen. Douglas MacArthur officially declared it an open city to spare its 600,000 residents. Its movable guns were taken away, its garrison removed and other defense equipment that could not be removed was destroyed.

Japanese planes scouted the city at low altitude later yesterday, unopposed, on their way to attacks on near-by military objectives.

Today, coming in waves of seven to twelve planes, they brought destruction first to the harbor area and then death and ruin to the city itself.

Old Walled City Battered

The old walled city near long abandoned Fort Santiago, the near-by Treasury and Commonwealth buildings, and business areas of the newer city section alike were battered by explosives.

At sundown flames still ate their way through almost six blocks of the ecclesiastic and cultural center within the 300-year-old Spanish wall.

Manila's oldest churches and her domed cathedral. Along its crooked streets are the University of Santo Tomas which the Dominicans established in 1611 and Santa Clara convent which was founded in 1621.

Improvised Shelter Hit

Just outside the Intramuros are the bomb-hit Treasury building, where many were feared killed in an improvised shelter, and other buildings of the Government.

Near by are the modern hotels, the theaters and the escolta, Manila's combination Wall Street and Fifth Avenue.

At the start of the raid, when the bombers concentrated on the harbor area, piers were battered and two freighters of about 3,000 tons each sank after direct hits. Four Philippine Government Coast Guard cutters also were sent to the bottom.

Heavy explosions were heard from far across the water in the direction of the guarding island fortress of Corregidor, but mist obscured the results of the attack.

4 Towns List Casualties

Japanese raiders also struck elsewhere in the provinces and casualties of undetermined number were reported from four towns in Laguna Province, south of Manila.

These were Santa Cruz, Calamba and Los Banos on the southern side of Laguna Lake, and Calauan, just south of Los Banos.

"Asked To Do Impossible"

Silen said the rain of bombs on the defenseless city started at 11.45 A. M. and continued without halt until 3.15 P. M.—a three-and-a-half-hour attack.

He ascribed the bombing to the presence of non-combatant ships in Manila waters when the city was declared open.

"We were asked to do the impossible," he said. "We were expected to move ships out of the bay and Pasig river even though there were no crews to move them—ships which have not the slightest military value: Lumber schooners, small river craft, an inter-island schooner or two. . . ."

Silen reported that thirty-six bombers started the raid, striking first at the ships in the harbor and setting some of them afire.

He said he learned later that at least six ships there and at the piers were hit.

Treasury Building Hit

The piers, too, were damaged and a roadway and surrounding buildings were hit, he said.

Silen said bombers later came over the city. That was when the 350-year-old Santo Domingo church was hit and set aflame and the Philippine Treasury Building, across the street from the church, was his directly. "Casualties were high in there," Silen said.

Says the Enemy—

BERLIN (Official Broadcast Recorded by the AP) — A dispatch from Japanese-controlled Shanghai yesterday said that yesterday morning's Japanese bombing raid on Manila "was particularly directed against the harbor district."

Japs Hit Major's Car Bomb Burns $32,500

Manila, Dec. 27.—(AP.)—Major Generoso Reyes of the Philippine Army withdrew 65,000 pesos (about $32,500) for Army use from the Treasury Building and put it into his car.

A few minutes later the sirens started and the bombing of Manila began.

The Treasury Building was smashed.

Major Reyes's car was completely burned and the money in it charred to ashes.

Raid Kills U. S. Fireman's Son

MANILA, Dec. 28 (Sunday) (AP).—William Barker, nineteen-year-old son of Herbert Barker, only remaining American in the Philippines fire service, was killed yesterday when a Japanese aerial bomb struck the San Fernando fire station, at the mouth of the Pasig River. Chief Barker and his daughter, Elsie, were injured.

taken across to the Philippines the same practices of fiendishness they inflicted on China.

Wheeler Scores Attack

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mont.), one of the Administration's chief critics in recent years, said the bombing of Manila demonstrated that "we face only a half-civilized race and in the future they have to be treated as such."

"My only regret is that we do not have the bombs and the bombers to bomb hell out of Tokyo, Kobe and other Japanese cities," Wheeler told reporters. "We have given them away."

He added that the "time will come when we can bomb them and we will retaliate by making a shambles out of their cities. I'd certainly show them no mercy."

A plainly-worded caluse in the Hague convention of 1907 which Japan's representatives signed, expressly outlawed such attack on civilians as the bombardment of Manila.

Article 25 of the regulations said:

"The attack or bombardment, by whatever means, of towns, villages, dwellings, or buildings which are undefended is prohibited."

This was the clause invoked by the navy in yesterday's communique which said that "Manila has been declared an open city as defined in the Hague convention (V) of 1907, annex, Article 25."

American Government authorities took the position that the War and Navy departments' statements reinforcing the formal proclamation of General MacArthur, constituted ample notification, in view of the speed and certainty of modern communications. Communiques are freely broadcast and presumably are transcribed in Tokyo.

DEC 28 1941

Other Measures Unknown

Whether other measures were taken to make sure that the Japanese were put on notice could not be ascertained immediately.

When Paris was threatened by the advancing Nazi armies eighteen months ago, the French Government went to the extreme of sending notice to the Germans through American diplomatic channels that the city would not be defended.

Once troops and weapons were withdrawn from Manila the Philippine capital lacked further means of military defense. In the walled inner city, which was the target of the most savage Japanese air attacks, were situated General MacArthur's former headquarters — the historic, Spanish-built Fort Santiago—and the "post of Manila," barracks of the Thirty-first Infantry, but these have no fixed defenses, officials said.

Forts 20 Miles Away

The nearest fixed fortifications are more than twenty miles distant at the entrance to Manila Bay and were designed to deny this waterway to a foe coming in from the South China Sea rather than to defen dthe city from land attack.

The War Department, in its field manuel issued for the guidance of commanders in military operations, directs meticulous observance of The Hague international agreements.

Would Burn Them Off Earth

"Their cities are open to attack, when we are ready, that will burn them off the face of the earth, and that is what they are coming to," Norris said.

High officials, naturally, said nothing of retaliation, but Secretary Hull unreservedly denounced the attack, declaring the Japanese had taken to the Philippines the same practices of fiendishness they had inflicted on China.

Consistent Record, Says Hull

It was all part, he said, of a consistent Japanese record of employing the same barbaric methods, the same methods of cruelty and inhumanity as Hitler practices.

The sheer wantonness of the Japanese attack came as a shock to this capital despite the fresh memories of Pearl Harbor.

Qualified authorities said the savage bombardment gained the Japanese no military advantage whatever.

Manila harbor has been virtually useless ever since the first invasion moves were made nearly three weeks ago, as the Japanese control the South China Sea.

Army Took Supplies

The capital was the supply and communication center of Luzon and much of the rest of the archipelago, but the army, in quitting the city, took with the troops the most-needed supplies.

The civil authorities left with the military, so Manila no longer was the political capital. It remained important as the hub of railways, highways and telegraph lines, but these facilities presumably were abandoned for military use when Gen. Douglas MacArthur moved out his troops.

The powerful permanent fortifications at the entrance of Manila Bay —Fort Mills on Corregidor Island, and Fort Hughes and Fort Drum near by—are twenty-five miles or more distant from the city.

Warn Against Early Move

Mingled with the talk at the Capitol of retaliation were warnings against too early attempts by this country to take the offensive.

"The Japanese have placed themselves in a position where ultimately they will reap what they have sown," Senator Austin (Rep., Vt.) said. "We are going to move as rapidly as feasible to protect those people over there and in due time the Japanese will get what is coming to them."

He recalled, however, that Winston Churchill, Great Britain's Prime Minister, had warned against half-way measures in his address to Congress, Friday.

Cautioned By George

In this connection, Senator George (Dem., Ga.) said that this country should not permit its resentment at Japanese "treachery" to goad it into ill-advised action.

"This is a war of intense preparation and thorough planning," he said. "We have got to fix our long-range objective and hope that public opinion will permit us to move steadily toward those objectives without pressing us into action on fronts where we are not ready."

DEC 28 1941

Senator Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) said he was sorry that the United States did not now have "the bombs and the bombers to bomb hell out of Tokyo, Kobe and other Japanese cities." The equipment had been produced, he said, but "given away."

"The time will come," he declared, "when we can bomb them and we will retaliate by making a shambles out of their cities. I would certainly show them no mercy."

Eyewitness Account: Bombing Of Manila

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 27—Bert Silen, National Broadcasting Company correspondent in Manila, reported today that casualties were high and still uncounted in the Japanese bombing of Manilla the day after it was declared officially an undefended city.

Silen reported that from a vantage point he saw the ancient Santo Domingo Church go up in flames and said fires started by the bombs were threatening the entire old walled city area.

"Great Fires Burning"

In his report, made after dark, he declared "There is little need for a blackout here tonight. A bright moon is shining—and its color is tinged with red. All around us great fires are burning."

He added that "the dead and injured are not yet counted, but we know that the casualties are high."

Government workers, caught by the raid, were believed to have taken shelter there.

"Hardly had the dust cleared," the NBC correspondent reported, "than another flight of bombers flew over the same spot—and again another salvo of bombs found their mark in the old church and the convent adjoining.

"Help Must Come"

"Flames started to leap upward and from then until now these old, revered landmarks are a raging inferno. . . ."

Silen said "the cry is for help—help from America," and added:

"And if this does not come soon, all of us have resigned ourselves to the inevitable."

Hull Brands Raid Barbaric, Inhuman

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—Secretary of State Cordell Hull declared today that Japan, in bombing the "open city" of Manila, was practicing the same barbaric methods of cruelty and inhumanity that Hitler has been using in Europe.

The Secretary's statement came in reply to a request for comment on Japan's apparent lack of respect for international law in bombing Manila, which has been declared an open city, undefended, to spare civilian suffering.

Hull said Japan had an entirely consistent record in recent years, especially since the invasion of China in 1937, in practicing the same barbaric methods, the same methods of cruelty and inhumanity as Hitler practices and has been practicing in Europe.

The Japanese, Hull remarked, have clared an open city as defined in the Hague convention (V) of 1907, annex, Article 25."

"Our forces have complied with the stipulations of that convention," the navy added.

Another Notice Published

The War Department at the same time published a notice from Gen. Douglas MacArthur that the Philippine capital had been declared an open city, undefended.

Assailed for hours by unopposed Japanese bombers, Manila thus joined European cities that have been ruthlessly attacked in the last two years, Other notable instances being Rotterdam and Belgrade.

The Hague convention to eliminate as many barbarities as possible from war was formally signed by two representatives of the Japanese Emperor, Keiroku Tsudzuki and Aimaro Sato.

Washington Calls For Retaliation On Japan's Cities

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—Shocked legislators declared grimly today that when the United States has gathered the full force of its offensive might Japan shall be made to pay in kind for the cruel and bloody bombing of undefended Manila.

Characterizing the Japanese attack as "barbarism in its worst form," Senator Norris (Ind., Neb.) expressed what appeared to be a universal sentiment when he asserted that the Nipponese had disregarded all rules of warfare and in turn could claim no immunity under such rules.

American government authorities took the position today that the War and Navy Departments statements, reinforcing the formal proclamation of General MacArthur, constituted ample notification, in view of the speed and certainty of modern communications. Communiques are freely broadcast and presumably are transcribed in Tokio. Whether other measures were taken to make sure that the Japanese were put on notice could not be ascertained immediately.

Open City 'Not Recognized'

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—The German radio, in a broadcast recorded by the NBS short-wave listening post, said today: "The Japanese military does not recognize that Manila is to be treated as an open city."

The German statement came in a broadcast from Station DJB, Berlin, in its 8.15 A. M. (E.S.T) news broadcast—more than ten hours after the new bombing started at Manila.

Elaborating, the German broadcast said that "because the decision was made by General MacArthur without consulting the Philippine population" the Japanese could not recognize any open-city designation for the Philippine capital.

(A broadcast yesterday from Saigon, in Japanese-occupied Indo-China, said that as from December 25 the Japanese were "considering Manila as an open city.")

Japs Pouring On Luzon In Two Sectors

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—The War Department reported today fleets of Japanese troopships were pouring invasion reinforcements ashore north and southeast of Manila and "very heavy" fighting was in progress southeast of the Philippine capital.

A communique said that, meanwhile, fighting in the Lingayen Gulf area north of Manila was of a desultory character.

At the same time heavy enemy air activity was said to have continued over all the battle fronts of the islands.

Fighting Desultory

The communique, covering military developments up to 9.30 A. M., E. S. T., said:

"1. Philippine theater:

"Fighting in the Lingayen Gulf area, north of Manila, is of a desultory character.

"Combat operations in the southeast, in the general vicinity of Lamon Bay, are very heavy.

"The enemy is being continually reinforced from fleets of troopships in Lingayen Gulf and off Atimonan.

"Enemy air activity continues heavy over all fronts.

"There is nothing to report from other areas."

Atimonan is some seventy-five air miles from Manila, and Lamon Bay, on which it is situated, extends northward to a point where the bay is only about forty-five air miles from the capital.

Filipino, Battered on Feet, Tells of U. S. Tanks' Toll

MANILA, Sunday, Dec. 28 (AP).—A young Philippine soldier who made his way here after escaping from Japanese captors in Mauban, southeastern Luzon, said today that he had seen American tanks in action on that front and had seen the Japanese dead piled up in the face of machine gun fire and superior rifles of the American and island troops.

At one bridge in Mauban, said 18-year-old Leopold Salazar, a comparatively small group of American and native soldiers completely wiped out a numerically superior force of Japanese who were equipped with inferior, old-fashioned rifles.

FEET BATTERED.

Salazar said that he, like other captives, was banged on the feet with the butts of rifles by his Japanese captors and then placed on an enemy vessel in Mauban port.

The use of rifle butts, he said, was intended to inflict sufficient injury to prevent the escape of prisoners, but he said that in spite of his sore right foot he dove from the vessel, swam ashore and then made his way across the Sierra Madre Mountains. He was captured, he said, on Christmas morning.

Upon his arrival here for hospitalization, Salazar wore a makeshift uniform of blue dungarees and a coat over a turtle-neck sweater, all of which he had taken from the body of a fallen invader. The sweater had a bayonet rip directly over the heart.

Jap Woman Among Luzon Invaders Reported Carrying Sub-machine Gun

Manila, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The Manila Bulletin's correspondent in Santa Cruz, in Laguna province of Luzon Island, reported today that one Japanese woman was among Japanese armed forces killed or captured fighting on the East Coast inland from Atimonan, seventy-five miles southeast of Manila.

The report said the woman was carrying a sub-machine gun.

Tokio, Dec. 27 (Official radio recorded by A. P.).—Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, declared tonight in a radio broadcast to Japan that the Japanese had shown "remarkable patience toward British and American threats, out of a desire for peace, but the British and Americans mistook Japan's perseverance for weakness."

Japan's Ship Losses Set At More Than One A Day

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—Japan is losing troop and supply ships at the rate of more than one a day, fast enough to reduce her great merchant marine to insignificance in two years if losses go unchecked in a Pacific naval war of attrition.

United States and Dutch army, navy and air reports for the first three week of the war list twenty-six Japanese merchant vessels as sunk or seriously damaged by submarines or air attacks in Philippine, Borneo and Malayan waters despite heavy naval and air escort.

Lacks Steel For Replacements

Although Japan has twenty-three shipyards with sixty-nine berths for construction of large craft, her steel resources are limited and building facilities are believed to be far below what would be necessary to make up for even half of such a rate of loss.

At the start of the war Japan's merchant fleet was third largest in the world, trailing those of Britain and the United States. In seagoing vessels of 2,000 tons or more it consisted of 898 ships of 4,754,000 gross tons. Of these, 717 were freighters, 112 were combination passenger-cargo ships, 49 were tankers and two were primarily refrigerated cargo vessels.

More important than the actual tonnage figures, however, was the American and British shipbuilding capacity.

Two U. S. Destroyers Bombed In Far East

Only Minor Damage Sustained, However, Navy Department Says

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—The Navy Department announced late today that two United States destroyers sustained "minor damage" during enemy bombing attacks in the Far East, but there were no casualties.

In the eastern Pacific, the communique said, enemy submarines still are operating in the West Coast shipping lanes but due to "effective counter-measures," they are experiencing great difficulty in making their attacks.

The communique declared also that counter-measures against enemy submarines patrolling in the Hawaiian area were being vigorously prosecuted.

Loss of Fourth Freighter In Pacific Is Disclosed

12 Aboard Manini, Sunk About Dec. 17, Reach Hawaii

HONOLULU Dec. 27 (AP).—The 14th Naval District headquarters announced today that twelve survivors from the freighter Manini, sunk about Dec. 17, were brought in to Pearl Harbor this morning.

(The Manini, formerly known as the Susherico, was owned by the Matson Navigation Company. Its home port was San Francisco. The ship, built by the Submarine Boat Corporation of Newark, N. J., in 1920, was 324 feet long and had a 46.2-foot beam. Its registered gross tonnage was 3,253. Previously three ships, the tanker Montebello and the freighters Cynthia Olson and Lahaina, had been reported sunk in the Pacific, although a number of other vessels underwent attack.)

Navy Studies 'Suicide Sub' Of Japanese

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Honolulu, Dec. 27—The second of three Japanese "suicide raiders"—little two-man submarines—destroyed in Pearl Harbor has been salvaged and is under study of technical experts of the United States Navy.

Almost squarely in the center of the conning tower is a shell-hole, tribute to the skill of a gunner on an aircraft tender whose alert captain saw the shadow of the raider approaching his ship as the Japs struck in the December 7 attack.

That shell killed the Japanese pilot in his conning tower and brought the tiny submarine to the surface.

At that moment the invader was rammed by a destroyer, coming down channel at high speed. It practically cut the raider in two.

Second Of Kind

This submarine was a sister ship of one salvaged intact on the beach near Maimanalo. Another was destroyed by depth charges before it would attack fleet units.

The suicide raiders have a cruising range of less than 200 miles and are serviced by a mother ship. More than seventy feet long, they have a beam of less than six feet and a top speed of twenty-four knots.

They carry two eighteen-inch torpedoes, as well as a 300-pound demolition charge in the stern. There are five compartments in which there is navigating and propulsive gear, including two banks of storage batteries and electric motors which drive the craft by means of tandem screws.

Navy Minister Claims Air and Sea Control Over 'Four Oceans'

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 27 (Official Radio).—Navy Minister Shigetaro Shimada told the Japanese Diet today that the Japanese Navy had sunk nine British destroyers and damaged four in the Hong Kong area and asserted the navy now had air and sea control over "four oceans."

He asserted British and American naval losses included seven battleships sunk, three heavily damaged and one less seriously damaged; two cruisers sunk and six damaged; a destroyer sunk and four damaged; nine submarines, nine gunboats, seven torpedoboats and 16 merchantmen sunk and 50 captured.

He said Japanese naval aircraft in the Philippine fighting had destroyed 338 United States planes, and that total British and American plane losses in the air were 803.

Japanese losses he listed as three destroyers and a minesweeper sunk, five "special" submarines missing, a cruiser and a minesweeper damaged, and 52 planes destroyed.

He claimed that aviation and military facilities at Johnston, Palmyra, Wake and Baker Islands had been almost destroyed by the Japanese Navy.

Premier Tojo, addressing the Diet in his capacity as War Minister, asserted the Japanese forces at Davao in the Philippines had freed 18,000 Japanese nationals who had been imprisoned.

He said American forces on the island of Mindanao had killed 48 Japanese civilians.

'Two Reckless' Recruits Factor In Hawaii Toll

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—New recruits at a Hawaiian naval station may have been "a trifle too reckless" in the December 7 Japanese attack on Oahu, the Navy reported today, "and their disregard for danger undoubtedly increased the number of casualties."

Describing acts of heroism while Japanese planes dived on the island, the commanding officer of the Kaneohe Bay Naval Air Station reported the recruits "without exception lived up to best traditions of the service."

Intent On Repulsing Attack

Continuing, his report mentioned the "reckless" attitude and said:

"It was necessary to constantly urge the men to scatter and take cover because most of them were so intent on repulsing the attack that they were disregarding the enemy's fire."

Civilians also were praised for "extreme gallantry in their disregard of personal danger, and their attempts help salvage aircraft and put out fires was commendable.

Quickly Restored Utilities

"They voluntarily undertook to repair electrical lines and water mains and the utilities of the station were out of commission only a short while."

Navy yard workmen "stayed on the job" during the bombing of Pearl Harbor, the naval report said. It told of the workmen continuing with their tasks under fire and said work which normally required hours was completed rapidly while the air raid was still in progress.

Emmitsburg Private Says In Letter, 'Japs Won't Be Able To Do It Again'

First Reported Killed, Private George Baker Asserts He's Unscathed

[By the Associated Press]

Emmitsburg, Md., Dec. 27—Private George M. Baker, 20-year-old Air Corps mechanic, reported killed in the first casualty lists issued after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, says "the Japs will never be able to do that again."

Baker, in a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Baker, written three days after the raid in which he was supposed to have been killed, said he "didn't get to write last Sunday (the day of the bombing raid) as we had quite a few things to attend to at the time."

"Didn't Get A Scratch"

"Most of the fellows pulled through O. K.," he wrote. "I don't guess there were fifteen or twenty fellows killed on the whole island. I didn't get a scratch.

"There is no sense telling you anything about the war, as it would be censored," Baker informed his parents. "There isn't much that you probably haven't already heard on the radio to tell.

Says They Were Caught Napping

"They caught us slightly asleep and did a little damage. They will never do that again. Personally, I don't think they will ever get close enough to bomb this place again."

"Don't worry about me," Private Baker concluded, "as I don't think there is any more danger."

The Bakers received the letter a week after the formal notification by the War Department that their son had been "killed in action at Hickam Field, Hawaii, December 7." There has been no indication as to how the mix-up occurred.

Midway Island Defenders Still Cling to Posts

DEC 28 1941

By the Associated Press.

As yet unsung, but undoubtedly as gallant and as determined as were the defenders of Wake Island, a band of United States fighting men apparently still holds Midway Island.

A cheering Christmas message to the New York Times saying "we are still here; merry Christmas" was the first public word since the Navy announced in a December 16 communique that Midway was "countering the blows of the enemy."

The Navy said yesterday it had been in communication with Midway Thursday, but no information concerning the situation there would be given out.

Under the wartime regulations, no information is permitted of the strength of the forces on the 850-acre island that is a naval air station and a post of a commercial cable company.

Japs Jail U. S. Citizens In 2 China Towns

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—The State Department was informed today that Americans in Swatow and Amoy, in Japanese-occupied China, had been taken into custody by Japanese military authorities.

The Swatow prisoners are believed to number sixty, in addition to Kenneth Yearns, of Washington, D. C., the American consul there.

At Amoy, according to the last census of Americans in China, there were twenty-nine Americans. Leland C. Altaffer, Toledo, Ohio, is the Vice-Consul there.

The report to the State Department, from the American Embassy at Chungking, said that according to information received there the Americans taken into custody are being well treated. In Amoy they are being held in the Poai Hospital.

Two missionaries normally in Swatow, whose names were not given, are understood to be in Kityang, Kwantung province.

4 Victims Credited To U. S. Pilot

New Delhi, India, Dec. 27 (AP)—One American pilot, whose identity was kept secret, was credited today with shooting down four Japanese planes during the Christmas day enemy air raid on Rangoon, Burma.

Official reports said a large number of Japanese bombers, with a fighter escort, carried out the raid, but inflicted little damage, none of it military, and lost at least twenty planes.

Ten bombers and ten fighters are known to have been destroyed, it was said, four more are believed to have been destroyed, and still others which were unable to reach their home bases may be found later.

U. S. Is Closest War Partner, Curtin Says

[By the Associated Press]

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 27—Prime Minister John Curtin, in an article written for the Melbourne Herald, declared today that despite Australia's links with Britain, her closest partner in war in the Pacific is the United States.

"The Government," he said in the article, "regards the Pacific struggle as primarily one in which the United States and Australia should have the fullest say in the direction of the fighting plan."

Dictum Refused

He said his Government's policy "is shaped toward obtaining Russian aid and working out with the United States a plan of Pacific strategy along with British, Chinese and Dutch forces."

"We refuse," he asserted, "to accept the dictum that the Pacific struggle is a subordinate segment of the general conflict."

"I make it clear that Australia looks to America free from any pangs about our traditional links of friendship to Britain.

"We know Britain's problems. We know her constant threat is invasion. We know the dangers of dispersing strength—but we know that Australia can go and Britain still will hold on.

"We are determined that Australia shall not go. We shall exert our energy toward shaping a plan with the United States as its keystone, giving our country confidence and ability to hold out until the tide of battle swings against the enemy."

Curtin disclosed that before the war Australia had attempted to get an agreement with Russia for defense against Japanese attack, but said the effort then was "wrongly regarded as premature."

(A London Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Canberra quoted Curtin as saying there was no possibility that he might go to Washington. "I am satisfied that Australia's point of view now has been clearly understood in places where it should be understood," he added.)

In Canberra, Curtin told an industrial conference called to speed up production and flow of labor to war industries that Australia's entire normal life must be transformed to meet a great peril to the country.

"The attacker is so well prepared that we start very much behind scratch," he said. "We do not lack men or fighting forces, but the fighting forces lack the volume of equipment which would give them parity with the enemy."

Until Allied air supremacy is established, he continued, all other forces would be prejudiced in fighting power.

Melbourne, Dec. 27—Prime Minister John Curtin declared in an article written for the Melbourne Herald today that Australia refuses to regard the war in the Pacific as a side issue to the war in Europe and places her chief reliance in the United States.

"I make it clear that Australia looks to America, free from any pangs about our traditional links of friendship to Britain," he said.

"We know Britain's problems. We know her constant threat is invasion. We know the dangers of dispersing strength—but we know that Australia can go and Britain still will hold on.

DEC 28 1941

"We Are Determined"

"We are determined that Australia shall not go. We shall exert our energy toward shaping a plan, with the United States as its keystone, giving our country confidence and ability to hold out until the tide of battle swings against the enemy.

"We refuse to accept the dictum that the Pacific struggle is a subordinate segment of the general conflict. The Government regards the Pacific struggle as primarily one in which the United States and Australia should have the fullest say in the direction of the fighting plan."

In Apparent Disagreement

The Prime Minister of this dominion of the British Empire spoke out in apparent disagreement with views widely expressed in London and in some quarters in the United States that the Pacific war is less important than the war with Hitler.

The war with Japan is not a phase in the struggle with the Axis, he declared, but an entirely new war.

Australia, close at hand to the new area of conflict, must accept immense changes in her life in order to go on to a complete war footing, he declared.

"Behind Scratch," He Says

"The attacker is so well prepared that we start very much behind scratch," he said.

The Government, he added, is shaping its policy toward obtaining Russian aid and working out a plan of strategy with the United States, China, the Dutch and Britain.

Before the war broke out in the Far East, he said, Australia had tried to get a British-Russian agreement for defense against a Japanese attack, but this was then "wrongly regarded as premature."

[An Exchange Telegraph dispatch to London quoted him as saying his point of view was very well understood "in places where it should be understood" and that he saw no possibility of going to Washington.]

Displacement Held Belated

W. M. Hughes, former Prime Minister, declared that "thus far our defenses give way like Aunt Sally's in a skittle (bowling) alley," and said the displacement of Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, Far Eastern commander in chief, was "belated."

Hughes, who is leader of the United Australia party and a member of the Advisory War Council, said the change was "a repetition of the incompetence in all these things—in the Libyan campaign, in Greece, in Crete and now in Malaya."

Criticizes Command

"I am told that up until a fortnight ago British forces in Malaya were living under what may be termed peace conditions, having two days off per week and, in short, living in the past and basking in refulgent, fast-fading gleams of British triumphs in other wars."

A Labor member of the House of Representatives suggested caustically that "we ought to get the Russians to lend us General Timoshenko to teach our generals how to advance instead of retreat."

British Forces In Burma Put Under New Commander

Lieut. Gen. T. J. Hutton Named In Move To Link Defense With General Wavell In India

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sunday, Dec. 28—Lieut. Gen. T. J. Hutton, chief of the general staff in India, has been appointed officer commanding in Burma in a move placing responsibility for defense of that colony under General Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander in chief in India.

General Hutton, 51, replaces 56-year-old Lieut. Gen. D. K. McLeod, a cavalryman who has been general officer commanding in Burma since 1938.

The official announcement of his appointment followed by twenty-four hours another Far Eastern command shakeup in which General Sir Henry Pownall, 53-year-old artillery specialist, assumed command of British forces in the Far East, succeeding Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham.

Like Pownall, whose headquarters are at Singapore, Hutton is an artilleryman who rose rapidly in the service since the World War. He attained the rank of major general at the age of 48.

Hutton's selection was regarded here as having the general effect of unifying the India and Burma military establishments under General Wavell.

Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, ten years his senior, as the leader of forces which have yielded almost a fourth of British Malaya in twenty days of action.

Pownall, a lieutenant general, was granted the acting rank of full general as from December 5.

Press Criticized Campaign

The War Office disclosed the shakeup last night in an announcement saying that General Pownall, former vice-chief of the Imperial General Staff, had arrived at Singapore to assume duties to which he was assigned in November. On November 19 the War Office had reported his selection "for a special appointment."

The British press has been highly critical of military operations in Malaya, particularly the lack of strong garrisons at advanced air fields such as Kota Bharu, which fell in the first invasion rush. Britons have been warned that even more reverses are likely.

Japanese Patrols Active

British Far East headquarters announced last night that there was Japanese patrol activity north of Kenaman, on the east coast only 175 miles above Singapore, and also along the Sungei river in the central area of the state of Perak, where main defense lines have held for several days.

A military commentator said reports from Malaya showed no recent change in the situation as fighting continued in the Perak river area on the west coast and in Trengganu province on the opposite side of the peninsula.

Women, Children Moved

Most women and children have been removed from Ipoh, the next major town threatened by the Japanese in the main defense zone, about 300 miles north of Singapore, authorities said.

Observers expressed the belief that the patrols above Kenaman were isolated units with which the British had been out of contact since they landed December 12.

New British Chief Seeks To Halt Push

Berlin, Dec. 27 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Japanese forces in Malaya were said today to have broken through British defense lines with an advance so deep that Ipoh "now is within the territory of their military operations."

(The broadcast gave no source of the Japanese claim, but presumably it was relayed from the Tokyo radio. Ipoh, a tin-mining center, lies about 300 miles northwest of Singapore.)

London, Dec. 27—Gen. Sir Henry Pownall, 53, wiry and energetic artillery specialist, today faced the task of halting the Japanese invasion of Malaya as the new commander in chief of British forces in the Far East.

Meanwhile, Both British And Japs Gird For A Major Battle Test

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, Dec. 27—The Chinese radio said British planes today raided Singora and other Japanese-held bases in Thai territory north of the border with Malaya.

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 27—All official quarters in Singapore today enthusiastically welcomed the assumption of the Far Eastern British command by Lieut. Gen. Sir Henry Pownall, while the press echoed the public praise of the great amount of ground work and routine coordination achieved during the last year by his predecessor, Air Chief Marshall Sir Robert Brooke-Popham.

The press particularly praised Brooke-Popham's preparation for cooperation among the Allies, an achievement that showed striking results at the outset of the war, and pointed out that the Pownall appointment had been made a month ago, long before the outbreak of war with Japan and that Brooke-Popham's replacement, therefore, was not the result of early reverses suffered by the British.

Conditions Unchanged

The war situation in Malaya, generally, remained unchanged, although a joint headquarters communique issued yesterday mentioned unexplained Japanese patrol activity to the north around Kemaman, in Trengganu State, on the Malayan east coast between the states of Kelantan and Pahang, about 175 miles from Singapore.

It was believed by observers that those patrols must have been units of a Japanese party that landed at Kuantan, thirty-five miles to the south, on December 10 and concerning which there have been no reports since the day of their landing.

Singapore and southern Malaya have been putting to good use the time gained by the slowing down of the Japanese attack in the north and the absence of enemy aerial activity.

Both British And Japs Get Set For Major Test

London, Dec. 27 (AP)—Jungle-trained Imperial troops and mobile Japanese forces were moving onto the North Malaya front tonight in strong numbers as both sides reinforced their lines in a fight swiftly developing into a major test of strength.

The initial Japanese push was reported stemmed at least temporarily by stiffened British resistance across the hilly jungles of Perak and Trengganu provinces barely 300 miles from Singapore, although isolated Japanese patrols were said to be operating perhaps one hundred miles closer to the big British port.

Despite the strengthening of the jungle line, many observers said the British probably would be forced to yield still further ground before establishing a stabilized line from which to strike back.

Troops In Line Exhausted

Troops now on the firing line were said to be exhausted from almost three weeks of incessant battle against Japanese troops which came into the fight in great force and better equipped for jungle operations.

The Japanese were described as operating by infiltration, avoiding major engagements and taking a page from the lessons they learned in operations against Chinese guerrillas.

Tanks and heavy artillery have taken a secondary role in the fight because of the jungle conditions, the British said.

They declared, however, that relatively heavy losses the British suffered in meeting the first impact of the Japanese drive across the border from Thailand had been mitigated by the return of considerable forces originally cut off.

'Tumbling Defenses'

[By the Associated Press]

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 27—W. M. Hughes, Australian Deputy opposition leader, today termed the removal of Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham from command of Britain's Far Eastern forces "a belated recognition by those in authority of unfitness and incompetence."

Criticizing what he said were "peace conditions" under which Britain's Far East garrisons lived before the Japanese attack, Hughes declared:

"So far all our defenses have gone down like pins in a bowling alley."

Singapore Rushes Civil Defenses

News Agencies Lack Communications for 18 Hours

NEW YORK, DEC. 28—AP—"Singapore is working at high speed to get its civil defenses organized in a thorough working order," the British radio said today in a broadcast heard by C. B. S.

A Chinese defense council has been formed to organize the Chinese inhabitants who form the greater part of the population, the broadcast continued.

The Associated Press at 4 p. m., EST, had been without communication from Singapore for 18 hours. British news agencies in London reported that they, too, were without direct dispatches from Singapore. There was no indication in the broadcast as to how the British radio had received its report.

Japs Plan Triumphal Parade In Hong Kong

Tokyo, Dec. 27.—(Official broadcast recorded by AP.)—Japanese Imperial forces will march through captured Hong Kong in a formal triuphal entry tomorrow afternoon, Domei reported today.

No Yen for Dollars

TOKYO (Official Broadcast Recorded by (AP)) — The newspaper Asahi reported yesterday that, on the day after the Japanese occupation of Hong Kong, the streets of the British crown colony were littered with Hong Kong dollars—in use under British rule—and that no one bothered to pick them up.

MOYNE LOOKS TO RECAPTURE OF HONGKONG

Determination To Win Back Crown Colony Is Voiced To Governor

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sunday, Dec. 28—Determination to win back the crown colony of Hongkong was voiced today by Lord Moyne, colonial secretary, in a message to Singapore for "transmission by any available means to Sir Mark Young, Governor of Hongkong."

It said:

"It is a good fight you have fought and I send you and all who have held out so splendidly against overwhelming force the thanks of his Majesty's Government.

Lost Only For Time

"The defense of Hongkong will live in the story of the Empire to which it adds yet another chapter of courage and endurance.

"But it is only for a time that the colony is lost. The day of reckoning will follow and all shall come out right in the end."

Japanese army and navy forces, a Tokyo broadcast announced, will make their ceremonious entry into Hongkong tomorrow in a parade before officers who conducted the campaign against the British Crown colony.

Canadians Seek Word On Hongkong Casualties

Toronto, Dec. 27 (AP)—[illegible], chairman of the Canadian Red Cross, today cabled the International Red Cross in Geneva for assistance in obtaining information as quickly as possible about prisoners and casualties in the Japanese occupation of Hongkong.

Some 2,000 Canadians were known to have been in the British Crown colony.

Gordon said there might be delay in obtaining the information, since Japan is not a signatory of the Geneva convention of 1929, which requires members to make information on prisoners available to the International Red Cross as rapidly as possible.

British Embassy Staff In Tokio Reported Safe

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Britain was notified today through Argentine sources that Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British Ambassador to Japan, and all members of his staff were safe and well in the embassy at Tokio.

It was presumed that negotiations are under way for the exchange of the British and Japanese diplomatic staffs, but "geographical considerations" were said to bar prompt action.

Japs Counting on Borneo Oil Wells

Tojo Says 70 Can Be Restored in Month

BERLIN (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Premier Tojo of Japan told the House of Peers that about 70 Borneo oil wells can be restored in about a month and that Japan can reckon on about 700 tons of oil daily from the Borneo oil fields, a German broadcast of a Tokyo dispatch said yesterday.

The Premier was reported as saying the British destroyed about 150 oil well derricks and other oil field establishments before withdrawing from the areas of Sarawak, now occupied by the Japanese.

Japan's occupation of Hong Kong and of Penang island off the West Malayan coast were destructive blows by which Singapore has been isolated from India, the Premier said, according to the broadcast.

At Penang the Japanese were said to have captured 1,000 motor cars, 1,300 tons of tin, 2,000 tons of rubber and to have taken the biggest tin producing area in the world in Malaya.

Since the outbreak of the Pacific war, Tojo was quoted, 58 tanks and armored cars and 108 guns were captured and 427 airplanes shot down or destroyed by the Japanese.

Dutch Bombers Sink Another Jap Ship

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Dec. 27—The largest ship in a Japanese concentration was sunk by direct hits from Dutch army bombers off Kuching, capital of Sarawak on the island of Borneo, and a lighter also was sunk, a Dutch communique announced today.

Six or seven bombs burst on the ship, the communique said, and it spouted a huge column of flame, smoke and steam into the sky.

An airdrome in Borneo was raided by enemy bombers with one civilian killed and six wounded.

16 Sunk, 5 Damaged

The Aneta News Agency said the official tally puts Japan's losses at sixteen ships sunk and five damaged at Dutch hands since the war in the Pacific began.

One was a cruiser and two were destroyers, it said, and the others were four troop transports, three freighters, four supply transport ships, one lighter and another ship.

Heavy damage was said to have been inflicted upon two enemy cruisers, a seaplane tender and two transports which were probably both put out of action.

Aneta said this list excluded other ships probably sunk or damaged but on which officials were not certain.

Power Unestimated

Commentators asserted that Tokyo had underestimated the striking power of the Netherlands Indies and, as a result, the Dutch forces are in position to launch a vigorous offensive.

Military officials said the Netherlands Indies would be capable of even greater feats against the Japanese if more warships and planes were put at her disposal. Urging that the United States send all war materials she can spare to these islands, an authoritative spokesman said:

"The position of the ABCD nations could be greatly improved if this region was reinforced with ships and aircraft. The United States should realize that the Netherlands Indies is a logical base for operations against the Japanese. Naval circles stress that the Indies form the gateway to two oceans—the Pacific and the Indian—through which the lifelines of the Allies run.

Would Welcome Equipment

"It cannot be brought home too emphatically to American public opinion that defending this archipelago is not just an issue for the Netherland Indies alone, but for the Allied cause as a whole.

"The Netherland Indies are armed, equipped and determined to stand firm and they can hold out for a long time, but anything that can be sent to strengthen the defenses of the country—especially in the way of warships, planes and anti-aircraft artillery—will be welcome and will not only benefit the Indies, but all the Allies, and will help to bring about the ultimate victory."

Point To Unimpaired Striking Power And Cite Ships Sunk

Say Island At Gate Of Two Oceans Forms Base To Hit Japan

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Dec. 27—Reinforcement of the unimpaired striking power of the Dutch forces for an offensive based in the East Indies was urged upon the United State by an authoritative commentator today as the sinking of two more Japanese ships by bombers was announced.

Keeping up their record of exacting a toll of one ship a day from the Japanese, the Dutch said their bombers, mostly American-made machines, scored six or seven hits on the largest vessel of a Japanese concentration off Kuching, capital of Sarawak in Borneo. It and a lighter went to the bottom, the Dutch said.

Count 16 Ships Sunk

By official count three Japanese warships and thirteen other ships now have been sunk by Dutch planes and submarines, and at least five others have been damaged, including three warships.

The destroyed warships were a cruiser and two destroyers, and the damaged warships were two cruisers and a seaplane tender. The Dutch have expressed the opinion that the damaged ships also were put out of action.

Promise Greater Feats

As a result, they said, the Dutch forces now are capable of dealing powerful blows, and, if properly reinforced with planes, ships and anti-aircraft equipment, can perform even greater feats.

"The United States should realize that the Netherlands Indies is a logical base for operations against the Japanese," a spokesman said. "Naval circles stress that the Indies form the gateway to two oceans, the Pacific and the Indian, through which the life lines of the Allies run. It cannot be brought home too emphatically to American public opinion that defending this archipelago is not just an issue for the Netherland Indies alone, but for the Allied cause as a whole."

Hundreds Near Bengasi Taken, British Say

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 27—Several hundred more Axis prisoners have been captured and a large ammunition dump seized in British mopping-up operations south of captured Bengasi, the British General Headquarters reported today.

It also was announced that 476 enemy planes had been destroyed or captured in Cirenaica up to December 23, as against RAF losses of 195 planes.

The communique said that despite tough going as a result of rain for more than two days, British forces are harassing the main Axis forces in the Agedabia area, near the Gulf of Sirte coast around the hump of Libya southwest of Bengasi.

Mop-Up Continues

Mopping-up operations in that area, it said, are progressing and many small Axis pockets have been cleared up in the Bengasi-Ghemines-Soluch triangle along the east shore of the gulf. It was in those operations, the bulletin said, that the large ammunition dump and "a few hundred more prisoners" were captured.

Despite the weather, the air force again was credited with heavy blows on enemy troop concentrations and transport columns and, in the Agedabia area especially, with "good results" in attacks on enemy armored equipment.

LIBYAN RAINS SLOW DOWN BRITISH PACE

Main Remnants Of Axis Are Harried In Agedabia Area, Command Says

Major Pocket Apparently Is In Bengasi-Ghemines-Soluch Triangle

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 27—More than two days of rain have slowed down the British pace, but the conquest of Libya is rolling relentlessly westward and the main remnants of the Axis forces are being harried now in the Agedabia area, about eighty miles south of captured Bengasi, the Middle East headquarters announced today.

Its bulletin emphasized the "very bad going" as a result of the weather and mentioned only minor mopping-up operations, but said that even in these several hundred Axis prisoners were taken and a large enemy ammunition dump fell into British hands.

Major Axis Pocket

This area also was subjected to British air and artillery pounding and the communique said British bombers scored "good results" in heavy attacks on enemy armored fighting machines.

Axis air losses up to Tuesday were put at 476 destroyed and captured against 195 for the RAF since the drive started November 18.

No Estimate Of Strength

A military commentator in London said "only remnants" remain of the 150,000 men who Prime Minister Churchill disclosed in Washington Friday had faced the British at the start of the battle of Libya.

The Axis' remaining strength, however, could not be estimated with any accuracy.

Gen. Erwin Rommel's forces, he said, apparently are fighting only a delaying action in the Agedabia area in an effort to give the bulk of German troops time to escape westward.

Tobruk Assault Blocked

Officials disclosed today that German prisoners captured in Libya had informed them that General Rommel was planning a large-scale attack on the British forces besieged in Tobruk when the British loosed their westward offensive.

One prisoner, a man of 35 who voiced anti-Nazi sentiments, was said to have reported morale in Germany has been lowered as a result of the Russian campaign, but that the Gestapo still has control of the German people.

The British officials said this prisoner urged tightening of the British blockade and intensified RAF bombings of Germany in order to hasten the final collapse of morale "for the sake of the German people and humanity."

British Reduce Foe In Libya To 'Remnant'

London, Dec. 27—Axis forces remaining in Libya were described by a military commentator today as "only remnants" of the 150,000 men who Prime Minister Churchill disclosed in Washington yesterday had faced the British at the start of the new North African battle.

Churchill's figures, which had not previously been divulged, indicated that the Axis forces were larger at the beginning than the British had expected.

Nazis Near Agedabia

Although the London commentator said most of the German-Italian force had been shattered, he acknowledged it was not known of what the remnants consist except that they are "not very much."

Reports, he said, indicate that the bulk of the Germans (estimated by Churchill at about 50,000 at the start) still are in the vicinity of Agedabia, around the shore of the Gulf of Sirte from Bengasi and are under constant British attack.

Scattered Italian infantry units remain in the area northeast of the captured port, and other Fascist troops, probably relatively few in number but still possessing some light tanks, are left in isolated pockets in the Libya-Egypt frontier area, he said.

Foe Repulsed, Rome Says

Rome, Dec. 27—(Official broadcast recorded by A. P.)—British motorized forces were declared by the Italian high command today to have been repulsed in attacks on Axis lines south of Bengasi.

Among such evidence they listed the stepped-up pace of RAF bombings of Tripoli and the heavy pounding of military depots and barracks at Misurata, farther to the east, which might serve as a jumping-off place for fresh Axis forces heading toward the present Libyan battleground.

Some observers suggested the Axis might try to hold its reinforcements in the vicinity of Misurata in the hope that part of Rommel's army would be able to escape and join up there. It sea blockade and perhaps already heading eastward to aid General Rommel's forces.

Axis Believed Trying To Reinforce Rommel

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 27—There was a growing belief among London observers today that Germany and Italy are rushing heavy reinforcements to Tripoli, capital and chief port of Libya, and thence eastward into the Libyan battle zone in spite of heavy losses of ships in the Mediterranean.

Some Escape Net

"But, as we have said repeatedly," this source added, "it is impossible to prevent some ships from getting across, and we have every reason to believe some troops and supplies may get to Tripoli."

Some quarters asserted the Germans and Italians already have started an intensive winter campaign to destroy British power in the Mediterranean area—a move which they have predicted for the past two weeks.

Air Assault Seen

These sources said heavier air attacks on Malta and reinforcements for the withdrawing African army possibly were only the first steps in this campaign, which they said also was likely to include an all-out air assault on the British Mediterranean fleet.

Several bits of evidence were cited to support the belief that some reinforcements were getting through the was pointed out such strategy would place on the British the burden of moving troops and supplies over the exposed coastal highway west from El Aghaila if they desired to continue their North African conquest.

Bengasi Holds Key

It was conceded generally that the British ability to carry the fight into Tripolitania would depend, to a large degree, on whether Bengasi can be used as a supply port and the British fleet can protect supply ships plying between Egypt and Bengasi.

(The Italians, in acknowledging the fall of Bengasi, announced the city, second-largest in Libya, had been left in ruins, but made no specific mention of the condition of the harbor.)

These sources declared that overland transport of all supplies needed to carry the war farther west would be a monumental task, particularly if the Axis should manage to get one or two new tank divisions into North Africa.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Rashid Ali el Gailani, former Prime Minister of Iraq who fled to Turkey and is now reported to be in Berlin, "broke his written word and verbal pledge by absenting himself from Istanbul," the Ankara radio said yesterday in a broadcast heard by C. B. S.

(The Berlin radio said Thursday that the Rashid was conferring with Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop in Berlin.)

He had been granted permission to enter Turkey "on condition that he would not leave the country," the radio said of the man who engineered the unsuccessful Axis coup in Iraq against the British.

20-Mile Gain Is Claimed By Russians

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Dec. 27—Red army troops campaigning to lift the five-month-old siege of Leningrad were declared authoritatively today to have killed more than 6,000 Germans and regained 32 additional villages in a drive paralleling the central front counter-offensive.

Soviet soldiers sent the invaders reeling from the Volkhovo area, eighty miles southeast of Leningrad on the main railway between that city and Moscow, the Soviet Information Bureau said.

Go 20 Miles Beyond Volkhovo

The Moscow radio reported that Russian units pushed more than twenty miles beyond the recaptured city of Volkhovo and seized large quantities of German war supplies.

Cracking of the Germans' Oka river line and the recapture of Narofominsk, thirty-five miles southwest of Moscow on a railway to Kaluga, had been reported earlier from the central front.

(London authorities said the Russians were reported to have recaptured Kaluga, at the confluence of the Oka and the Ugra rivers. A British radio broadcast said the town was Kliasma.)

DEC 28 1941

Crawl On Ice to Attack

The Government newspaper Izvestia said Russian soldiers crawled by night across the ice of the Oka river—a tributary of the Volga which rises 250 miles south of Moscow—to smash German outposts and capture a large town strongly fortified under orders by Adolf Hitler for a decisive stand there.

The information bureau said simply:

"On a number of sectors of the western, Kalinin and southwestern fronts our troops fought fierce engagements with the enemy and continued to advance, occupying a number of localities including the town of Narofominsk."

Russian estimates of the German death toll within the week in winter battles between the Baltic and Black sea rose to more than 36,000, the majority in bloody fighting at Sevastopol, the Soviet Crimean naval base isolated eight weeks ago.

Reds Gain on 180-Mile Line

Stress Advances on Leg South of Moscow; Say Foe's Line Stiffens

MOSCOW (Sunday) (AP) — The Russians announced yesterday the Soviet offensive has rolled the Germans back on a broad, 180-mile front along the southern flank of the Moscow defense arc.

The midnight Soviet communique said this sweeping new advance resulted in reoccupation of Likhvin, on the Oka river 50 miles west of Tula; Novosil, 45 miles east of Orel, the southern anchor of the Moscow defense arc; and Tim, at the headwaters of the Oskol river 45 miles southeast of Kursk.

In the smash-through to Likhvin, on the west bank of the Oka, the Russians made another breach in the line on which the Germans had attempted a stand in a desperate effort to stem the onrushing Red armies.

East of Kursk

Novosil is some 90 miles southeast of Likhvin, on a tributary of the Oka, and Tim is about the same distance farther south and only 40 miles east of the industrial and communications center of Kursk.

The Russians said their forces, encountering stiffened German resistance, reoccupied a number of other points elsewhere on the Moscow front.

At the southern end of the violently erupting front the Russians said that in a single day's fighting Soviet units blasted the Germans from 10 villages and left uncounted hundreds of German dead on the wreckage-littered battlefield.

An earlier communique said the new gains were registered in particularly violent fighting in the Kalinin sector, 90 miles northwest of the capital, to the west of the city and in the Kaluga area, 110 miles to the southwest.

The Soviet Information Bureau announced a 20-mile drive beyond reoccupied Volkhovo, 80 miles southeast of Leningrad on the main railroad from the besieged Baltic port of Moscow.

New Top Officer Shift

NEW YORK (AP) — The Leningrad radio reported last night that Gen. Rudolph Schmidt, commander of the German forces in the Leningrad sector of the Russian front, has been relieved of his command and replaced by General Arnheim.

The report was relayed by the BBC and heard here by NBC.

Rome Reports Successes

ROME (Official broadcast recorded by (AP) — A Stefani agency correspondent said a German - Italian counter-attack against the Russians in one sector of the Eastern front, while "fully reestablishing the situation," was not yet completed and was continuing "with success."

Mentioning no places, the dispatch said the Russians attacked in a "rich industrial zone" (probably the Donets area) Wednesday and continued during a raging snowstorm Christmas Day with tanks against positions held by "our motorized division and by German units." Replying Christmas night, the Italians said, they "gradually tore the Russians from the places they had occupied and by December 26 the situation was fully re-established."

London Sees Hint of Crimea Counter-Invasion by Red Forces Over Kerch Strait

MOSCOW, Dec. 27 (AP).—Soviet forces made new advances and reclaimed numerous communities in violent fighting today on the Moscow front, the Soviet Information Bureau announced.

CRIMEAN THRUST SEEN.

LONDON, Dec. 27 (AP).—The Russians were believed buttressing their massive land offensive tonight with a sea-borne counter-invasion of the Crimea across the Strait of Kerch, narrow bottleneck between the Sea of Azov and the Black Sea.

This opinion was voiced in informed London quarters following the German announcement that four troop-laden Russian transports had been sunk and numerous others damaged in these waters by Nazi bombers.

The London informatns pointed out the vessels reported destroyed naturally would be the type used for just such an invasion.

TYPE OF CRAFT NOTED.

Furthermore, they said it was unlikely that any attempt would be made to send large numbers of troops through the straits for any other purpose.

A successful back-door counter-thrust into the Crimea by way of the Kerch trait would eliminate the last immediate German threat to the Caucasus oil fields.

The Red Army already has smashed the major German threat to the Caucasus by hurling them back from Rostov on the northern shores of the Sea of Azov.

On the eastern land front, the Russians announced a 20-mile drive west of recaptured Volkhovo, 80 miles southeast of Lenin grad on the main Leningrad-Moscow Railroad, and a new nine-mile advance on the Moscow front.

Red Cross Supplies In Russia

Moscow, Dec. 27 (AP)—The first large shipment of medical supplies and hospital equipment purchased with funds collected in the United States and contributed by the American Red Cross arrived recently at a Soviet port.

Balkers Executed

MOSCOW (AP)—The Army organ Red Star said yesterday residents of Melekhovo reported the Germans had executed 90 of their men and 100 Italians for refusing to fight.

All-Winter Battle Seen

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 27—Berlin correspondents of several Swiss newspapers say it is becoming clear that the Germans will be forced to continue fighting on the Russian front all winter despite the desire of Nazi leaders to call off the battle until spring.

The correspondent of the newspaper Tribune de Geneve declares it is obvious that the "Russian winter will not fix a frontier nor leave a military interval."

In a similar vein the correspondent of the National Zeitung of Basle writes that the "winter will bring no recess on the eastern front."

All these dispatches emphasize that the initiative now is with the Russians and mention the fighting spirit of the Red army.

Japanese-German Pincers Movement Feared If Action Were Taken

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 27—Joseph E. Davies, former United States Ambassador to Russia, declared today that the Soviet Union should not be brought into the Far Eastern war now because of the risk of a pincers movement by Germany and Japan that might knock Russia out of the conflict.

Davies also asserted in an interview that Stalin's purges of the old Bolsheviks and the Red army had frustrated "a tremendous conspiracy to overthrow the Moscow Government" with the aid of Japan and Germany in 1937 and 1938.

As Ambassador in those years, he said, he had constantly "raised hell" in his dispatches in an attempt to convince the democracies that their refusal to unify Axis opposition would cause Stalin to seek peace with Hitler.

Caution Is Counseled

"The Russians have an adage, 'First things first,'" Davies said. "It would do no good to help the United States by blowing up the cities of Japan, if at the same time it would mean the fall of the Donets Basin. The best bastion of defense for New York and San Francisco may now be in the Donets, in Moscow, in Rostov."

He expressed belief that Russia had "undoubtedly reduced its strength in the Far East. Large bodies of troops from the Volga and the Far East Red Banner army have been withdrawn to let Russia get rid of Hitler."

Davies credited Russia's present advance to the stamina of "a young pioneer people," to winter conditions, to the German shortage of strategic materials and the stretching of the Nazi line of communications.

Worthy Of Trust

Russia's leaders should be trusted to play their part in the war as they see fit, he added, declaring that the leaders were men of honor and "their word is good with us, as long as ours is good with them."

In contrast, he said, his observations in Europe had convinced him that Germany was a decadent nation and that "a whole section of it should be blotted out from the face of the earth, and it would be a blessing to the world."

CLAIM RUSSIAN SUB

LONDON, Dec. 27 (AP).—The Berlin radio, quoting a DNB dispatch from Bucharest, said a Rumanian destroyer had sunk a Russian submarine in the Black Sea.

Nazis Claim 4 Russ Ships

DEC 28 1941

Berlin, Dec. 27 (Official broadcast recorded by A.P.)—German bombers sank four Russian transports totaling 7,000 tons and damaged five other transports and a number of smaller vessels with heavy losses in men and material for the enemy, the high command announced today.

(The Berlin radio, quoting a DNB dispatch from Bucharest, said that a Rumanian destroyer had sunk a Russian submarine in the Black Sea—the second reported destroyed this month by the Rumanian navy.)

An Italian submarine in the Atlantic was credited by the Fascist high command in Rome today with sinking an armed "enemy" ship identified in the comunique as the 6,000-ton Larrinaga.

(No ship by that name is mentioned in Lloyd's register of merchant vessels.)

The Germans said the attack on the transports occurred in the Straits of Kerch, which link the Black Sea and the Sea of Azov between the Crimea and the Caucasus.

DEC 28 1941

Desire Wide Consolidation

Except to report cryptically that "defensive battles in the east still are continuing" and that Axis posts in Libya withstood British attacks, the communique dealt almost exclusively with operations at sea.

In attacks lasting several days on a British convoy in the Atlantic between Gibraltar and England, the communique summed up British losses as one aircraft carrier and five merchant ships totaling 37,000 tons sunk and two other merchantmen damaged.

British Silent On Report

The aircraft carrier was the previously-announced Unicorn (which is listed in Jane's manual of fighting ships not as an aircraft carrier but as an aircraft tender and whose reported sinking the British have not confirmed).

German bombers were credited also with damaging a British merchantman in British waters last night.

Report Sinkings in Kerch Straits and Counter-Blows on Land

BERLIN, Dec. 27 (From German broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—Large formations of German dive-bombers sank four small Russian transports and damaged five in the Kerch Straits, which separate Crimea from the Caucasus, the Germans announced in a communiqué today.

[There have been reports that the Russians had landed troops in the Kerch area in a counter-invasion of Crimea.]

The Germans described land action in Russia as a continuing series of "defensive battles," with German counter-attacks smashing some Soviet positions. In the north, it was said, German bombers scored hits on a power station in the region of Kandalaksha.

ROME, Dec. 27 (From Italian broadcast recorded by The Associated Press.)—A Stefani agency correspondent said today that a German - Italian counter - attack against the Russians on one sector of the Eastern Front was continuing "with success."

The dispatch said that the Russians had attacked in a "rich industrial zone" [probably the Donets area] on Wednesday and had continued the assault during a snowstorm on Christmas Day, sending tanks against positions held by "our motorized division and by German units." Replying Christmas night, the Axis forces "gradually tore the Russians from the places they had occupied and by Dec. 26 the situation was fully re-established," the correspondent reported.

SHIP "LARRINAGA" SUNK, SAYS ROME

"Larranaga" Of Same Tonnage Sailed From Baltimore Late In November

Her Skipper, Captain Simmons, And Family Live Here On Frisby Street

DEC 29 1941

Rome, Dec. 27 (Official Radio Recorded by A. P.)—An Italian submarine in the Atlantic was credited by the Fascist high command today with sinking an armed "enemy" ship identified in the communique as the 6,000-ton "Larrinaga."

"Larranaga" From Baltimore

The Larranaga, a 6,000-ton ship owned by the International Freighting Corporation, sailed from here during the last week in November after reconditioning in a Baltimore shipyard, it was learned last night.

Her skipper, Capt. Cameron Dudley Simmons, has lived in Baltimore for twenty-two years. He makes his home with his family in the 3000 block of Frisby street. His wife, Mrs. Blanche Simmons, said he is 49 years old and has held master's papers for twenty-two years.

Formerly On Lamotte Dupont

He was in Baltimore seven weeks before he took out the Larranaga. On his previous voyage, he was first mate on the Lamotte Dupont, a freighter of the same line as the Larranaga.

Born on the Island of Saba, in the Netherlands West Indies, of American parents, Captain Simmons came to the United States when he was 15 years old. During the World War, he worked in shipyards and made a voyage on a transport.

The Larranaga was believed to be on a voyage for a far northern port. She carried a crew of thirty-five and a nine-man gun crew.

Mr. and Mrs. Simmons have six children. The eldest, Sidney, 20, is a seaman.

Italy Severely Cuts Train Schedules

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Severe railway traffic restrictions have been offered throughout Italy, according to an Exchange Telegraph Agency dispatch today from Zurich, Switzerland. The dispatch, based on information received from Rome, said that fifty-one trains had been canceled in the Milan district alone.

ROME'S WAR CHEST

14 Billion Lire Voted for Italy's Armed Forces.

Rome, Dec. 27 (Andi Agency to A. P.).—The Italian Council of Ministers, Premier Mussolini presiding, voted approval today of a 1942-43 fiscal year budget to provide 14,152,180,000 lire for the armed forces.

(The lira no longer is quoted in foreign exchange. In June, when it was last being quoted in New York, the lira stood at about 5¼ cents.)

The total budget amounts to 43,825,554,000 lire with total revenue estimated at 35,424,600,000 lire. The budget represents an increase of nearly 9,000,000,000 lire over the last budget and an increase in the deficit of 8,400,944,000 lire.

The ministerial council also approved awards of cash prizes to merchant seamen who "violate or attempt to violate the enemy blockade," as well as cash awards to relatives of sailors who are captured or die in attempts to run the blockade.

Anti-Vichy Radio Says Nazi Troops On March

New York, Dec. 27.—(AP.)—An anti-Nazi, anti-Vichy radio station operating from a secret place in France broadcast tonight that mass movement of German troops was under way toward the Spanish frontier.

The station, heard here by CBS, said one troop train after another was carrying the Nazi forces southward through France. The announcer identified the station as "Radio Inconnu" (The Unknown Radio).

Nazi Opening?

BERLIN (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Reports from Madrid last night said Spain was expected to lodge a prompt and energetic protest with the British government over the sinking of the German steamer Benno Wednesday by British torpedo planes off the Spanish coast.

The Spanish government, according to these reports, regarded the sinking as a violation of Spanish sovereignty, since the incident was said to have occurred within Spanish territorial waters, in the small fishing port of Carino, near Vivera, in northwestern Spain.

At the same time the German press, taking its cue from a foreign office spokesman, emphasized the parallel between this incident and the British attack on the Altmark in a Norwegian fjord February 16, 1940—an attack which the Germans said was responsible in part for Germany's Norwegian campaign.

The Wilhelmstrasse spokesman cited the Altmark incident, though he would make no prediction as to any possible sequel to the attack on the Benno.

The Altmark was a Nazi prison ship which acted as an auxiliary for the pocket battleship Graf Spee while the latter was operating in the Atlantic.

The dispatches from Madrid said that the Benno was sunk by aerial torpedoes, that her crew was machine-gunned after taking to lifeboats, and that one German sailor was killed and two Spanish fishermen who took part in the rescue work were injured.

(The British Air Ministry's communique of the sinking placed it only as off the coas of norhern Spain. The British said the Benno, a tanker suspected of being a submarine tender, first was sighted and attacked with bombs by a Sunderland flying boat; was kept under attack by a relay of other planes including one which fought off a Heinkel seaplane sent out apparently as an escort, and finally was sunk by a torpedo from a Beaufort after 30 hours of pursuit.)

Nazi Rest Curists Arrive in Tanks

NEW YORK (AP)—Uniformed German soldiers arriving at the Turkish border in Bulgaria are only there for a sort of "rest cure," according to a radio version heard by NBC last night.

The Vichy-controlled Martinique radio said that in a recent face-to-face conversation President Ismet Inonu asked German Ambassador Van Papen why there were so many German soldiers along the Turkish-Bulgarian border.

To which the diplomat was said to have replied: "Why it's very simple. The German High Command was merely using the southern Balkans as a rest resort for German units tired after hard fighting in Russia."

Turkey, the Martinique radio observed, is puzzled over why all the "patients" are arriving in tanks and armored cars.

NAZIS BLOCK NORSE MOVE

Report British Operations in Islands, Mine Tromsoe Base

BERLIN, Dec. 27 (From German broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The Berlin radio said tonight that British warships "began operations against a number of small islands and outlying coastal tips" in Norway today but withdrew upon the arrival of German airplanes and coastal defenders.

The operations were carried out "a safe distance from decisive central points of coastal defense," the broadcast said.

Kin Of Fugitive Norse Arrested

DEC 29 1941

London, Dec. 27 (AP)—The Norwegian Telegraph Agency reported today that Nazi authorities in German-occupied Norway recently have arrested nearly one hundred men and women because their relatives had escaped to Britain or had left "their jobs without permission."

The agency said the Nazis also were confiscating the property of parents whose children escape to England.

BRITAIN LAUNCHES NORWEGIAN SHIP

The British radio reported today that, in the presence of Norwegian King Haakon VII, a Norwegian merchant ship bearing his name had been launched in England—the first Norwegian vessel built there since the start of the war.

The broadcast, heard by CBS, said the construction of other Norwegian ships was under way in England, and that 989 Norwegian sailors serving with the Allied fleet had lost their lives or were listed as missing from operations during the last six months.

London Hears German Units Are Driven From Places Held for Six Months.

NEW YORK, DEC. 28—AP—The British radio reported today that Yugoslav patriot forces had dislodged German contingents from positions held for the last six months in west and central Serbia.

The broadcast, heard here by CBS, said that violent battles occurred in the region west of Belgrade, between the Drina and the Sava rivers, and that the losses on both sides were heavy.

In addition to these clashes, Chetnik guerrillas were declared to be continually disorganizing German supply lines running to Salonika, captured Greek port, and Sofia, the Bulgarian capital.

Italian military courts at Ljubljana, in occupied Croatia, are jammed with cases against those accused of attacking Fascist garrisons, BBC added.

Britain Admits Bulgaria A Foe

DEC 29 1941

London, Dec. 27 (AP)—Britain disclosed today that she has been at war with Bulgaria since December 13.

The announcement of a state of war was made in a supplement to the London Gazette. The action, it was thus divulged, followed by two days the German and Italian declarations of war on the United States and the United States' declaration of war on Germany and Italy.

'Today's notification said that Britain never had been officially informed of Bulgaria's own declaration of war on December 13.

RAF BOMBS NAZI BASES

London, Dec. 27 (AP)—RAF formations swept across the southeast coast early tonight and the dull red glow of bombs bursting on Nazi-held French invasion bases was seen from this side of the Channel.

Army and Navy Communiques

DEC 28 1941

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 (AP).—A Navy Department communique:

FAR EAST—During enemy bombing attacks, two of our destroyers sustained minor damage. There were no casualties to personnel.

EASTERN PACIFIC—Enemy submarines still are operating in the west coast shipping lanes. Due to the effective counter-measures adopted by our forces, they are experiencing great difficulty in prosecuting their attacks.

ATLANTIC THEATER—There are no new developments to report.

A War Department communique:

1. PHILIPPINE THEATER:

Fighting in the Lingayen Gulf area, north of Manila, is of a desultory character.

Combat operations in the southeast, in the general vicinity of Lamon Bay, are very heavy.

The enemy is being continually reinforced from fleets of troopships in Lingayen Gulf and off Atimonan.

Enemy air activity continues heavy over all fronts.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

VICHY'S ENVOY SEES HULL

Henry-Haye Predicts Accord With U. S. Restoring Island to Prior Status.

St. Pierre, St. Pierre-et-Miquelon, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Vice-Admiral Emile Muselier, commander-in-chief of Free French naval forces, today barred the territorial waters of St. Pierre and Miquelon to "all warships of any nationality except under special permission previously asked for and granted."

The Free French Information Service declared earlier today that the population of these islands "know perfectly well that Admiral Muselier has never abandoned any position."

A statement reiterated that all diplomatic questions should be discussed directly with Gen. Charles De Gaulle, the Free French leader, and the French National Committee at London.

The Free French here were following closely, by radio, the reaction in Washington and Vichy to the seizure of the islands by seamen under Admiral Muselier on December 24—an act which the State Department at Washington has denounced as arbitrary and which the Vichy French have said they expect to be set aside.

"The people refuse to believe that any one could destroy their regained liberty and determination to re-enter the fight for the liberation of France at the side of the noble American nation, the British Empire and other Allies," today's statement said.

Communiques of Belligerent Powers

Dutch

BATAVIA, Dec. 27 (AP).—A communique of the Netherlands East Indies fighting services:

As was announced in an extra news broadcast, several direct hits were obtained on the largest ship of a concentration of Japanese ships lying off Kuching, in an attack by bombers of the Netherlands East Indies military air forces. The ship exploded and a column of fire several hundred meters high showed that the Japanese ship was entirely destroyed. Furthermore, a Japanese lighter was sunk.

Further particulars of this attack are awaited.

An airdrome on Borneo was raided by enemy bombers. One civilian was killed and six were wounded.

British

CAIRO, Dec. 27 (AP).—A British Middle East headquarters communique:

Despite very bad going as a result of rain which slowed down the speed of our advances during the last two or three days, our forces now are harassing the enemy main forces in the Agedabia area.

Yesterday our artillery successfully shelled enemy motor transport columns on the main road north and south of Agedabia.

South of Bengasi, mopping-up operations are proceeding, and many small forces now have been cleared up between Bengasi, Ghemines and Soluch.

Our air forces continue heavy attacks against enemy motor transport columns and enemy troop concentrations. In the Agedabia area, they also attacked enemy armored fighting vehicles with good results.

A Royal Air Force communique:

Yesterday our fighter and bomber aircraft again were active over the Agedabia region. Enemy motorized units west of the town were successfully attacked, direct hits being scored and fires started.

Smoke from a petrol store which was ignited was seen at a distance of sixty miles. One of our fighters was shot down by anti-aircraft fire but the pilot was saved.

In the frontier area, an enemy machine-gun nest in the Salum (Sollum) area was attacked by fighters and wiped out.

Objectives at Tripoli again were bombed Thursday night.

From these and other operations all our aircraft returned safely with the exception of the fighter already mentioned.

Enemy aircraft made several raids on Malta yesterday, causing some damage.

DEC 28 1941

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 27 (AP).—A Soviet Information Bureau communique:

During Dec. 27 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

In several sectors of the Western, Kalinin and Southwestern fronts in violent battles with the enemy our troops continued their advance and occupied a number of places, including the towns of Likhvin, Novosil and Tim.

In one day's fighting our units operating in one of the sectors of the southern front dislodged the enemy from ten villages and inflicted heavy losses on him in arms and men. Hundreds of enemy dead remained on the field of battle.

During the night of Dec. 26-27, our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

A special communique:

Between Dec. 18 and 25, units of the 54th Army, commanded by Major General Fedyuninsky (Leningrad front), routed the Volkhov group of the enemy. As a result we captured the following trophies:

Eighty-seven guns, 47 machine-guns, 166 sub-machine-guns, 57 automatic rifles, 600 ordinary rifles, 26 tanks, 142 mine-throwers, 200 trucks, over 300,000 cartridges, 18,000 shells, 13,000 mines, 10,000 grenades, 400 bicycles and a large quantity of other military supplies.

About 6,000 German soldiers and officers were killed. Thirty-two villages were cleared of the enemy.

German

The defensive battles in the east still are continuing. On several sectors of the front Soviet forces in prepared positions were smashed or destroyed in counter-attacks.

Strong formations of bombers and dive bombers sank four enemy transports totaling 7,000 tons in the Straits of Kerch. Five other transports and a number of smaller vessels were damaged by bomb hits. The enemy suffered heavy losses in men and material.

On the Karelian front dive bombers scored direct hits on a power station north of Kandalaksha.

U-boats sank four more ships totaling 28,000 tons out of the convoy which had been badly hit east of Gibraltar.

After strong attacks over a period of several days, the following results have been obtained:

Badly damaged: Two merchant ships.

In North Africa, enemy thrusts against German and Italian positions were repulsed. German bombers destroyed installations on British airdromes in Cyrenaica. Several planes were destroyed on the ground and others were damaged.

On Malta, formations of the Luftwaffe bombed the airdrome at Luca and the Harbor of Valletta with heavy caliber bombs. Fierce fires broke out among the installations. The enemy lost a bomber and two fighters in aerial combats.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Dec. 27 (AP).—A Finnish communique:

KARELIAN ISTHMUS—Enemy patrol activity and local artillery fire on both sides.

SVIR FRONT—At numerous points the enemy attempted to carry out patrolling but were repulsed.

EAST FRONT—There was local artillery and trench mortar fire on both sides as well as patrol activity.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 27 (Official broadcast by (AP)).—An Italian high command communique:

The attacks of the enemy's motorized forces against our lines south of Bengasi were repulsed. There is nothing new to report from the districts around Bardia and Sollum.

The enemy's air force has carried out several raids on Libya and, particularly, a longer raid on Tripoli. There were few casualties and damage was of minor significance.

An enemy airplane has been shot down in aerial combat and another by anti-aircraft artillery near Zuara.

In the Atlantic one of our submarines under command of Lieutenant Commander Lenti has sunk the armed enemy ship Larrinaga, with a displacement of 6,000 tons.

Henry-Haye Confident Of Islands' Restoration

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—Gaston Henry-Haye, the French Ambassador, said today after seeing Secretary of State Cordell Hull that he had "no reason to doubt that French sovereignty will be reestablished and maintained over St. Pierre and Miquelon."

The two small islands off Newfoundland have been taken over by Free French forces opposed to the Vichy Government.

Henry-Haye told reporters he was confident an amicable solution would be arrived at in the very near future.

Settlement Indicated

He indicated that a basis for settlement had been reached during conversations already held and said he was communicating immediately with his Government, recommending that a settlement be made which would guarantee French sovereignty over the islands and, at the same time, satisfy all the governments of this hemisphere.

The Ambassador said the wireless station on St. Pierre was a small one used only to provide weather reports and assistance to fishermen, and he was certain that some arrangement could be worked out which would satisfy the United States and other nations that the wireless would not be of any assistance to any belligerent countries.

Confers With King

Secretary Hull conferred also on the situation with Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada.

Hull said at his press conference that discussions were still in progress between the interested nations by which an amicable settlement of the problem would be achieved.

WARSHIPS BANNED FROM FRENCH ISLES

Muselier Also Forbids Planes To Fly Over St. Pierre And Miquelon

Vichy Envoy Predicts Early Return Of Area To His Government

[By the Associated Press]

St. Pierre, St. Pierre et Miquelon, Dec. 27—Vice-Admiral Emile Muselier today barred all warships of "any nationality" from the territorial waters of these tiny islands off Newfoundland and prohibited all planes from flying over them.

In a formal announcement he said ships may approach only when special permission is given, and that all lighthouses may be extinguished.

Radio, telegraph and telephone communications were taken over by Free French naval authorities.

Will Not Retreat

The Free French information service said the Vice-Admiral would not retreat, and said:

"The people refuse to believe that anyone could destroy their regained liberty and determination to reenter the fight for the liberation of France at the side of the noble American nation, the British Empire and other allies."

Vichy Envoy Predicts Early Return Of Islands

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—Reestablishment of French sovereignty over the small fishing islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon off the coast of Newfoundland was predicted today by Gaston Henry-Haye, the Vichy Ambassador, after an hour's conference with Secretary Hull.

The Secretary of State only a few minutes earlier had discussed with W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, the delicate diplomatic situation created by Free French seizure of the islands on Christmas Eve.

The Ambassador said he "had no doubt that French (Vichy) sovereignty tained," with guarantees of the islands' strict neutrallty which would be acceptable to all nations in this hemisphere.

Plan Worked Out Is Hint

Without specifically saying so, the Ambassador intimated that such a plan already had beer worked out and that he was communicating the proposed details to Vichy, with his recommendations.

Hull, at a press conference, would say only that the question was under discussion among the interested governments.

Henry-Haye said the radio station on St. Pierre which Free French spokesmen charged was providing the Germans with weather forecasts was merely a small station to maintain contact with the fishing fleet. He said a plan could be worked out under which the United States, Canada and other interested nations could be assured the station would not be used for any detrimental purpose. He declined, however, to discuss details of such a plan or speculate on whether the proposal included American or Canadian supervision over the radio station.

Diplomatic Tangle Results

The surprise occupation of the two tiny islands by the Free French developed a tempest in a teacup because of the involved diplomatic tangle which has resulted and the potential repercussions from any change in the status quo of territories in the Western Hemisphere. A subsequent plebiscite gave about ninety-eight per cent. of the votes to the Free French.

The United States maintains friendly diplomatic relations with the French Government at Vichy and has not recognized the French National Committee (Free French) established in London. Canada also maintains diplomatic relations with Vichy.

The Free French, however, have worked in close cooperation with the British Government, and the United States has given them lend-lease aid through the British.

An agreement, recently renewed, between the United States and Admiral Georges Robert, Governor General of French possessions in the Americas, provided for the maintenance of the status quo of the French colonies in this hemisphere. While directed toward maintaining neutrality of Martinique, strategic island in the Caribbean, the pact presumably included all French possessions here, including St. Pierre and Miquelon.

Vichy Holds U. S., Britain Blameless

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Dec. 27—The French public learned today for the first time of the Free French occupation of the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon in bannered newspaper accounts which absolved Britain and the United States of any blame.

Vichy newspapers mentioned prominently the United States State Department's note disclaiming any responsibility for the Free French action and, under Ottawa datelines, reported that the move was without the knowledge of British and Canadian authorities.

Radio Message To Isles

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—A Vichy broadcast addressed to the inhabitants of St. Pierre and Miquelon assured them that the Government would "know how to restore the status quo" in the islands taken over by the Free French forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. CBS heard the broadcast here.

The broadcast called the islanders "victims of th unqualifiable de Gaullist aggression" and assured them that Marshal Petain "is with them in heart and soul" during their momentary trial."

"Besides," it added, "their fate is not at all sealed yet. The American Government promptly and officially blamed the initiative (sic) taken without its knowledge and without its consent."

Dictatorship Ruled Isles, Free French Say

DEC 28 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 27—Free French headquarters asserted today that a "state of dictatorship" existed on the Vichy-governed islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon before Gen. Charles de Gaulle's forces landed there on Wednesday.

A statement declared that Baron de Bournat, the Vichy-appointed Governor of the two islands off the Canadian coast, "had instituted a regime of terror threatening partisans of Free France with repressive measures and dismissing numerous officials under no pretext other than that of their personal opinions."

Some, it declared, were required to take an oath of loyalty to Vichy under threat of dismissal and "families of men who volunteered to join Free French forces were either persecuted or deprived of state support."

"Anti-British propaganda was instituted among the population of the islands," it added, "encouraged by the personal attitude of Monsieur de Bournat, who, it is well known in the islands, was under German influence."

De Bournat has been taken into custody by the Free French occupation forces which have won the islanders' approval with ninety-eight per cent. of the ballots cast in a plebiscite.

Nazi Grip on French Fishermen

VICHY, Unoccupied France (AP)—French fishing boats have been forbidden to put out from channel ports except with authorization and under supervision of German military authorities, under an order published in Paris yesterday by Gen. Otto Von Stuelpnagel, military administrator of Nazi-occupied France.

In the same decree Nazi authorities on the channel coast were empowered to take steps to "maintain security and public order in seaports."

Fishing boats will not be allowed to carry radios and will be permitted to leave only at certain hours and operate within specified limits. For violations, boats will be subject to seizure and their crews liable to prison sentences at hard labor.

Allied Strategy Mapped Out At Eight Major Talks Today

Churchill to Sit In With Roosevelt at Six —Anglo-U. S. War Council Meets Late This Afternoon.

DEC 29 1941

Washington, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt scheduled eight major conferences on war strategy today and invited Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain to sit with him at six of them. Starting off with a gathering of American Army chiefs, the meetings embraced engagements with representatives of all the American Republics, all nations arrayed against Germany, Japan and Italy, and even some of the German-occupied countries, including Norway, Belgium and Denmark.

The inclusion of Denmark came as something of a surprise since that country, unlike most of the other occupied European nations, has no refugee government.

The conferences, designed primarily to inform anti-Axis nations and those within the Western Hemisphere solidarity group of the progress of unified world-wide war steps, began at 10 A. M. when the President received Secretary of War Stimson, Gen. George C. Marshall, the Army Chief of Staff, and Lieut.-Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Deputy Chief of Staff in Charge of Air. This meeting was in the White House proper and concerned American problems only.

In the White House Red Room later on the President, with Mr. Churchill attending, arranged to receive the diplomatic chiefs of all the South and Central American republics.

Nine of these nations have actually declared war on one or more of the Axis Powers—Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua and Panama.

Half an hour later, in the same room, the Chinese Ambassador was to see the President and, perhaps, Mr. Churchill.

War Councils to Meet.

Thereafter the President and the Prime Minister planned to see Maxim Litvinov, the Russian Ambassador to the United States, and Harry L. Hopkins, the American lease-lend chief.

The Dutch Minister was invited to come in the President's study next, to confer with Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, and later on an hour's conference was scheduled with Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador; Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada and the chiefs of missions of the British dominions of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India.

Next on the list was a conference with the chiefs of missions of all other Powers at war with the Axis except those represented at prior meetings during the day. This group will include some of the occupied nations, including Denmark, Norway and Belgium.

Other occupied countries which may be represented at this conference are Yugoslavia, Greece, Czecho-Slovakia and Luxembourg.

The last conference of the day was to take place in the Cabinet room with the President and Mr. Churchill meeting with the American and British war councils. This group is made up of the army, navy and air chiefs of the two countries.

The United States and Great Britain are believed, meanwhile, to have reached a preliminary agreement on the broad strategy to start rolling toward victory in 1943, and today's meetings were expected to have a direct bearing on the details.

There was reason to believe that arrangements for close Anglo-American co-operation already have been worked out, and it was reported that Gen. Sir John Dill, the retiring chief of staff of the British army, would remain in Washington indefinitely to help assist in co-ordinating the military efforts of the two nations. Sir John came here in Mr. Churchill's party.

Spring Invasion Try Forecast

DEC 29 1941

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill was reported today to have told an intimate Congressional luncheon group that the Royal Air Force had attained daytime superiority in Britain's own skies and was still expanding.

One informant said the Prime Minister believed it quite likely that Germany would make a major attempt to invade Britain in the spring.

He was said to have stated that British information about enemy troop concentrations had improved greatly. It would be impossible, he was quoted, for the Nazis to send any large force across the English Channel without undergoing terrific punishment from the RAF before the expedition ever got started.

Pieced together, reports from the legislators who lunched with Churchill yesterday gave this picture:

Churchill's information was that the German retreat in Russia had been orderly in general, although the Nazis may have been routed at a few points.

He was convinced that in Libya British soldiers had proved themselves more than equal to the Germans, man to man, when they had comparable equipment.

He expressed hope that Singapore could be held against the Japanese.

He said the chief weaknesses of the German people were lack of a sense of humor and an inability to grasp the problems of humanity.

Post-War Unity Is British Aim

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 27—The Daily Mail today interpreted Prime Minister Winston. Churchill's address in the United States Senate yesterday as an expression of his "belief in a post-war federation of the United States and the British Empire."

"His hope will be shared by Britons everywhere," said the Daily Mail, citing the closing passage of the Prime Minister's speech.

Other Comments

The Daily Express, declaring that "unity with America in the last war was a sham" because it "fell to pieces in victory," declared:

"Mr. Churchill asks the people of Britain and America for a real unity of purpose this time . . .

"Before we enter the harder fights ahead we must hammer out between us a solid agreement able to stand the strain of good times and bad."

Said the News Chronicle:

"There will be widespread hope that this occasion will be the forerunner of many more—in peace as well as in war—and that in due course the Parliament of Britain will have the honor of receiving the President in his turn."

Churchill Meets Wheeler

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—Prime Minister Churchill greeted Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) at luncheon yesterday with a hearty handshake and assurance that it is "a real pleasure and privilege to meet you," several Congressmen disclosed.

Then Churchill told luncheon companions how he had tried to discourage criticism of Munich appeasers in Britain because "if the present criticizes the past, there is not much hope for the future."

Canada Plans Reception For Premier Churchill

Ottawa, Dec. 2. (AP)—Preparations went forward today for the reception of Prime Minister Churchill next week and the prediction was made that it would rival that accorded the King and Queen in May, 1939.

Members of the House of Commons and the Senate were summoned by telegrams today to hear the Prime Minister speak on Tuesday and to meet him. Parliament stands adjourned until January 21 and the House of Commons chamber, for the day, will be just a meeting place to which only its members and Senators will be admitted.

In the galleries, the diplomatic corps, judges of the Supreme Court of Canada, high Government officials and possibly a limited number of the public will be given seats.

Churchill Appreciative Of Messages On Speech

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—Sir Gerald Campbell, chief of the British Press Service in the United States, said today Prime Minister Churchill "deeply appreciates" a large number of telegrams and letters from Americans praising his speech before Congress yesterday.

"The messages are surprising to Britons," he said, "because in Great Britain nobody ever takes the trouble to send a telegram to anybody who makes a speech."

Sir Gerald said the Prime Minister regretted he would be unable to reply to all the messages personally.

London, Dec. 27 (AP).—The Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of All England, asked the people of Britain today to join on Jan. 1 in the day of prayer which President Roosevelt has designated in the United States.

U. S. Planning Special War-Prisoner Setup

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—The United States has informed Japan that all Japanese prisoners captured by American armed forces will be treated in accordance with the prisoner-of-war convention adopted by forty-seven nations at Geneva in 1929.

Japan signed, but never formally ratified, that pact. It was expected here, however, that she would grant American prisoners of war reciprocal fair and humane treatment.

Germany and Italy signed and ratified the pact and, on the basis of reports from the International Red Cross, are observing its provisions.

Special Unit Planned

To carry out the convention, the United States will set up an organization to handle war-prisoner questions in cooperation with Marc Peter, former Swiss Minister to Washington, who will represent the International Red Cross here.

The Japanese already hold a number of Americans as prisoners of war, including marines who were stationed at Peiping and Tientsin, the crew of an American gunboat captured at Shanghai, the marine garrison on Wake Island, a small naval and marine force taken on Guam, the undisclosed number of contract workers employed on these two captured bases, and presumably some American and Filipino troops taken in the Philippines.

U. S. Holds Some Japs

Only a few Japanese prisoners have yet been taken by American forces. These include several airmen shot down in Hawaii, and the two-man crew of at least one Japanese pigmy submarine which attacked Pearl Harbor.

In expectation that large numbers of Japanese will ultimately be captured, however, the War Department already is planning internment camps where Japanese prisoners of war—as distinct from interned Japanese nationals—will be held until exchanged or for the duration of the war.

The prisoners-of-war pact, sponsored by the International Red Cross, was adopted in a meeting at Geneva on July 27, 1929. It establishes minimum standards for the treatment of all prisoners and provides for monthly inspections of prison camps by a representative of the Red Cross and of the nation representing the interested belligerent.

The United States is represented in all enemy countries by Switzerland. Swiss Ministers, accordingly, will inspect all prison camps in which Americans may be held in Japan, Germany or Italy.

"Must Be Humanely Treated"

The general provisions of the pact provide that prisoners be held in a town, fortress or inclosed camps with eating, housing, sanitary and health conditions the equivalent of living conditions for soldiers of similar rank in the forces of the detaining power.

Wounded and ill must be given prompt and adequate medical and hospital treatment.

Prisoners of war "must at all times be humanely treated and protected, particularly against acts of violence, insults and public curiosity," and measures of reprisal against them are prohibited.

"Person Must Be Respected"

Prisoners of war "have the right to have their person and their honor respected" and women prisoners must be treated with due regard to their sex.

No coercion may be used to secure information from prisoners and those who refuse to answer may not be threatened, insulted or given disadvantageous treatment.

May Be Put To Work

All prisoners shall enjoy liberty of religion, intellectual diversion and sports when possible, and all regulations, orders and notices of every kind must be in a language they understand.

Belligerents may utilize the labor of war prisoners, except officers or persons of equivalent status, but prisoners may not be employed at work for which they are physicaly unfit, or at any work which has direct relation with war operations, and must be paid at wages to be agreed upon.

Ban Short Wave Radios, Cameras To Enemy Aliens

Washington, Dec. 27.—(AP.)—The Justic Department today ordered Japanse, German and Italian nationals in seven Pacific coast states to turn in all short wave radio equipment and cameras in their possession by 11 p. m. Monday.

It was reported authoritatively that similar regulations for the rest of the country would be issued next week.

Today's regulations apply to California, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Utah and Nevada.

The equipment must be surrendered to local police authorities who, the Justice Department said, would be asked to issue receipts.

The prohibited radio equipment includes not only transmitters but home receiving sets with short wave bands. Large studio cameras need not be turned in but they must be registered and may not be used except by specific permission of United States attorneys.

The penalties for willful failure to obey the regulations are forfeiture of the articles and arrest of the alien.

The Department warned that the responsibility rests on the alien himself for determining whether articles in his possession come within the scope of prohibited equipment. Radio sets capable of receiving signals of 1750 kilocycles or greater, or 540 kilocycles or less, are considered within the prohibited range.

Use Of Air Mail Urged Instead Of Telephones

Long-Distance Lines Should Be Kept Open For Emergency, Walker Says

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—Postmaster General Walker today urged the use of air mail instead of long-distance telephone so that wire lines may be kept open "for any emergency which might arise."

The telephone companies have requested that only the most urgent long-distance calls be made, Walker said, adding that there now is dawn-to-dusk air-mail service between both coasts.

Rationing Of Tires Expected To Affect Business Widely

Industries Far Removed From Rubber Field Forecast To Feel Impact Of Move

DEC 29 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 27—Strict Government rationing of passenger-car and truck tires will affect industries far removed from the rubber factory, observers in this center of rubber production predicted tonight.

In the light of sharp curtailment of all civilian tire buying for an estimated 32,000,000 passenger cars, it was believed thousands of individuals who depend on automobiles and certain types of trucks for their livelihood will begin to feel the pinch within the next few months.

Scope Of Order

The curtailment order applies to taxicab fleets, trucks used in milk and retail store deliveries and the business machines of traveling salesmen. With this great potential tire market closed, observers saw withdrawal from use of enough machines to ultimately make the pinch felt in the nation's garages, filling stations and repair shops.

Directly affected by the tire rationing and regulations are thousands of men in the tire sales lines themselves.

Effect On Builders

Less seriously affected will be the tire builders. It is estimated in Akron, where defense contracts now have topped $800,000,000, that less than 2,000 among more than 40,000 rubber production workers will feel the jolt of rationing dislocations. Against this they have the cushion of estimates that no less than 10,000 defense workers will be needed here when building defense plants get into production next spring.

Staff At Washington To Work 12-Hour Shifts—Headquarters To Have Beds

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—The Office of Civilian Defense went on a twenty-four-hour operating basis today and prepared to move in beds at its headquarters here.

The staff will work twelve-hour shifts, officials announced, and will be prepared to furnish information which may be sought by local defense councils.

Defense Plants Asked To Work On New Year's

DEC 29 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—William S. Knudsen, OPM director general, and Associate Director Sidney Hillman joined today in urging that all war industry plants work full time on New Year's Day.

Their statement said that the proposed holiday work was suggested spontaneously in many sections of the country and that a nation-wide adoption of it would "speed collapse of the Axis by millions of man-hours."

Knudsen quoted a telegram from a mid-Western manufacturer who said that "Since the men at the front are not taking time off to celebrate New Year's Day, we feel that this should not be considered a holiday for defense plants."

"This sacrifice of a single day's time would produce striking results," Knudsen declared, "due to the fact that production of planes and tanks and weapons of all kinds is now rolling along on a mass production basis."

Hillman observed that every hour, every plane, every tank and every gun was vital to success of the war effort and that "many American lives may be saved by putting in this extra day of production."

Land Uses Occasion To Cite Speed Of American Shipbuilding Program

Says Two-Launchings-A-Day Rate Will Be Reached In Second 1942 Quarter

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—The United States, building up its wartime fleet of cargo carriers, took formal possession today of sixteen merchantmen owned by the Axis ally Finland.

The ships, for weeks under the protective custody of Coast Guardsmen to make certain that nothing happened to them, were boarded by Maritime Commission representatives. Notices were posted that the vessels were United States property, seized under the Ship Requisition Act (which provides for ultimate compensation to the owners).

Today's seizure was in addition to eighty other craft, mainly Danish and Italian vessels, taken over in recent months.

Summarizes Shipbuilding

The action coincided with the issuance by Maritime Commission Chairman Emory S. Land of a summary on the shipbuilding program. His statement had two significant points:

America's entry into war found it "in the most advantageous maritime preparedness in its history," but—

"Right now we have insufficient ships for our national defense needs."

Land did not expand on this second point, but it was assumed his reference was to the far-flung theaters of war. The prime problem in the first World War was to get men and supplies to Europe, a simple crossing of the Atlantic with the hazards confined almost entirely to submarines and mines. Today the fronts are scattered through both hemispheres, with aviation added to the dangers confronting the troop transports and cargo carriers.

Cites Groundwork

While conceding that the current merchant marine fleet was insufficient, Land said:

"The United States has laid a groundwork for its defense and war programs which has placed it far ahead of the position it occupied at any previous crisis.

"As a result of Congressional and Administration policy the nation was not caught flat-footed when war came and the shipbuilding industry is many months ahead of its effort in the first World War.

"The ship-a-day stage in launchings was reached in December. During the first quarter of 1942 the commission's schedule calls for the laying of 148 keels, launching of 125 ships and the delivery of 71 completed vessels.

2 A Day In Second Quarter

"The second quarter of the year should bring the program to the two-ships-a-day stage, and constantly increasing tempo, it is expected, will, if labor produces, result in the delivery into service of an average of two ships a day throughout 1942 and 1943, a total of about 13,500,000 dead-weight tons."

Speaking of the vastly augmented production facilities, Land said that private shipyards capable of building oceangoing merchant ships of 400 feet or more had been expanded from the 1937 total of 10 with 46 ways to a present total of 40 with 275 ways.

This 500 per cent. increase did not include Great Lakes yards, he said.

Ship Sabotage Convictions Upheld in U. S. Court

DEC 29 1941

By the Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 27.—The intent of a congressional act, passed shortly after the United States entered World War 1, was cited in an opinion handed down in the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals here yesterday affirming lower court convictions in Italian ship sabotage cases.

"The purpose of the section was not to protect the owners of vessels against the malicious acts of others, but to protect the vessels themselves," said Justice John J. Parker in the opinion.

"Fresh in the mind of Congress in 1917 must have been the acts of the crews of German vessels in American ports, who, shortly prior to the passage of the act, had been guilty of dismantling the machinery of the vessels and doing other acts to render them practically worthless."

Three separate cases were incorporated in the one opinion. Appellants were 41 officers and crew members of the Italian vessels Pietro Campanella and Euro, anchored in Baltimore Harbor, and the Villarperosa, anchored at Wilmington. The men were arrested when F. B. I. men raided the ships March 30.

MERIT SET AS ARMY PROMOTION BASIS

DEC 29 1941

War Department Order Puts Aside Length Of Service As Criterion

Plan Expected To Bring Age Of Officers Nearer Level In Other Armies

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 27—On the eve of a vast expansion of the land forces, the War Dpartment ordered today that the accompanying temporary promotion of army officers be based entirely on demonstrated merit.

Setting aside the remnants of the time-honored peacetime system of advancement based mainly on length of service, the order followed a 1917-1918 precedent.

It is expected to lower the average age nearer to levels prevailing in the British and German armies, a long-standing War Department objective, as well as to open the way to the top for youthful officers of proven capability.

Applies To All Officers

The order was made applicable uniformly to reserve and National Guard officers and retired officers recalled to active duty, as well as regulars. Sixty per cent. of promotions to fill vacancies as they occur are to be made on recommendation of field commanders, and the remainder by the War Department.

As a part of the new move an undisclosed number of lieutenant colonels and majors of the regular army who already had been approved for advancement were ordered promoted one grade, along with 360 captains and 1,260 first lieutenants of the Medical Corps.

Merit System Now Effective

The order made immediately effective a merit system toward which the army had been moving by gradual stages.

Brigadiers and higher-ranking generals had long been selected on their records rather than on seniority. This procedure was extended months ago to promotions to colonel, with the eventual application of the selection process to lower commissioned grades as well.

Only Wartime Promotions

Officials explained the order applied only to temporary wartime promotions because the permanent promotion of regular army officers is fixed by law and must take seniority into consideration. As features of "distinct benefit to the whole army," the War Department listed these effects of the order:

"It removes the existing suspension of promotion of officers of the reserve corps to grades of lieutenant colonel and colonel and of National Guard officers not on duty with the National Guard units to those grades. It places all officers of all components on the same basis for promotion.

"It decentralizes selection for promotion to field commanders who can base their recommendations upon personal observation of demonstrated merit and gives those officers who have demonstrated outstanding ability during the current emergency an opportunity for early advancement to grades comparable to their attainments and equalizes responsibility and rank."

JAPS' PREPARED--Secrecy

One Of Best Weapons

By GLENN BABB, Wide World News Writer

30.21—13797

30.24—13797

(How was Japan able to conceal from the world the extent of her preparedness for war? Glenn Babb, veteran of many years' service as a correspondent in the Far East, tells how this secrecy was accomplished.)

DEC 29 1941

New York, Dec. 24—No matter what further surprises the Japanese may spring in this war they will produce no secret weapon half as effective as secrecy itself.

No midget submarines or other innovations of war can aproach, in deadliness, the utter surprise of that first blow at Pearl Harbor.

The same is true in less degree of the preparations for the conquest of Hongkong, the first drive into Malaya and the landings on the Philippines, all of which surpassed in numbers employed, efficiency of staff work and quality of weapons the expectations of the Anglo-Saxon powers.

Major Accomplishment

The Japanese owe all this to the most effective veil of secrecy that any modern nation has been able to throw about its military projects. Nearly the entire nation of 70,000,000 people had been mobilized in the greatest counter-espionage effort of history.

The accomplishments of the German and Russians armies have stunned or electrified the world, but of these ample warning was given. The Germans boasted of their might, hoping to make an ally of fear. Even the Russians were given to parading their new weapons through the Red Square for foreign military men to see.

Not so the Japanese. During four and a half years of war in China they kept their best divisions hidden in Manchoukuo, their battle-fleet inactive, and gave demonstrations of military ineptitude in China that made many experts rate their land and air forces as second rate.

A Tremendous Plot

Behind the curtain, the Japanese army and navy elaborated a tremendous plot against the Anglo-Saxon world, of proportions that would have seemed fantastic had they been disclosed before December 7.

The purpose of the Japanese military clique, to drive the white man out of East Asia, had its inception at least a generation ago. Even while Japan was the ally of Britain and the United States in the first World War, some of her generals and admirals were plotting to make Nippon the mistress of the whole Orient, a program which involved tossing the Occidentals out.

Tokyo made the first passes at mastery of China and Russian Siberia in the years 1915-19 while the Anglo-Saxons were engaged elsewhere. But when the war was over, leaving the United States the world's greatest military power with a rapidly growing navy, the Japanese were prevailed upon to forego their expansionist ambitions and for nearly a decade liberal governments ruled in Tokyo.

Huge Naval Program

Before this change of heart, the Japanese navy had embarked on a tremendous "eight-eight" building program—eight huge battleships and eight battle cruisers, some of 40,000 to 50,000 tons. The Washington conference put this in the discard, but in 1931 the generals ended civilian control of imperial policy by seizing Manchuria and committing the empire to a new expansionist program and soon the admirals found ways to revive their long-silent dockyards.

The beginning of the China war in 1937 removed all restrictions on the militarists and placed at their disposal just about all the funds they could spend. Industry was harnessed, the whole people regimented, all agencies of information and propaganda drafted for the tremendous effort to prepare for the day.

Westerners may well wonder how such deep secrecy could wrap an undertaking so vast, how 40,000 or 50,000-ton fighting ships could be hidden away, millions of men armed and armadas of shipping made ready.

Language Is Difficult

But the Japanese have two tremendous counter-espionage assets to begin with. Their language is the most difficult used by any major people, in practice almost a secret code of which knowledge is shared by only a handful of foreigners. And the Occidental in Japan is a marked man by the very color of his skin; a foreign agent has two strikes on him before he begins.

For years foreigners have been barred from certain zones, and elsewhere their most innocent travels and activities have been spied on and fully reported to the police. The Japanese people, naturally secretive and suspicious, lent themselves readily to the anti-spy campaign, at the same time satisfying an all-pervading, childlike curiosity.

Japanese translators for foreign embassies and news correspondents were told forcefully by the gendarmerie how far they could go in letting the white man know what was in the Japanese press.

Foreigners In The Dark

This was more effective than it appears, because only a very few Occidentals have a reading knowledge of Japanese. Most of these are missionaries who in order not to jeopardize their own work have avoided involvement in political or military matters.

Foreign naval and military attaches—especially the Americans and Britons—have worked almost entirely in the dark for the last ten years. Their visits to the big naval bases or army centers have been confined to brief ceremonial occasions and then they were kept carefully away from those sections where real work was in progress.

Racial Solidarity

Another factor in the racial solidarity of the Japanese, the lack of traitors willing to sell their country's secrets to the alien. From time to time an American or British naval man would be approached by a shady individual professing readiness to deliver maps or plans, but the Americans followed the rule of always turning these over to the authorities—on the theory that such persons would turn out to be Government agents.

American newspaper correspondents found it inadvisable to keep files of any sort beyond the dispatches sent through the Japanese censorship. The arrest of a British colleague, and his death—officially labeled suicide—while in custody, pointed to the wisdom of this precaution.

Even foreign technicians who were engaged to install machinery or supervise processes used in the military effort had to go about their work almost blindfolded. They were confined to small areas of the factories in which they worked and made to go to and fro by carefully designated routes from which nothing could be seen. Even Germans have complained of such treatment.

Vast Fifth Column

All this secrecy at home was complemented by a vast espionage and fifth-column organizations extending to all shores of the Pacific and beyond. Some of this was poorly concealed. The Japanese naval officer who turned mess boy in a white man's club or fisherman along the American Pacific Coast has been a half-joke for a decade.

We knew there were dangerous fifth columns in Hawaii and at Davao in the Philippines, that Japanese were showing strange enthusiasms for level farmlands in Central America near the Panama Canal.

But the war has shown how sinister all this was. Secretary Frank Knox said the Hawaii fifth column surpassed anything of its kind except perhaps in Norway. The little soda-pop peddler of Aparri becomes Major Hara of his imperial Japanese majesty's army. Fishermen on the Cuba and Costa Rican coasts are seized as spies. Japanese cotton pickers in New Guinea and merchants in Borneo have to be "rounded up."

Everywhere through the South Seas the Japanese spread their shopkeepers who made no money, their uniquitous camera shops, their barbers—more pervasive, even, than the Nazi "tourists" who swarmed through Europe.

Many Weird Stories

The first weeks of the Pacific war have prouced many weird stories of Japanese secret weapons, the two-man submarines of Pearl Harbor, one-man tanks, parachute troops, special landing boats.

But the most important secret was the extent and thoroughness of their preparation and their readiness to risk it all in a gamble that staggers the imagination.

The Americans and British have yet to learn whether there are Japanese counterparts of the great battleship Bismarck ranging the Eastern seas, whether the Japanese really have built pocket battleships for raiding the distant reaches of the Pacific, whether they have developed a really formidable armored force and whether the experts have underestimated their capacity for training and equipping with modern weapons an army greater than the 2,000,000 at which their strength had been estimated.

Problems Ahead In Unified Rule

Strategy Places Hitler's Destruction as Its First Task

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON (Wide World)—Three weeks of common warfare have carried the United States and Great Britain to a point reached only after many costly months in the first world conflict. Then, it was not until grave and immediate danger made the step unavoidable that a unified command of all the Allied forces on the western front was established.

When this unwanted war began for America, it was obvious at once to military men that a war fought on such a huge scale, a war of many widely separated fronts must have central direction and planning. President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill were among the first to realize it. Churchill's emotion-stirring visit to Washington and the conferences that have followed are evidence enough of that.

But that very vastness of conflict, which necessitates unity of command, makes difficult the problem of establishing it and defining the scope of its activities.

Churchill Views

Obviously no one man should be given the power to direct warfare in the Philippines, Malaya, Russia and Africa simultaneously. As Mr. Churchill said in his press conference last week, no one man born is possessed of the wisdom and knowledge such a post would require.

It would be better, he added, to block out the general Allied strategy and leave the details to be filled in by the commanding officers on the spot in the various theaters of war.

For example, the arms, planes, ammunition and engines of war available to the Allies are for the time being relatively limited, when the scale of the military operations is considered. Until there are sufficient quantities for all fronts, the High Command must decide where the available supply will do the most good.

This involves the weighing of dozens of possibilities and decisions that can be made only painfully. Undoubtedly the war council has already been called upon to decide whether it is more important to maintain a stronger front against the Nazi armies than against the Japanese, to keep harassing Hitler in Russia, in Africa and on the Atlantic, at the cost of temporary losses in the Pacific. The latter could even include a withdrawal from the Philippines and Singapore, leaving the Japanese free to reach into the rich resources of the East Indies for their war materials.

Germany First

That is a tremendous decision for any group of men to have to make. But after considering all the possible consequences the decision has, to all outward appearances, been reached to concentrate on Hitler. That, obviously, has become our over-all war strategy. Presumably it is based on this line of reasoning:

When Germany is beaten to her knees, it will be relatively simple for the combined strength of the Allies to move into the Pacific and stifle Japan. But if Japan is beaten the problem of defeating Hitler has been little simplified at best. At worst, he may meanwhile have strengthened his position due to the diversion of Allied strength.

It has been a tough decision to take for a nation aroused to mighty anger by the treachery of the Japanese at Pearl Harbor, a nation thinking of the pitiably ill-equipped Marine garrison at Wake Island, repeatedly fighting off the thrusts of the enemy, thinking of the outnumbered American and Filipino forces on the Island of Luzon.

Naval War Strategy Biggest Issue Before High Command

DEC 29 1941

By CLARKE BEACH

WASHINGTON (Wide World)—Two men sat down quite alone in a room of oval shape and planned to lead the democracies of the earth to victory over the totalitarian powers.

President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill were confronting the old ghost which always has haunted the leaders of allied armies and navies—the problem of unified command. The operations they envisaged more infinitely more complex than those of the last war, and they were on a far greater scale than any of the campaigns of Alexander, Caesar or Napoleon. They were faced with the first real world war in the history of the human race.

Even now the sun never sets on the embattled navies and armies. Every island and every inlet on the globe is potentially a battle area. The so-called first World War was local by comparison; it was fought mainly in Europe and on the Atlantic. Operations elsewhere were subsidiary and were terminated before the last stages of the war.

Sea Warfare First

The problems that the two conferees in the White House had to solve were primarily naval and ultimately military.

The stroke that will end the war is the destruction of the German army; no other triumph will bring peace, and after that has been achieved all other tasks can be accomplished with relative ease.

Sea warfare, however, presents the main problems at this time. Who will command the sea forces? How will they be co-ordinated? For what will they be used? Where will they fight?

There is little need just now to clarify the question of leadership on the land. There is no combination of Allied armies fighting on the same stalemated battlefront as in the 1914-18 war.

The Russians are battling on their 2,500-mile line alone, except for some help from the R. A. F. The British commonwealth troops compose nearly all the democratic forces in Africa, the Near East, the Middle East and the Malay peninsula. Free French and Ethiopians are giving valuable support, but not in sufficient numbers to have any claim to the over-all command. The Chinese have little foreign personnel on their front.

On the sea, however, where the United States and British navies already are operating side by side, some method of co-ordinating activities is essential. The movement of the navies back and forth, from one of the seven seas to another, the concentration of sea power in one area, the withdrawal from another—all presuppose some joint use of the two fleets, which would require that the orders come from a single authority.

Allied navies could be subject to the same weaknesses as Allied armies:

1. The junctures of the lines of Allies are regarded by tacticians as their weakest points.

2. The operations of Allies are likely to reflect their national interests. In the 1914-18 war the French were primarily concerned with blocking the road to Paris, the British were preventing the Germans from reaching the North Sea.

3. When a supreme Allied commander is appointed one nation's general or admiral still may thwart the generalissimo's plans by appealing over his head to his own government. General Pershing, for instance, in this way prevented Generalissimo Foch from infiltrating American forces into the depleted ranks of the British and French; he insisted on the American forces fighting as a unit.

No Merger of Fleets

Merger of units of the British and American fleets is not considered likely by military observers. Detachments of one nation's fleet may act as a unit in conjunction with elements from the other nation's, but an attempt at pooling probably would result in confusion, since the methods, tactics and terminology of the two fleets differ in many respects. Bases of one nation have to receive special equipment and material before they can service the ships of another. And tars or bluejackets could not man the vessels of their allies without a long period of special training.

Prime Minister Churchill, shortly after beginning his talks with the President, put an end to speculation about placing one man in charge of all the Allied land and sea forces.

U. S. Is Seen Needing Talk By Churchill

Allies' Advice Described as Coming From Depths of Own Bitter Experience

DEC 29 1941

BY FRED VANDERSCHMIDT.

Nothing can be better for this nation in these hours than to digest the invaluable words of advice and caution of our allies, words which come from the depths of their own terrible experience. Hence it is most heartening to some of us who watched the beginnings of Armageddon in England and continental Europe to see now that Americans are listening intently and with every evidence of appreciation to Winston Churchill.

In a way it is both presumptive and superfluous to try to interpret what Mr. Churchill says—there is no one today who can tell his own story more clearly. It may, however, be worthwhile to point out that in his speech to Congress Friday and in his subsequent private discussions with our own leaders there were these strong trends of warning: First, against burying our heads, ostrich-like, in the sand and becoming complacent; second, against rash impatience and third, against the depths of depression and defeatism which are the invariable results of rude awakening from either of the first two courses.

About Complacency.

Mr. Churchill knows that two years ago many of the English were complacent although they had far less reason to feel that way than we. The war was not very far away from them, although in those days of the tragically mis-named "bore war" it seemed so to many in England. The blow that awakened England to what Mr. Churchill called "our supreme hour" was Dunkerque; but this was almost a year after the war started, whereas our pre-belligerent complacency was jarred at the start of war by Pearl Harbor.

In case any of us had any doubt about it, the Japanese gave us additional proof Saturday that Mr. Churchill was right to say: "they —(our enemies)—will stop at nothing." The little men in planes which flaunt the crimson symbol of the rising sun dumped ton upon ton of explosive into the open and undefended city of Manila, where they knew by constant observation that there was not the slightest chance of opposition.

Impatient People.

Possibly to Americans, Mr. Churchill's caution against impatience is even more to the point. In speaking of a long and hard war he says, however, that "our peoples would rather know the truth, somber though it be." Then he tells us we must wait until 1943 or 1944 to strike the telling blow, because we are yet so short of total mobilization. To strike even then, he goes on, every effort must be made, nothing must be kept back, we must bend to the task "the whole man power, brain power, virility, valor and civic virtue of the English-speaking world."

Mr. Churchill well knows the unwisdom of impatience he learned it, with the rest of his people, in Norway, in Flanders, in Greece, in Africa. These were the bitter pills of "too little and too late." And we Americans have demonstrated, quite frequently since Munich, that we are far more impatient than the English.

No Defeatism.

As for the British Prime Minister's third warning, against the pitfalls of defeatism, that is something for the future, for there is no outward evidence in America today of such a trend. It may, however, creep below the surface as it undeniably crept in England before the English people themselves took new heart and stamped it out.

Mr. Churchill is utterly sure that we will win, "now that we are together," and he feels that on this "new scene . . . a steady light will glow and brighten." He is able, also, to bring concrete proof from the African desert that free armies, given at last the proper weapons, can "beat the life out of the savage Nazi."

This, he goes on, is only a foretaste of what we have got to give all the Axis. How soon we do it is, of course, simply up to us. To quote Churchill once more: "Sure I am that this day now we are the masters of our fate, that the task which has been set us is not above our strength, that its pangs and toils are not beyond our endurance."

Sforza Leads Drive on Axis

Hopes to Line Up 200,000 Italians in U. S. to 'Save' Native Land

(Editor's note: The Roosevelt-Churchill conferences in the White House make the following Wide World story by Jack Ferris highly pertinent, since the meetings have given new impetus to the various movements for freedom of peoples opposed to Axis domination. Count Sforza is one of the foremost Italian diplomats of the pre-Mussolini era and is a friend both of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.)

By JOHN FERRIS

NEW YORK (Wide World)—A movement is under way in New York to organize the 800,000 aliens of Italian birth in the United States as well as the millions in Latin America and elsewhere in the world in what Count Carlo Sforza, formerly Italy's Foreign Minister, characterized yesterday as "the crusade of Italians outside of Italy to save their country."

Count Sforza, who resigned his post as Ambassador to France in opposition to Mussolini's assumption of power and the rise of Fascism in Italy, estimates there are about 10,000,000 Italians outside of Italy.

"The creation of some form of national Italian committee," he said, "is now an absolute necessity not only for Italy, but for America if we wish to co-ordinate all the Italian forces abroad. Italy can only be saved by Italians. Garibaldi delivered southern Italy 80 years ago with his 'thousand.'

"What has been done may be done again. What is only needed is to realize that this is a war of moral ideas, not of nationalities. When all the others have understood—fully understood—this, then victory will be imminent, and not before."

Count Sforza's Contacts

Through the Mazzini Society in this country and the Spanish-titled Italia Libre, a similar organization in South America, Count Sforza is in constant touch with Italians throughout the Western hemisphere. Moreover, he carries on extensive communications with anti-Fascist Italians abroad.

A few weeks ago, he said, he received some 300,000 signatures of Italians in the United States and Latin America protesting against the executions by Italian troops of rebel elements in Yugoslavia, Greece and Croatia. The signatories petitioned Count Sforza to communicate their protest to President Roosevelt and the heads of the Latin-American republics.

"What moved me deeply," Count Sforza said, "was the fact that among the signers were many former Italian Army officers who offered to fight again for the liberation of Italy from the Nazi yoke."

The count, who is nearing 70, negotiated the treaty of Rapallo between Italy and Yugoslavia in 1920. When he resigned as Ambassador to France on Mussolini's accession to power, he returned to Italy and became one of the chief leaders of the anti-Fascist opposition in the Senate. When he finally left Italy he went to France and was there until the collapse of the republic.

Came to United States

He came to the United States a year ago and has lectured and written extensively since that time. The University of Chicago Press published his "The Totalitarian War and After" in the fall.

Count Sforza, a tall, strongly built man of aristocratic bearing, said the fight against Fascism by Italians outside of Italy "must come out of a deep contact with the 45,000,000 persons enslaved in Italy."

He said he believed the first line of action was "to enlighten the many millions of Americans of Italian origin who have been misled by the Italian language press in this country and by the propaganda into the idea that Mussolini and Fascism were synonymous with Italian greatness."

"Actually Mussolini means and has always meant the grossest negation of the highest Italian ideals and interests," he said. "That is why this campaign of enlightenment can only be made by Italians who have always loved freedom and have always loved Italy, and not by the men who until yesterday admired Mussolini.

"In the United States," he continued, 'Fifth Columnism is not only a possible future danger. It is already an existing passive danger. In the Middle West some of the 5,000,000 Americans of Italian origin do not yet believe that Mussolini is not only an enemy to America, but been poisoned so long by Italo-American newspapers which have published the most violent Fascist boastings.

Dangerous Poisoning

"I have just spent three months in the Middle West and I know how dangerous is the poisoning of these innocent Italo-Americans.

"The paradox of that situation is that 45,000,000 Italians living in Italy now form a solid block of hatred and contempt against Mussolini, his gang and the even more despicable pro-Fascist appeasers who helped Mussolini in all his crimes while playing abroad the role of false moderators.

"The great democracies risk lengthening the war by not using at once the tremendous potential Italian forces of destruction against the Axis.

"What consoles me as a loyal Italian is that I know that Roosevelt and Churchill have imagination enough to understand."

Count Sforza said he had received through a friendly legation in Washington a letter in code from "a high Italian personality" in Europe, who declared "the hatred and fear of Mussolini and Fascism has touched even many men highly placed in the Fascist party."

Might Oust Mussolini

The letter, the count said, disclosed that German elements were even contemplating replacing Mussolini with Roberto Farinacci, Fascist firebrand and editor of Regima Fascista, a Cremona newspaper.

"This would mean the complete and no longer veiled reign by the Gestapo in Italy," the letter said, and added that "the only thing which restrains a revolution in Italy is the fear of the Germans."

Two things should be remembered, the letter continued. The first of these is that the Allies should make it felt in Italy that Italy herself is not the enemy, but that Mussolini and his men are. The second is that it is important in Allied circles to destroy the illusion which still exists in certain conservative quarters in England that men like Dino Grandi, one-time Italian Ambassador to the United States, but not a Fascist, might be a solution in ridding Italy of the Fascists and making an ally of the people.

"These men," Count Sforza said, 'are hated even more than the Fascists. The Fascists are brigands, but the others suppressed what few ideals they had and went along with the gang. They are like the grafting officials who would support a gangster regime in one of your American cities."

Soviet Arms Still Forcing Nazis Back

German Divisions Have Yet to Heed Hitler's Cry to Make Fanatic Stand

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Doubtful is it the immediate war outlook for Americans in the Philippines, "glad tidings" from several fronts support the prediction by Britain's valiant Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, that the war-crazed Axis is doomed to ultimate defeat.

Singapore's defenders have at least temporarily stalled the Japanese drive down the Malayan Peninsula. MacArthur's American-Filipino fighters are taking a bloody toll—and gaining priceless time—for every foot of ground yielded to invaders on Luzon.

Reds Press On.

In Libya an Axis army of 150,000 or more, a third of them Germans, has been smashed, vaunted Nazi tank echelons put to rout. And from Russia comes word of new Red Army successes hinting at further impending German disasters.

Southeast of Leningrad, a Russian thrust northwestward from recaptured Tikhvin is aimed menacingly at the rear of the right flank of the German siege ring about the former Czarist capital. It is perilously close to the main German supply line for that flank via the Novogorod-Chudovo-Leningrad rail and highway system.

Nazi failure to halt that Russian drive could break the siege of Leningrad completely. It could also play havoc with any German intention to establish a winter holding front south of Leningrad, buttressed by Lake Ilmen. The shelter of that huge lake, and use of the good rail and road communications which flank it both to the northwest and southwest, has been clearly indicated as an important item in the Nazi retreat planning.

Import of Kaluga.

It is far to the south below Moscow, however, that the Russians have made the most important crack in what seems to be the intended German winter front position.

The bloody and still unsuccessful German efforts to capture Sevastopol in the Crimea while falling back elsewhere across Russia makes it possible to visualize their intended halting points. The taking of Sevastopol would clear the whole Crimea of Russian resistance. Its use as a bridgehead to the Caucasus at some uncertain future time would require its retention by the Nazis.

Northward, however, the Nazis seem to have been planning a winter front extending from Mariupol on the Azov Sea coast to positions along the west bank of the Donets River to the Kharkov area. Thence it would run along the Kharkov-Moscow railroad through Kursk and Orel to the Oka front, of which Kaluga is the northern pivot.

Above that, retention of the closest present Nazi bulge to Moscow in the Maloyaroslavets-Mozhaisk-Volokolamsk areas has been indicated by German foot-by-foot resistance. That bulge would maintain throughout the winter a grave threat to Moscow, pinning huge defense forces that could be used elsewhere. The most desperate fighting has been reported in that area for days.

Other Front Points.

Northward of Volokolamsk the indicated winter front has appeared to run to Rhjev and thence up the upper Volga to the Valdai hills, to connect with Lake Ilmen bastion north of that rugged plateau.. There has been every indication the Nazis were endeavoring to establish such a holding front despite Russian efforts to turn their retirement into a general rout.

Kaluga is a pivotal point for the whole center of that line, due to rail and road connections centering there. If it has fallen into Russian hands, as claimed, the Nazi bulge west of Moscow is threatened from the south with encirclement. Its abandonment in another wide and deep German retreat to a front along a Rhjev-Vyazama-Bryansk-Orel line might be forced, and even Orel is menaced by a Red Army drive southwestward from Tula.

Should Orel also pass into Russian hands again, the German line-straightening retreat must gain new rearward momentum on a center front 300 miles or more wide and under winter conditions that have already cost the retreating Nazis heavily. The reported Red recapture of Kaluga, therefore, offers the Russians glittering new prospects of hurling the foe back another 80 or 100 miles in the center, if it can be promptly exploited.

Travel Abroad No Longer Fun

Neutral Nations Raise Manifold Barriers to Many Trips

DEC 29 1941

(Editor's note: Lynn Heinzerling, back in the United States from a tour of duty as a correspondent in Lisbon and Madrid, recalls for Wide World some of the tribulations of moving about from country to country in Europe.)

By LYNN HEINZERLING

NEW YORK (Wide World)—It's hard to say goodby to Europe — but not for sentimental reasons.

The police, the consulates, the railroad men and the customs officials all over the continent have combined to make a trip to America a wonder of red tape, small-time bribery and string-pulling.

The tables where homeward-bound Americans gather in Lisbon are a welter of stories of undressing at this border, waiting six weeks for visas in that capital, trunks lost in Spain, residence permits denied, money confiscated and, worst of all, exit permits denied.

There is a sign on the wall of the Portuguese consulate in Madrid which reads: "You are cordially invited not to request visas for Portugal."

Not Wanted Now.

This is approximately the attitude most countries take now toward travelers in their countries. Countries which in better days spent thousands luring the tourist dollars, pounds and francs now spend just as much trying to keep you out, watching you if you make it and generally making it difficult for you.

The crowning blow came when the Portuguese closed their border with Spain, thus bottling up everyone hoping to get to Lisbon and America. The Pan-American clippers at Lisbon are now the only lifeline between Lisbon and New York, save for foreign vessels.

There are hundreds of Americans, Englishmen and refugees of all nationalities waiting in Lisbon for a ride to America. They refused to come when they had the chance. They face many harrowing moments.

In the last two years I have crossed most of the frontiers of Europe, applied for dozens of visas, stood in line for days and invented many new words for minor officials.

Waited Two Months

I once waited two months in Berlin to get a simple permit to leave the country. I waited five weeks in Lisbon for a Spanish visa. I waited 10 weeks in Madrid for a Portuguese visa. Others have had similar experiences and some refugees, of course, have waited years for the official nod which will send them on their way to the promised land.

In most consulates you now fill out three or four application blanks—one for the consulate, one for the foreign office and another for the government police. Usually the police have the last word as to whether you are to be admitted.

At one frontier station in Europe you can save yourself from undressing for the customs officials by handing over a package of cigarets. At another, nothing will save you if you look suspicious.

The usual route for the westbound withdrawal from Central Europe has been through Switzerland, unoccupied France, Spain and Portugal. Within a few hours after starting the train trip in Geneva you were examined three times—by the Swiss customs' officials, by German police in a corner of occupied France crossed by the railroad and by the French customs authorities.

Waiting for a Seat

Unless you were lucky enough to secure bookings all the way through you were held up in Barcelona, perhaps for days, waiting for a seat on the train. Plane reservations have been almost out of the question recently. In Madrid there was another wait for reservations to Lisbon, although it was possible usually to get plane tickets there. By this time, your heavy luggage usually was far behind you. Most travelers gave up in despair at this point and, if everything was in order, went on to Lisbon and hoped the arrival of their baggage would coincide with their sailing dates if they were able to get a sailing date.

Night Life Still Gay In London

Gayety Mainly Goes on in Hotels and Night Clubs, With 'Bottle Parties' Most Popular

DEC 28 1941

London—(Correspondence of Wide World.)—The blackout dims the twisting streets of old London but inside the lights burn bright and long amid a night life that still sports a gay complexion despite the pallors of war.

Most of the gayety goes on in the hotels and the night clubs. The poor man's night clubs—the pubs—close at 10 o'clock, so that lets the poor man out both ways.

But one at a time—the hotels.

There are three big ones where life is about as gay (as hotel gayety goes) as any place you could imagine.

Orchestras play, though not very well, and people laugh and dance and drink and eat.

So called American bars are popular but they aren't very American. A mint julep is about as unobtainable as the hands of Big Ben and if you asked for an old-fashioned the bartender would probably hand you whisky in a shaving mug.

Londoners in wartime don't wear dress clothes to hotels. But they wear everything else.

You'll find at one table a red-braided brigadier, a man from the city in striped pants and black coat, a young fellow in a sport coat, an RAF officer in blue and a captain in traditional dress garb.

The women will be dressed in black generally, but seldom in long black. Often you'll see a pretty girl in sweater and skirt or afternoon frock.

It's all pretty informal.

Waiters Better Off

Waiters still buzz about in white ties—far more immaculate and better dressed than the customers, and as one American explained it, "Heck, they're better able to afford clothes than the customers. They make more."

Dance tunes are mostly from Tin Pan Alley and there is no such thing as the jitterbug.

That takes care of the hotels, which is probably better than the hotels take care of you. Service in wartime is bad. So many of the young waiters have been called to the colors.

Night clubs: There are two kinds—Clubs you can get into if you have the money, and clubs you can get into if you have the money and the patience to argue.

The first kind shoo you out about 11 and therefore are not as popular as the latter, which are called "bottle parties." Theoretically, this means that somebody's giving a party, you've been invited and you've already made arrangements for your drinks.

Here's the way it's handled:

A member takes you to the club. You join. This means you pay about a dollar. The next day a polite letter arrives from a whisky seller. He says he's ready to deliver your order to your club. You write him and tell him you want such and such number of bottles of so and so.

The next time you show up at the club you just turn to the waiter and tell him to bring you your bottle of such and such, or so and so. He does.

Staring Ladies.

The best bands are at the bottle parties. The musicians get more fun out of playing and they whoop it up hot, generally.

At some of the better bottle parties you become aware that you are being stared at by a number of ladies who don't seem to have any men with them. Then you discover that they're staring at all the men—who don't have ladies with them.

These staring ladies are hostesses—hired by the clubs to dance and talk to guests who have no ladies with them.

The hostesses operate on the plan that every guest desires a lady to talk to and dance with.

For the company of these ladies at your table you pay about four dollars, which, based on the brand of conversation and terpsichorean art expended, is robbery without gun.

Bottle parties run until about 4 a. m., and even in the best of places, the gayety is likely to get downright rowdy anytime from opening to 4 a. m.

People also enjoy night life at parties in their homes, which is amazing only to the extent that with taxes and prices what they are, it's hard to figure how they can finance them.

But they have them.

The big damper on London's night life is the blackout. Once you're out in it, life becomes grim. If it's after midnight, you can't get a bus or the subway. This means you've got to roam the streets and yell yourself blacker in the face than the blackout trying to find a taxi.

When and if you get one, the driver probably will ask you how far you want to go, and if your destination is three or four miles, he'll probably tell you he doesn't need your business. With gasoline rationing, London taximen prefer to haul you a short way.

The theater doesn't play much part in the life after dark. Lots of them are running, but the government makes them shut early so people can get home before the transportation systems shut down. They also don't encourage citizens congregating in places (except shelters) during hours when bombs might be dropping.

All in all, it's amazing that things are as gay as they are and that laughter seems a real part of the scene.

FIRST LEAD-SINGAPORE

DEC 28 1941

SINGAPORE, DEC. 27-(AP)-JAPANESE BOMBERS CONCENTRATED THEIR FIRE ON THE KUALA LUMPAR DISTRICT YESTERDAY AND BADLY DAMAGED ONE OF MALAYA'S LARGEST AND FINEST MOSQUES LOCATED IN THE VERY HEART OF THE CAPITAL CITY OF THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES, 180 MILES NORTH OF SINGAPORE.

THE BOMBERS STRUCK ON A MOSLEM PRAYER DAY AND KILLED THREE OF THE WORSHIPPERS WHO WERE IN THE MOSQUE.

UNOFFICIAL REPORTS SAID THAT SEVERAL GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS IN KUALA LUMPUR ALSO WERE DAMAGED IN THE RAID.

ON CHRISTMAS DAY, SINGAPORE'S ONLY ATTENTION FROM THE ENEMY CAME IN THE FORM OF LEAFLETS DROPPED FROM AIRPLANES URGING ASIATICS TO "BURN ALL WHITE DEVILS IN THE SACRED WHITE FLAME OF VICTORY."

LONDON - ADD DAY OF PRAYER

DEC 28 1941

THE BISHOP'S STATEMENT READ:

"THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES HAS CALLED HIS PEOPLE TO OBSERVE THE FIRST DAY OF THE NEW YEAR AS A DAY OF PRAYER FOR THE BLESSING AND GUIDANCE OF ALMIGHTY GOD AS THEY ENTER THE ORDEAL OF WAR.

"I FEEL SURE THERE WILL BE A GENERAL DESIRE ON THE PART OF THE CITIZENS OF THIS COUNTRY TO ASSOCIATE THEMSELVES ON THAT DAY IN THEIR PRIVATE AND, WHEREVER THIS MAY BE POSSIBLE, IN THEIR PUBLIC PRAYERS WITH THEIR BRETHREN IN THE UNITED STATES.

"I AM AUTHORIZED TO SAY THAT HIS MAJESTY THE KING HOPES IN THIS WAY THAT MANY OF HIS OWN PEOPLE WILL BE ABLE TO JOIN THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES IN PRAYER FOR THEM; FOR THEIR COUNTRY, AND FOR THE CAUSE IN WHICH THEY NOW ARE OUR ALLIES AND COMRADES."

Joe Marine Amazed At Way British Put On Boxing Bouts

DEC 29 1941

By DREW MIDDLETON

Reykjavik, Iceland, Dec. 27.—(Wide World)—Dear gang: Hey, fellas you ought to see the way the British box.

Us marines are putting on boxing shows every Sunday night in Reykjavik with the British. First we put on a three round bout and then they have one. They won't allow us to fight against the British, I dunno why.

Anyhow it like to kill me the first time I saw one of their bouts. First a sergeant stands in the ring and says in a voice like he was giving you K. P. "So and so of the something light infantry and so and so of the artillery."

The guys in the corners stand up. Then the sergeant wheels about face, clicks his heels and bows to an officer sitting on a little platform. That's the referee. Honest. He never comes in the ring.

He sits there all through the fight. When one guy gives the other the old thumb or its low he hollers at them and they quit and comes over to his side of the ring. He bawls 'em out in a low voice and then hollers "box on" like he was giving orders on parade ground.

But that ain't all, gang. They don't allow no cheering during the rounds. The British act pretty good too. But they sure let go between rounds. When the fight is over the referee raises one of two little flags. If it's red, the guy in the red corner wins and vice versy as they say in the field manual.

Some of the British are scrappers though. There's an old guy of 44 in there last Sunday night fighting a big military policeman. He was cute as a weasel and the M. P. never did get a good sock at him.

The old guy kept sticking his left in the M.P.'s face. Between the rounds the Limeys in the stands give the M.P. plenty of advice as to where he could go to get away from that left. The old guy got the duke and everybody yelled. Us, too.

Our bouts are pretty good. The boys don't box as much as the British, but they fight more, and they're generally dead bushed at the end of three rounds. Of course we can cheer anytime and we got the usual bunch of wise guys to liven things up.

We got a guy named Pudgy in my company we're trmming down to a light heavy to take some guy a company is blowing about. It's hard work cause most times he's hungry enough to eat the cook but the top keeps an eye on him.

The lootenant boxed for navy and he is teaching Pudgy how. I got six bits on Pudgy.

The bouts are real good fun. After it's over the other night the British general, a guy named Curtis, and General Bonesteel and General Marston climbed into the ring and gave out medals. We all yelled like hell when the old British guy got his.

Then they played the Star Spangled Banner and God Save the King and we all went home.

Give my best to Barney at the beer hall. Hey, there's about 60 guys here who know that gal in Diego I was telling you about.

So long,

Joe Marine.

Singapore, Still Intact, Is Allies' Hope in Pacific

DEC 29 1941

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Special News Service

Three weeks after that black Sunday when Japan struck there are few bright spots to lighten the gloom in the Pacific war theater, but those few are definitely heartening.

It is still a defensive fight against a ruthless aggressor. Yet the prime citadel of Allied hopes of soon reversing the odds in the China Sea, the Singapore base, remains secure.

And a gallant American-Filipino delaying action on Luzon is slowing the hydra-headed Japanese invasion of the Philippines.

These are negative rather than positive factors; but they are laden with future potentialities for the Anglo-American war plan now being completed in Washington. Every day gained in Luzon by Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur's hard-pressed troops is of inestimable value.

It grants British defenders of Singapore that much longer respite from meeting a concentrated Japanese attack on that vital pivot of Allied seapower in the Far East. It is more time gained for the rallying of British-American relief forces on a scale adequate for decisive action, whatever the strategic form it is taking.

Meantime, Japan is dotting all approaches to the China Sea with menacing outposts in an attempt to seal it against expected Anglo-American fleet incursions. Hongkong has been wrested from the British and footholds established on the northern tip of Luzon. Those form, with the great Japanese base on Formosa, a triple protective screen to block the 230-mile-wide northern gateway to the China Sea between Luzon and Formosa.

There seems small doubt that the main Japanese fleet strength is deployed in that area now, supplemented by Japanese Pacific island outposts in the north and now by captured Guam and Wake. That is the vulnerable Japanese flank.

If an Anglo-American counter-attack comes from the south, to reach the China Sea through the Sulu Sea, the Japanese fleet would have the shorter China Sea inside route to meet it.

Nor is that all. Japanese invasion of Davao to control the big gulf of that name on the extreme southern tip of Mindanao Island, most southerly of the Philippine group, affords a northern base to screen the Sulu Sea route. Japanese landings in North Borneo provide a southern portal. And the passage between Mindanao and Borneo is a bit narrower than that between Formosa and Luzon.

Air and submarine bases on the island of Palawan must also be on the Japanese war chart—to furnish a triangular protection for that Sulu Sea approach to the China Sea. From Palawan and Davao also, the interior passage from the Pacific north of Mindanao could be kept under scrutiny.

There is a longer and more southerly route to the China Sea from the Pacific through Netherlands Indies waters via the Java Sea. Already the Japanese have reached out to establish footholds in Sarawak on the northern rim of the great island of Borneo. That they contemplate seizing or already have seized like bases in Java or Sumatra is probable. They have gripped islands midway of the Borneo-Singapore 250-mile sea span to block that south gate to the China Sea.

There remains only the Strait of Malacca, between Malaya and Sumatra, to give entrance to the China Sea. This is the route for British approach to Singapore from the Mediterranean and Indian Ocean. And Japanese forces hammering at Singapore's defenses are now on the northern side of the mouth of that strait and in Thailand, close enough for air action.

That is a rough outline of the problem of Allied strategists in planning where to strike with best chances of successfully disrupting Japanese sea and air control of the China Sea. It is a grave one, without question, but it can be solved in time and with the far more favorable turn of the war for Britain and her Russian allies in the European and North African theaters.

The most vulnerable flank of the whole Japanese southward drive to master the China Sea and all of its mainland and insular framework is the span north of Luzon to the southern tip of Japan. That is not her only exposed flank, however.

A victory-elated Russia stands in Siberia within easy air striking distance of the industrial heart of Japan, traditional Russian foe. The German retreat has already freed Moscow of danger for months to come.

In North Africa the British are mopping up remnants of a shattered Axis Libyan army. They also will soon be free to turn eastward at the appointed time in Allied strategy unless the Axis master mind, Hitler, can find means to pin them where they are by new aggressions.

Last Axis-Controlled Airline In South America Is Cut Off

DEC 29 1941

By John Lear.

Associated Press Staff Writer

Adolf Hitler's influence in South America suffered a crushing blow with suspension of flights of the Italian air line, Lati, across the South Atlantic.

Lati was the last remaining transportation link between the Nazified lands of Europe and the southern New World nations Germany has been trying to acquire as agricultural colonies.

Lati carried Axis diplomats and secret agents from Berlin, Rome and even Tokyo, to all the Latin-American republics by way of Africa and Brazil.

Lati carried totalitarian propaganda of all sorts, ranging from personal letters to magazines and onionskin editions of German newspapers which went out from Rio de Janeiro as far north as Mexico and as far south as Patagonia.

Lati carried the vital war materials and military secrets from the shadow of the Panama Canal to the shadow of Hitler's beer cellar, first through its tie-ups with German-dominated air lines which at war's opening covered the continent, and later through the unwilling hands of Pan-American Airways before President Roosevelt's declaration of war cut that route.

Will Hinder Work

Without Lati, "fifth column" work in South America must flounder, headless, deprived of the timely significance it has had in the past in relation to Nazi schemes for world-wide operations.

Since shipping has been cut by the British blockade, the only means of contact with Nazi headquarters in Berlin is the secret short-wave radios hidden in various places between the Caribbean and the Straits of Magellan. And radio messages can be decoded.

It would be foolhardy, however, to dismiss the Axis air line menace as no longer important merely because the planes have been grounded. Influences created by the lines remain, and some of them could be crucial in event of an invasion attempt.

An influence about the Axis airlines which cannot be removed is the defense loophole created by the fact that Axis pilots mapped virtually all of South America while the planes were in their hands. Scadta, in Colombia, took pictures of the Panama Canal, the islands around it and the Caribbean and Pacific approaches to that vital waterway, not to mention the Magdalena River and the oil fields bordering it. Sedta, in Ecuador, mapped the Pacific coast and made survey flights to the Galapagos Islands south of the Canal. Lufthansa did the same in Peru, not only on the Pacific coast, but across the Andes on the upper waters of the Amazon River. Lloyd Aero Boliviana charted the mountains and waterways of Bolivia as well as the railroads leading into the mines on which the United States relies for strategic minerals. The coasts and rivers of Brazil, Argentina and Chile were covered in at least their most important reaches by Condor, which was alleged to have permitted use of its planes as "spotters" off the Atlantic coast in the famed death battle of the Graf Spee.

Axis Has Them Now

These maps and charts are not only in the hands of the Germans, but probably of their allies,

30.24 — 13801

Japan, to whom the Pacific islands and the western South American coast are of great importance in the Battle of the Orient.

Many of the men who made the maps and flew the planes are still in the countries where their ships were grounded by North American competition. They are focal points of possible disturbance and "fifth column" work.

The Axis airlines took chances with their crews and passengers which United States lines would not risk. They flew through storms under circumstances which in peacetime were foolhardy, but in wartime supply information.

Only one airline in South America remains today in Axis or pro-Axis hands, now that the Patagonia route in Argentina has been cleansed of Nazis. It is the Italian financed flying boat line which follows the small triangle of waterways from Buenos Aires to Montevideo to Asunction and back to Buenos Aires. It is not dangerous at present because of its size and is expected to die out for lack of fuel. But it could be built up if the United States did the unexpected and failed to hold friendly Latin feeling. The same is true of air France, which, although it has no planes, has a charter for experimental service in Argentina.

U. S. ENVOY HAS NOSE FOR NAZIS

Braden, New Ambassador to Cuba, Thorn in Side to Axis Agents While in South America

Editor's Note—John Lear met Spruille Braden, new United States Ambassador to Cuba, during a 13-month reporting tour of South America. In this story, Lear gives Wide World readers an intimate picture of the man now assigned to handle U. S. interests in this vital Caribbean island.

BY JOHN LEAR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 (Wide World).—Spruille Braden, the new United States Ambassador to Cuba, has a nose for Nazis.

His offices in Bogota during his ambassadorship to Colombia — the post he leaves to replace George Messersmith at Havana — had a more complete record of known or alleged Axis agents in that country than was to be found in any other embassy or legation in South America.

MADE FIRST "BLACKLIST"

There were more than 5000 cards in a special fifth column index file. Each card bore the name, address, ostensible occupation, undercover activities and favorite hang-outs of a man or woman known or believed to be associated in some direct or indirect manner with Germany.

Braden was not content with listing identified and suspected Nazis and pro-Nazis in Colombia. He did everything he could to weed them out.

He was the first to complete a "blacklist" of Axis businesses. At his insistence, United States firms employing Germans or pro-Germans as distribution agents were prodded into changing their representatives in Colombia months prior to the time when such changes were made a general practice on the continent. By the time the full blacklist was officially announced in Washington, most of the desired shifts already had been made, which was one reason why Colombia protested against the published list.

Foiled Wire Tappers

Braden also secured the co-operation of the Colombian government in removing Nazis and Nazi sympathizers from key jobs in the oil fields along the Magdalena River a year before the more spectacular crackdowns of Argentina, Bolivia, Chile and Uruguay on their "fifth columns."

He anticipated so many Axis moves that his home telephone wires were tapped as early as last Christmas. But he had advance information on that, too. He showed me, after lunch at his house one day, where the taps were placed. He said the tappers never learned anything. They only embarrassed his wife's friends, who couldn't understand why she failed to answer questions on the phone.

Probably Braden's success in fighting the unorthodox methods of the Axis is largely due to the fact that he is unorthodox.

When I first met him in Bogota he popped into the reception room with no introduction of any sort and said "Hello." I was talking to him for five minutes before I realized I was addressing the ambassador and not one of his secretaries.

DEC 29 1941

Patience Outstanding Virtue

He is tall and husky, with enough circumference at the waist to keep him from worrying about losing a few pounds. So he is just the man for a wear and tear assignment like a Nazi "nerve war."

No matter how late he was out the night before (he dances amazingly well for his weight, and plays a brilliant hand of bridge) he has always read his four newspapers before he arrives at the office between 10 and 11 a. m. Anyone sitting anywhere in his embassy can tell when he arrives. The place starts to hum like a battery of bees.

In Latin lands where patience is the supreme virtue, he is almost never nettled, or at least rarely shows it. He states his opinions frankly, and expects others to do the same. His men like him because they can disagree with him as heartily as their consciences require without fear of reckoning with a grudge later.

Built Friendship for U. S.

He eats, sleeps and lives the good neighbor policy, which he believes must be based on mutual respect. Latin-American respect for the United States, which many veteran United States residents in those lands thought had been in danger of forfeit in recent years, was given a sudden boost by a Braden idea—he suggested that generals of Latin-American armies be shown the defensive power of North America, and the generals went home convinced that Uncle Sam would be a strong ally.

The walls of Braden's office and reception room are virtually papered with photographs, portraits and sketches of famous Latin-Americans. Almost every one bears a friendly note of some sort. Together, they bear testimony to 20 years of life and work in the southern half of the western hemisphere.

Arbitrated Chaco War

Politically, Braden began his career in 1920, as a member of the inter-American high commission, representing Chile. In 1933 he was a United States delegate to the Pan-American conference at Montevideo, and two years later to the conference at Buenos Aires. From 1934 to 1939, he headed the advisory council of the division of international conferences of the State Department.

His greatest achievement in hemisphere affairs up to the time of his Colombian ambassadorship was his work in arbitration of the Chaco war between Bolivia and Paraguay. He kept at that knotty problem four years, keeping explosive meetings from breaking apart until an accord was attained.

President Roosevelt appointed Braden as minister to Colombia when Colombia became a potential danger spot because of its proximity to the Panama Canal at war's opening in 1939. He was later promoted to ambassador. In that position, in addition to fighting the Nazis, he smoothed the way for the first working agreement under the Havana accords, providing co-operative arming of Latin danger spots. This concerned surveying of the Colombian islands of San Andres y Providencia.

Wife Can Get Off Diet Now

Braden is known for his businessman's approach. He learned to be a business man in a Latin atmosphere, having left the Montana home of his mining family to develop mining properties in the Andes. There he stayed, to swing bigger deals, including electrification of the Chilean railways.

His assignment to Cuba may involve any one of a number of developments. A supplementary trade treaty between Cuba and the United States is now on the fire. An agreement for United States purchase of Cuban sugar during the war emergency is under discussion.

Cuba is so close to the United States it is almost a part of the country. Its position is strategic in relation to the Panama Canal. It has been granted a lend-lease loan of undisclosed amount for undisclosed defense purposes.

One member of the Braden family (the ambassador has two sons, two daughters) who will be glad for the new job is petite, blonde Mrs. Braden. Because of Bogota's chill height, she had to live on a diet she disliked during her husband's stay in Colombia. In Cuba, eating once again will be fun.

Roosevelt, Navy Pledge Aid To Filipinos; Japs Reported Retreating At One Point

POSITIVE HELP TO COME, FLEET NOT IDLE, ISLAND WARRIORS ARE ASSURED

Joint Messages Make It Emphatic That Every Resource Of The United States Is Being Dedicated To 'Utter Defeat' Of Japanese

DEC 29 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 28—The Navy Department assured the Philippines tonight that it was charting a course which would result in positive assistance to the islands in their fight against Japan.

The navy's statement follows:

"The Navy Department tonight announced the Japanese Government is circulating rumors for the obvious purpose of persuading the United States to disclose the location and intentions of the American Pacific fleet. It is obvious that these rumors are intended for and directed at the Philippine Islands.

"The Philippines may rest assured that while the United States Navy will not be tricked into disclosing vital information, the fleet is not idle. The United States Navy is following an intensive and well-planned campaign against the Japanese forces which will result in positive assistance to the defense of the Philippine Islands."

Pledges Islanders 'Their Freedom Will Be Redeemed', 'Independence Established, Protected'

Fleet Following Intensive Plan

Campaign to Offer 'Positive Assistance'; Won't Be Tricked Into Disclosing Vital Information

Washington, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt sent to the embattled people of the Philippines tonight his "solemn pledge that their freedom will be redeemed and their independence established and protected."

And the Navy added its assurance that it was "following an intensive and well-planned campaign against the Japanese forces which will result in positive assistance to the defense of the Philippine Islands."

The President's pledge, backed, he said, by "the entire resources, in men and in material, of the United States," was given in a message broadcast to Manila which reflected his indignation at the destructive and deliberate two-days bombing of the undefended capital of the archipelago by Japanese warplanes in disregard of its status as an open city.

Mr. Roosevelt's ringing encouragement said that he counted "on every Philippine man, woman and child to do his duty" and concluded grimly: "We will do ours."

Admiration for Filipinos

At the same time he expressed "the profound admiration of every American" for the Filipinos' "gallant struggle against the Japanese aggressor."

Soon after the White House made the President's message public, the Navy Department issued its statement, saying that the Japanese government was "circulating rumors for the obvious purpose of persuading the United States to disclose the location and intentions of the American Pacific Fleet.

"The Philippines may rest assured," the statement continued, "that while the United States Navy will not be tricked into disclosing vital information, the fleet is not idle. The United States Navy is following an intensive and well-planned campaign against the Japanese forces which will result in positive assistance to the defense of the Philippine Islands."

Both the President's message and the Navy's statement were seen as efforts to counteract propaganda by which the Japanese apparently seek to frighten the Filipinos and convince them that the defense of the islands is hopeless.

Text of Message.

The People of the Philippines:

News of your gallant struggle against the Japanese aggressor has elicited the profound admiration of every American. As President of the United States, I know that I speak for all our people on this solemn occasion.

The resources of the United States, of the British Empire, of the Netherlands East Indies and of the Chinese republic have been dedicated by their people to the utter and complete defeat of the Japanese war lords. In this great struggle of the Pacific the loyal Americans of the Philippine Islands are called upon to play a crucial role.

They have played, and they are playing tonight, their part with the greatest gallantry.

As President I wish to express to them my feeling of sincere admiration for the fight they are now making.

The people of the United States will never forget what the people of the Philippine Islands are doing this day and will do in the days to come. I give to the people of the Philippines my solemn pledge that their freedom will be redeemed and their independence established and protected. The entire resources of the United States stand behind that pledge.

Calling on Islanders.

It is not for me or for the people of this country to tell you where your duty lies. We are engaged in a great and common cause. I count on every Philippine man, woman and child to do his duty. We will do ours.

The White House said that the President's message was broadcast by short wave to Manila where it was rebroadcast and given to the press. Mr. Roosevelt did not broadcast in person.

The President earlier had called in the Army and Navy High Command for a conference which lasted an hour and a half.

'Hush-Hush' Meeting.

There was nothing, however, to indicate whether the Sabbath afternoon consultation was anything beyond routine. The President ordinarily sees the same officials several times weekly.

Secretary Knox, asked as he left the White House whether there was anything he could say about the meeting, replied:

"It was very hush-hush."

A meeting of the British-American War Council, composed of military, naval and air chiefs of the two nations, presumably was held during the forenoon.

The War Council, it was indicated, met elsewhere than the executive mansion.

Speculation on 'Chat.'

No Britons were present, Knox said, at the conference between the President and the Army and Navy chieftains.

Others attending, in addition to the Navy Secretary, were Secretary of War Stimson; General George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff; Lieutenant General H. H. Arnold, deputy chief of staff for air; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the Fleet, and Rear Admiral Richmond K. Turner, director of war plans for the Navy.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement last night that he would give a detailed accounting of the conferences, as soon as possible, stirred speculation, meantime, over whether he planned another fireside chat in the near future.

Japs Increasing Pressure On Manila from Southeast

MANILA, Dec. 28 (AP).—Japanese pressure against the defenders of the Philippines is increasing from the southeast, General MacArthur's Headquarters announced today.

A communique issued in mid-afternoon by the headquarters of the U. S. Army forces of the Far East said:

"Enemy pressure is increasing from the southeast. Our troops are resisting vallantly.

"There is little change in the north.

"Our anti-aircraft shot down at least three enemy bombers yesterday. Our bombers hit enemy transports at Davao Christmas night successfully. One transport is known to have been sunk."

NORTH LUZON BATTLE CALLED 'WELL IN HAND'

American Officer Returns To Manila With Word From Front

DEC 29 1941

City Blasted From Air Again, But Without Loss Of Life

BY CLARK LEE

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Dec. 28—An American officer arriving from the northern Luzon front reported tonight the Japanese appeared to be falling back at one point and the situation in general was "very well in hand."

This officer told the Manila Bulletin that Filipino troops were "fighting marvelously" and that "morale and spirit are the highest."

It was in one sector of the Lingayen front that the Japanese appeared to be losing ground before the native defenders.

Anti-aircraft guns are functioning efficiently on the northern front and knocked down a total of nine Japaneshe planes yesterday, he said.

Raiders Succeed Both

Meanwhile, massed Japanese raiders spread fire and ruin in undefended Manila for the second successive day, and the Philippines' outnumbered defenders battled against increasing pressure from the invaders in southeastern Luzon.

For two hours and four minutes the unchallenged Japanese planes flew low and deliberately, across Manila from 11.24 A. M. until 1.28 P. M., unloading scores of bombs, while the city shuddered anew at the tremendous explosions and columns of smoke rose.

First Check Shows None Killed

At least five formations of nine planes each, their rising hun emblems clearly visible, pounded the city, but despite the ferocity of the assault a preliminary check showed none killed among the population and only three injured.

On the fighting fronts, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported the island defenders were valiantly resisting mounting Japanese pressure in the Atimonan sector, seventy-five miles southeast of Manila, while to the north it said there was little change in the situation. Three Japanese bombers were destroyed by anti-aircraft batteries yesterday.

Bombers Sink Japanese Transport

At Japanese-occupied Davao, on the island of Mindanao, army headquarters announced, American bombers sank at least one enemy transport and scored hits on others Christmas night.

Today's raiders over Manila soared in straight lines of three. As darkness settled, the glow of fires still raging was reflected in the sky. One of the fires appeared to be in the vicinity of Fort Santiago.

There were four major fires but as the night wore on all died down.

College Buildings Burn

Within the walled city the Japanese bombs fired the buildings of Deletran College, added new damage to the already badly damaged Santa Rosa and Santa Catalina schools and fired an entire block.

DEC 29 1941

Bombs set afire the big Elizalde rope warehouse on the Pasig river, just back of the Escolta, Manila's leading business thoroughfare. J. M. Elizalde, resident commissioner in Washington, is one of the principal owners.

Among the dead in yesterday's heavy assault was William Barker, 19, son of Capt. William Barker, head of the San Ferando fire station, which was destroyed. The captain and his daughter, Elsie, were injured.

Blackout Ordered Off

Tonight Manila was a blaze of light for the first time in nearly three weeks as the result of the removal of blackout restrictions so that the city might fully conform with its declared status of an open, or undefended, civilian center.

The Tokyo radio, broadcasting in the Filipino Tagalog language, advised residents of the city tonight to leave Manila and go to the inland towns of Antipolo and Montalban because Japan does not recognize the capital as an open city and will continue the aerial attacks. The towns are in Rizal province, in which Manila is located.

Without a shot to interfere with their aim, the Japanese bombardiers dropped explosives four times on the old walled area in the heart of the business section, before turning their attention to the port area where in the opinion of observers were located the only possible military objectives.

Treasury Struck Again

The Treasury building was hit, adding to the wreckage created by yesterday's bombing of that structure, as were old Fort Santiago, headquarters of the Philippine Department of United States Army Engineers on an island of the Pasig river; the buildings of Deletran College adjoining Santa Domingo Church, which was destroyed yesterday, and the plant of the Manila Herald, the city's only afternoon newspaper. All these buildings were set on fire.

[A broadcast by Bert Silen, of NBC, said the property damage was even heavier than on Saturday.]

One Pier Badly Damaged

Although the Japanese bombed at will, many of their missiles went astray in the Pasig river when they attempted to hit boats tied up there.

An inspection of burned areas in the port district showed that one pier had been badly damaged and three others slightly damaged yesterday.

Fires from a freighter in the bay and from the old Spanish city had blazed throughout the night.

Tokyo radio broadcasts announcing that Japan was refusing to recognize Manila as an open city because this status had only been accorded "arbitrarily" by United States authorities were greeted with defiance by Filipinos.

Accused By MacArthur

"Until Manila was declared an open city it was noticeable that the Japanese did not attempt to attack civilian installations from the air," said tonight's communique from General MacArthur's headquarters.

"But as soon as the army was withdrawn, including anti-aircraft protection, they immediately raided, hitting all types of civilian premises, including bridges, convents, churches, business houses and residences.

"Manila will no longer be blacked out. Tonight and all nights in the future Manila will be lighted."

Back General's Decision

It was clear that the Filipinos were in agreement with the decision of General MacArthur to declare the city undefended.

Earlier Japanese broadcasts had demanded that Filipinos "cease all resistance" as a condition for Japan's recognition of Manila as an open city.

Reinforcements were reported to have been sent to the land fronts both north and south, but their strength was not disclosed, and there was nothing announced as to the exact position of the contending forces.

[A German broadcast of a Tokyo dispatch declared the Japanese made two new landings on the west coast within forty-four miles of Manila.]

Report Desultory Fighting

It was reported early today that the fighting in the north below Lingayen was desultory. One newspaper dispatch put the Japanese at Paniqui and Moncada, some eighty miles north of Manila in the broad Pampagna corridor.

Gov. Santiago Estrada, who arrived from Pangasinan province, told of fierce fighting, however, when the Japanese attempted to advance eastward toward the summer capital of Baguio. The small town of Tayug, thirty-five miles east of Lingayen, has changed hands several times, he said.

To the south, an advance Japanese guard was reported to have reached Luisiana, about forty-six miles southeast of Manila, in an advance from Mauban on Lamon Bay, and others were said to have reached Sariaya, about sixty-six miles southeast of the capital, in an advance from Atimonan on Lamon Bay.

Mountains, tortuous roads and Laguna Lake still separated them from Manila.

"We Can Take It," Sayre Asserts

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (AP)—High Commissioner Francis B. Sayre of the Philippines declared in a statement to the island population today that "anyone who has been in Manila since the outbreak of the war must feel convinced that we can take it as well as the people of London, of Moscow, or of Chungking."

DEC 29 1941

"Help is surely coming—help of sufficient adequacy and power that the invader will be driven from our midst and he will be rendered powerless ever to threaten us again," Sayre said in the statement, broadcast from Manila by NBC.

"This is a time when the courage of all the people of these islands, whatever their nationality, is being put to the test. We are being afforded a rare opportunity to show the stuff of which we are made."

Manila Citizens Balk At Turning On Lights, Fearing Further Raids

Manila, Dec. 28 (AP)—Police cars picked their way through bomb-scarred streets tonight with loud-speakers blaring:

"Turn on your lights, the blackout is ended!"

But after twenty lightless nights and two days of wanton destruction spilled upon the undefended city by the Japanese, Manilans were reluctant to heed the order.

Here and there a light appeared in residential sections, but most homes remained dark as if the occupants felt the darkness would keep the raiders away.

"We do not trust the Japanese. They bomb Manila although it is an open city and they might come tonight," was the frequent comment.

With the blackout ended in conformity with Gen. Douglas MacArthur's declaration of Manila as an open city, the radio station resumed long-wave broadcasting.

Famed Statue Survives Raid

Manila, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Philippines' most-famed Catholic statue, Our Lady of the Rosary, survived the Japanese raid which sent the equally famous old Spanish Santo Domingo Church to flaming destruction.

The venerated image of the Virgin Mary was saved by priests and church servants who braved the flames and entered the church shortly after bombs had wrecked the bell tower and roof.

The statue, with its elaborate jeweled clock, was found unmarred and carried to a nearby, undamaged convent.

Filipino Mayor Climbs Atop A Japanese Tank For Heroic Last Stand

Manila, Dec. 28 (AP)—The heroic last stand of Mayor Nicomedes Suller of San Manuel, Pangasinan province, who climbed aboard a Japanese tank and emptied his revolver through a porthole before he was riddled with bullets, was told today by Gov. Santiago Estrada.

DEC 29 1941

Three days ago a heavily armed Japanese patrol, supported by tanks, reached San Manuel in the Japanese push from the Lingayen coast north of Manila.

Civilians began firing and Suller managed to climb aboard one tank. He fired all the shots in his revolver through the porthole before the Japanese struck him down, the Governor said.

Capital Held Nerve Center Of Military Resistance In Philippines

Tokyo Claims New Advances In Island And Malaya

Tokyo, Dec. 28 (Official Broadcasts Recorded by AP)—Japanese forces in the Philippines refuse to be bound by the United States declaration of Manila as an open city, a War Office spokesman said today.

The Japanese will not consider their action at all limited by such "arbitrary and unilateral announcements" and will proceed to carry out their war objectives, the spokesman declared.

He said Manila had served as a nerve center of military resistance, even yet was surrounded at close quarters by military establishments. He asserted that the United States declaration was misleading and that Japan had received no official notification on it.

Japs Drop Pamphlets

Japan nevertheless has dropped pamphlets over Manila urging the population to leave the city for two designated refugee centers, Antipolo and Montalban, and is restricting her attacks to military installations and the harbor, he declared. It was strongly denied that the Japanese air force had attacked schools, hospitals and churches.

Meanwhile, Japanese forces were declared to be continuing their advance both in British Malaya and the Philippines.

DEC 29 1941

[A German broadcast of a Tokyo dispatch said the Japanese on Saturday made two more landings on Luzon Island, this time on the west coast within forty-four miles of Manila. Previous reports from Manila of a Japanese landing at Nasugbu, just to the south of the entrance to Manila Bay, proved to be erroneous. Nasugbu is in the locality described by the German broadcast. The German radio also said the Japanese had occupied Alabat Island in Lamon Bay on Luzon's southeast coast.]

Third Of Malay Claimed

A Nichi Nichi dispatch declared approximately one third of the Malay peninsula is in Japanese hands and that the British so far have lost twelve infantry battalions, two mountain artillery battalions and three companies of engineers. Fifteen thousand Indian troops deserted to the Japanese side, Nichi Nichi declared.

Domei news agency said the Japanese had the northern state of Perak virtually in their hands and were pressing against the frontier of Selangor state to the south.

At Hongkong Japanese held a formal triumphal review in the former British crown colony at 2 P. M., three days after its surrender.

Troops Reviewed

Vice-Admiral Masaichi Niimi and Lieut. Gen. Ryu Sakai, who commanded the navy and army forces in the campaign against Hongkong, reviewed their troops at Kowloon, on the mainland, then crossed to the scene of the first Japanese landing on Hongkong Island on December 18.

Arriving in Victoria on horseback, the two commanders inspected army units which lined two and a half miles of Queens Road, while army and navy planes roared overhead.

The two commanders then addressed an assembly of detachment commanders in the governor-general's residence.

More than 6,000 British prisoners have been counted up to December 27, it was announced.

Japs Set Up Prisoners' Bureau

Tokyo, Dec. 28 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.)—A bureau to be entrusted with supervision and treatment of war prisoners and with informing nations as well as families involved in the captures will be set up by the Japanese Government tomorrow under the direct jurisdiction of Premier General Hideki Tojo in his capacity as War Minister.

JAPS GIRD FOR FIRE RAIDS

Large-Scale Drills Planned For Whole Nation

Tokyo, Dec. 28 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Domei said today that large-scale air-raid drills would be conducted soon throughout Japan, with particular emphasis upon protection of communication lines and the problem of controlling and extinguishing fires.

The drills will be made as realistic as possible, but will be conducted without the use of [illegible] bombs, which will be reserved for use in event of a real raid, the news agency declared.

Japanese Time Table

Tokio, Dec. 28 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A.P.).—Domei declared tonight that Japanese forces are concentrating their main effort in the Philippines in an attempt to capture Manila "before New Year's." (The Japanese New Year holiday extends to January 10.)

Japs Shoot Works For Quick Win

But Timetable May Collapse and Experts Believe She Cannot Survive Long War

BY GLENN BABB.

New York, Dec. 29.—(Wide World)—Japan, choosing her own time, launched her war on the United States and Britain at the moment she had brought most of the factors that favor her to their highest degrees of effectiveness.

Just now she is enjoying to the full the advantages these factors give her. But she is operating on a time schedule that will not permit of many delays or deviations. Occidental economists agree that unless they have misread all the data available Japan must win quickly or suffer defeat and economic collapse.

To an overwhelming, appalling degree Japan is shooting the works on her lightning war in the Pacific. Economically she was 100 per cent mobilized when she struck at Pearl Harbor. Just about all she had was ready. But the fact remains it was about all she had. Unless she has won a new empire long before that is gone, shep robably will find her- is gone, she probably will find her-

Elements of Strength.

Japan's elements of strength are these: Complete preparation, the result of at least five years of unstinting, unflagging effort on the part of a regimented people; an army tempered by more than four years of actual campaigning and a navy and air force secretly armed on a scale unsuspected by her enemies, all fully mobilized; all the best of the geographical situation, shorter lines of communication and an interior position in the vast battlefield of the Western Pacific; some measure of guidance from her ally, Germany, up to this point the most advanced military power in the world; a united people and leadership; a morale which combines a fatalistic readiness to win or die, bitter racial hatred of the enemy, desperation, and a dream of world dominion.

But she has far less of all the material resources needed for war than the United States, one of the powers she had challenged. She has far less industrial capacity. She must go abroad for nearly all her oil, most of the metals vital to modern war, iron, copper, tin, nickel, aluminum, tungsten and others, and for her rubber.

She has spent five years and a sizable portion of her national income in accumulating vast stores of these materials.

Oil is the crux of her problem. Hugh Dalton, Britain's minister of economic warfare and probably the best authority on this point, estimated that she jumped into the World War with enough oil to fight it all out for 14 months. It seems a fair assumption that that is indicative of her reserves in other essentials.

Much, of course, can be done in 14 months. But actually Japan has no such term at her disposal. She must win a new, rich empire before her present supplies are gone. That means the oil, rubber, tin and iron producing lands of British Malaya and the Dutch East Indies.

But she must also count on the readiness of her foes to apply the "scorched earth" policy.

Thus her time table calls for a desperately close connection with destiny. If her schedule is thrown out of kilter by a handful of United Sates Marines at Wake Island or similar American-British feats in the Philippines or Malaya and the danger of missing that connection is all the greater. The weeks count.

Japan piled up her war stores in the greatest possible secrecy and the governments of her foes can only estimate their extent. But the experts agree that the vital fact is these stores can be replacel only by conquest of new territories.

Japan entered this war with her economic resources extended to the utmost. By the standards of the old orthodox economics she has long been on the brink of bankruptcy. But these standards no longer apply when a nation is mobilized in the totalitarian way.

Whole People Harnessed.

At the present stage of Japan's economy money is perhaps less important than it would seem. The debts are nearly all owed her own people, her credit or the purchasing power of her money abroad do not figure any more. The whole people is harnessed to the war effort and know they must depend entirely on their own resources, barring a providential total German victory. There is no turning back to the old home, to the relative comfort and security the Japanese had before they decided to gamble it all on conquest.

Japan is facing a food shortage, too. Before she mobilized some 2,000,000 young men from her little rice farms and upland fields she was virtually self sustaining, at least in the staples of her diet. But the farms are feeling the shortage of manpower, the factories have drawn away almost as many as the army and navy. The navy's claims on man-power and the fuel shortage have cut deeply into the catch of the fishing fleets, which numbered nearly 1,000,000 men and women a few years ago.

Geography is all on Japan's side in this first phase but this may change steadily with the passing months. She has an Achilles heel in the nearness of Russian Vladivostok, only 700 miles from the crowded, flimsy industrial warrens of Tokyo, only 500 from the grimy factory communities of the Osaka region and northern Kyushu.

Gen. MacArthur is Probably The Coolest Man in Manila

By R. P. CRONIN

MANILA. (The Jersey Journal Special News Service.)—Douglas MacArthur, son of a general and a four-star general in his own right, is probably the coolest man in Manila these days as he directs the defenses of the Philippines.

Even when the thud of Japanese bombs and the bark of anti-aircraft fire penetrate to the heart of his headquarters, the general spurns air raid shelters and continues to study the war maps which cover the walls and desks of his spacious office.

When an aide suggested the American flag on the headquarters might serve as a guide to enemy air men, MacArthur said the now historic words:

"Take every other normal precaution for protection of the headquarters, but let's keep the flag flying."

And as he studies war plans, MacArthur paces back and forth—a MacArthur trait that some might call nerves but I name it habit, having known the general over a period of years.

When he devised Philippine defense plans six years ago, he told me he wasn't saying the Philippines could be defended successfully against invasion by a major power, but that he could make the conquest of the islands so costly in money and ships that any major power would hesitate to attempt large-scale invasion.

The other day he passed me in his automobile near army headquarters. He gave me a broad smile as I saluted with a two-finger V, and he came back snappily with both hands displaying a double-V.

Today, at 62, Gen. MacArthur appears much younger. He has changed little physically since the days of World War I and his tour of duty as chief of staff.

The general always has been proud of the MacArthur family military record. Time and again he has reminded me that he is a professional soldier.

But this man from Wisconsin is far more than that. To those who know him personally, he is a family man who adores his wife and makes a hobby of his young son, Arthur, 3½ years old and named after his grandfather.

Like a true army wife, Mrs. MacArthur, the former Jean Faircloth, of Mufreesboro, Tenn., has declined to move to safer hinterlands. She remains at home with her son, and the general spends his few free hours with them.

Portrait Of U.S. Pilot, War Hero

By Russell Brines

Associated Press War Correspondent

Manila, Dec. 28.—Thumbnail portrait of one of America's leading fighting pilots:

Long hours of practice in acrobatic flying bore fruit recently when Lieut. Boyd (Buzz) Wagner, of Johnstown, Pa., found himself over the airfield established at Vigan by the invading Japanese.

With Lieut. Russell M. Church as "wingman," Wagner had gone out on a reconnaissance mission. Fliers often hunt in pairs. They give each other protection. A wingman flies just off the wing of his leader.

Suddenly Church's ship was struck by antiaircraft fire. Evidently he knew the end had come.

Forcing his burning plane into a half-mile dive, he released his bombs. He made no effort to bail out. His plane crashed.

Wagner already had made one bombing dive over two dozen Japanese planes, parked on the field. He saw that Church had been hit

Guns Sweep Enemy

Disregarding the fact that his chances of emerging alive from solo attack were slim, Wagner came back, his guns swept the parked enemy ships with bullets. Five times he flew over his target.

During one of his zooms an enemy plane took off. Wagner couldn't see it. His own wing obscured his view of that part of the field. To get a better look at the airport, he rolled his ship over on its back. That was where his long hours of acrobatic practice in the air came in.

Then he saw the Japanese plane. He righted his ship. He throttled back, letting his enemy gain a little headway. When he finally opened fire, his guns tore a wing off the enemy ship.

It was typical of Wagner, who is expected to receive the Distinguished Service Order for his exploits in the battle of the Philippines, to prepare for air combat the hard way—by meeting every emergency he could think of in mock combat ahead of the outbreak of war.

Shoots Way Out

In the last few days he has shot his way out of an attack of five enemy planes. He has attacked as many planes lone-handed, shooting down two, and returned unscathed. In the attack on Vigan Church Wagner scored hit after hit on the Japanese planes and on the airport. At least ten were destroyed. A fuel depot was left in flames.

Wagner is not alone among the heroic air defenders of the Philippines. Others are fighting just as hard, just as bravely. But he personifies the spirit of the United States Army air forces.

He is an aeronautical engineer—and likes swing music. His quarters contains a stack of phonograph records. His first concern is for the men under his command. His reports are filled with praise for them. Mention of his own fights is brief.

Three years of engineering at the University of Pittsburgh took him to Randolph Field, Tex. He was graduated with a second lieutenant's commission from adjacent Kelly Field in 1938. He had spent a year in the Philippines when the war began.

Standing before his superiors after the Vigan affair, he was like an embarrassed schoolboy. He is only 25.

"Well," he reported haltingly, "maybe I got a few of 'em because I sort of bombed and machine-gunned for quite a while. I don't think I could miss all the time."

Jap Propaganda Says San Francisco Afire

San Francisco, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Short wave listeners in Manila today were informed that San Francisco had been attacked by Japanese bombers which left the city in flames.

DEC 29 1941

This announcement came from the public relations office of the 12th Naval District. The statement said in part:

"Manila listeners to a short wave broadcast from San Francisco early this morning were amazed to hear that the city by the Golden Gate had sustained a bombing attack by 'a fleet of Japanese planes' and that 'many buildings were in flames.'

"This was the first evidence of an apparent new propaganda technique by the Japanese, an effort to create panic by means of the direct lie. Actually, San Francisco spent a quiet night."

Chinese Rout Japanese Driving Upon Changsha

Three Tokio Columns Aimed at Capital of Hunan

CHUNGKING, Dec. 28 (AP).—The Chinese reported today that their forces had counter-attacked Japanese driving upon Changsha, capital of Hunan Province, and hurled the invaders back ten miles at one point between the Sinsiang and Milo Rivers.

The Japanese column which had reached within fifty miles of Changsha before being turned back, was one of three spearheads aimed at the city by the Japanese. The other two, considerably farther from the provincial capital, were reported to be making little progress.

CHUNGKING, Dec. 27 (Delayed) (AP)—The Chinese government announced today that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek would assume temporarily the duties of foreign minister pending the arrival from Washington of T. V. Soong, who was named to the post last week.

It will be the first time that Chiang has taken the helm at the foreign office.

BRITISH FEELING MORE OPTIMISM ABOUT MALAYA

Japanese Beaten Back, Singapore Assured It Will Get Men, Supplies

By C. Yates McDaniel

SINGAPORE, Dec. 28 (AP)—Optimism overshadowed anxiety for the first time today as British Malaya began it fourth week of war in the Pacific with the announcement that imperial troops had beaten back the Japanese, inflicting heavy losses, in the Chemor area of Perak state.

Drive Loses Impetus

Most hopeful developments to the British were assurances from Washington and London that Malaya's pressing need for men and armaments would be met and the fact that during the past week the enemy's drive toward Singapore had lost its initial impetus.

For the past seven days the invaders have netted no major gains on land and have scored no striking sea or air successes.

Although the preparatory work of Sir Robert Brooke-Popham is generally appreciated in Malaya, Britons here were heartened also by the arrival of the more youthful Gen. Sir Henry R. Pownall to succeed him as commander-in-chief of Britain's far East forces.

The new commander's recent important fighting commands and experience as vice-chief of the imperial general staff, it was pointed out, should fit him for the great battle of Singapore in which three weeks of fighting in Northern Malaya have been mere preliminaries.

RAF on Offensive

Malaya's spirits were lifted further by the RAF's return to the offensive.

Following up a successful raid earlier in the week, British bombers last night again blasted the Patani airdrome in Northwest Malaya where at least 10 enemy planes were said officially to have been destroyed on the ground, others damaged and many fires started.

After a week of comparative quiet on the land fronts, British advance units, backed up by artillery, beat off the Japanese at Chemor, a railroad point about 12 miles north of Ipoh, the most vital tin mining and communications center in Perak state, about 290 airline miles north of Singapore.

The British yesterday also beat off Japanese patrols at a strategic ferry crossing over the Perak River, which parallels the British positions along the Malayan north-south railroad, about 15 miles southwest of Ipoh.

Japanese Ambushed

Applying "Indian warfare" methods learned in the early days of the invasion, an official announcement said, the British killed at least 60 Japanese in an ambush in Northern Perak.

After an enemy bicycle vanguard was allowed through a British position the defenders opened a lethal fire, annihilating the main force. The ambush, it said, was repeated when the Japanese attempted a flanking attack.

In desperation, it said, some Japanese shed their shoes and scrambled up trees to escape the withering British fire but were methodically picked off by snipers.

Enemy trucks smashed by British artillery Saturday on the Eastern Malaya coast about 180 miles north of Singapore were said to have been patrols which apparently filtered through from the Kota Bharu zone where the original enemy landing in Malaya was made Dec. 8.

Can Keep Up Pressure

British sources regarded the recent lull as unrelated to the Japanese occupation with the Philippines. They predicted that Japan would try to win a decision there first in the hope of isolating Singapore but said the Japanese had ample forces in Malaya to keep up their pressure on this front.

What has happened, they said, is that the momentum developed from the first, surprise attacks has been spent and the Japanese troops—believed to be veterans of the war in China—have lost steam after plunging in to drive southward as far and as fast as possible.

Official sources said Japanese air operations so far had been directed chiefly against British communications and indicated that activity against main centers in Southern Malaya were restricted more by a lack of suitable airfields than by a shortage of planes.

Despite the early reverses, military circles were confident that "the time for a sound crack at the enemy will come in Malaya as it has in Africa."

Surprises Not Expected

They saw little likelihood that the Japanese could spring any major new tactical surprises.

Three weeks of experience has taught the British how to counter infiltration tactics, they said, and they have learned that lightly-clad men walking through rubber plantations are likely to be Japanese, that anti-tank rifles can stop the enemy's light tanks and that withdrawal usually is unnecessary from threatened positions because Japanese vanguards are seldom strong.

CHURCHILL RAISES AUSTRALIAN HOPES

Sends Encouraging Reply To Curtin On Importance Of Pacific Front

Canberra's War Cabinet To Discuss Prime Minister's Answer Tomorrow

[By the Associated Press]

Canberra, Dec. 28—Prime Minister John Curtin's emphatic views concerning the paramount importance of the Pacific front in the war have received an encouraging reply from Winston Churchill, official sources said today.

It was disclosed that the War Cabinet would discuss the reply on Tuesday and the War Council would meet on the following day.

It was expected that the two groups will lay plans for a greatly expanded output of aircraft.

Defense Held Paramount

In a speech to a conference of representatives of employe and employer organizations and judges and officers of the Federal and state arbitration courts, Prime Minister Curtin today declared Australia's peacetime industrial practices "must be overridden by the stern duty of defending Australia from attack."

The conference resolved to "assist the Government to achieve and maintain continuous production at the highest possible level in all branches of industry for the duration of the war."

In a clarification of his views expressed in a newspaper article yesterday in which he declared Australia's main reliance is upon the United States, Curtin today said he looked for no weakening of the dominion's link with Great Britain.

Alliance Inevitable

At a press conference he said he regarded a military alliance between Australia and the United States as inevitable because of their geographical situation but that he did not look upon such a link as a political fusion.

He added that he conceived of Australian-United States relations as similar to the entente cordiale between France and Britain established in the reign of King Edward VII.

JAP 'CHUTISTS OPEN INVASION OF INDIES

Air-Borne Troops Land In Sumatra On Flank Of Singapore Defenses

Dutch Locked In Battle With Foe—Australian Bombers Hit Cruiser

DEC 29 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, N. E. I., Dec. 28—Japanese parachute troops have landed on the island of Sumatra on the flank of Britain's Singapore defenses in the first enemy attempt to establish a foothold on the Netherlands East Indies' soil, the Dutch reported tonight.

Parachutists drifted down about ten miles from Medan, the site of an air-attacked Dutch civil airport on the east coast of Sumatra, the Aneta news agency said. There were no immediate details of the strength or success of this air-borne invasion.

Battle Proceeding

Aneta said the battle against the parachutists still was proceeding.

This effort to win an initial foothold on the westernmost island of the Indies was one of a series of Japanese scatter-blows which ranged across the breadth of the archipelago eastward to New Guinea, but apparently cost the Japanese more than they were worth.

Peninsula Strafed

Several places on the peninsula were said to have been bombed and machine-gunned, but with no considerable damage.

One person was killed and uncounted others wounded, Aneta said, in a Sunday morning daylight raid on Sorong, on the north coast of New Guinea, where homes, shops and office buildings were demolished and many fires set.

Two other Japanese air assaults on outlying Dutch islands were reported in a brief communique.

Aircraft Attacked

In one, it said, a number of anchored naval aircraft were attacked and some damage was caused but "further particulars are not available."

In the other, also in an eastern region of the archipelago, it said a Dutch Royal Packet Navigation Company merchant vessel was attacked and machine-gunned by Japanese aircraft which killed one person and wounded three others but caused insignificant damage.

Heaviest of the Japanese air blows, apparently, was that at Medan, which evidently was intended as a diversion and cover to draw Dutch attention from the parachutists dropping in the vicinity.

A direct hit was scored on the office of the K. N. I. L. M.—the Royal Netherlands Indies Airline—and one plane was destroyed by fire as it was about to take off, Aneta said. In all, twenty persons were killed and forty were wounded at the field.

Meanwhile, the Netherlands East Indies Government warned the population not to run out to retrieve propaganda leaflets dropped from Japanese aircraft because of the danger of being machine-gunned.

The Japanese, it was explained, have been known to scatter leaflets to lure people from their shelters, only to spray them with lead from their fighter planes as was done in Penang.

Advantages Noted

Most of the island's east coast faces British Malaya across the Malacca strait, which is narrowest and filled with stepping-stone islands near Britain's great Far Eastern citadel.

The Medan area is directly opposite Penang, the Japanese-occupied island off the Malayan west coast, and a Japanese base there would serve the double-edged purpose, therefore, of providing flank protection for the southward drive into Malaya and a close flanking threat to Singapore itself.

Wake Island Epic Narrated

DEC 29 1941

By TOM YARBROUGH
Associated Press Correspondent

Honolulu, Dec. 28—A moving narrative of the heroic fourteen-day defense of Wake island, released today by the navy, told how the defending marines, with only four planes in action, shot down at least a dozen Japanese planes and knocked out of action five enemy warships—three destroyers, a cruiser and a submarine.

Not until December 22 in its final dispatch did the outnumbered and overwhelmed garrison of less than 400 Marines admit defeat. Even then it reported "the issue is in doubt."

The story of the heroic defense, as released by the navy, follows:

"This is part, and only a part, of the story of the Battleof Wake Island. Its compilation was taken from official dispatches sent while the battle raged, when time was precious and no words wasted. Therefore, it is devoid of any but the simplest facts.

"The battle began almost at the same time as the assault lunched against Pearl Harbor. The day and hour was different because Wake Island lies west of the International dateline. It was Sunday, the seventh, in Honolulu; Monday, the eighth, on Wake. The battle ended sometime after 5 P. M., December 22, Wake time.

"That was the hour of the dispatching of the last report from Wake's defenders to headquarters of the Fourteenth Naval District at Pearl Harbor. The report said that the enemy was on the island and that several ships and a transport were moving in. Shortly afterward the Wake radio fell silent, not to be heard again.

"Official reports indicate that probably no military force in American history, not even the defenders of the Alamo, ever fought against greater odds nor with greater effect in view of those odds.

"The reports show that during the fourteen days of Wake's siege not fewer than 200 Japanese planes bombed and machine-gunned the tiny isle's defenders. This figure does not include those in the final attack, whereof the number is unknown. But as many as fifty bombers, some four-motored seaplanes, attacked the island in a single raid. During the closing days of the siege they (the defenders) had only two and finally one plane. These were patched together between flights.

"Nevertheless, marine flyers, plus anti-aircraft batteries, managed to bring down at least twelve enemy planes. After the first surprise attack, the enemy acquired a healthy respect for this defense combination and gave up low-altitude strafing and bombing for high-level attack.

"Even so, until the garrison was overwhelmed by a landing force, the marines, flyers and anti-aircraft batteries continued to give a good account of themselves.

Marines Meet Attack

"The first attack on the eighth was made by between twenty and thirty twin-engined bombers, apparently of medium class. These were land planes and possibly from Japan's mandated islands south of Wake. They carried light bombs and were armed with incendiary cannon and machine guns.

"Four of the twelve marine planes based on the island were in the air when the enemy appeared in a low glide out o fa cloud bank. The other eight planes were being serviced. The enemy went for these at once. Seven were total losses from bomb hits and fire and only the remnants of the eighth salvagable. The landing field was damaged but remained useable.

"Also, enemy bombs failed to find marine stores and aviation gasoline. The gasoline supply of the Pan American Airways' base was ignited.

"Casualties in the first raid were heavy. Some twenty-five persons were killed and more than that number wounded.

20 In Next Raid

"Raid No. 2 followed the next day at almost the same hour. About twenty bombers attacked, these including incendiaries in their bomb loads. Raid No. 3 came before the day was over—this was the 9th of December at Wake Island. Due to vigorous plane and anti-aircraft defenses, damage was less severe than on December 8.

"The third day of the battle, December 10, brought the fourth air raid and the first surface attack. As dawn broke, enemy warships started pumping shells onto the flat, virtually shelterless atoll. There is practically not a natural cover against bombardment on Wake. Except for man-made construction, its surface is bare and inhospitable.

"As the enemy warships opened fire, their aircraft came over in waves. Nevertheless, Wake's guns replied with such good effect to this double attack that a light cruiser and destroyer were sunk. The defenders also had the satisfaction of chalking up a total of six enemy planes destroyed to and including this third day of the battle.

Shore Batteries Effective

"The effectiveness of the Wake shore batteries, demonstrated by the sinking of two warships, evidently impressed the enemy, for, although on that day two transports with escort cruisers and destroyers were sighted, they made no effort to land troops. They held off beyond the range of shore batteries. The purpose of this delay soon was evident.

Eighteen planes, making the fifth raid of the battle, appeared from the southwest. As in this day's earlier action the enemy was badly worsted. Although his bombs did no damage beyond further pulverized beaches, two of his planes were shot town.

"Terse official dispatches made no mention of the garrison's feelings, but the results of the blows exchanged December 10 must have been encouraging. And after almost constant action for three days the marines still had three planes. They lost only one out of four with which they started the battle, eight having been destroyed on the ground out of the original force of twelve.

Enemy Seaplane Downed

"December 11 was another bright day in the defense of Wake. Toward dawn a four-engined enemy seaplane attacked. Marine flyers were ready for it and promptly shot it down. Meanwhile, the convoy reappeared and defending flyers attacked this, severely damaging one of its vessels. A submarine, which was discovered, was attacked with bombs and sunk.

"The enemy did not appear at Wake December 12.

"In early morning of December 13, attacking by moonlight, large four-engined bombers came over the island. They were held off sufficiently by anti-aircraft fire to prevent damage, although bombs dropped.

"December 14 was not so heartening. Nearly fifty enemy medium bombers came over in a succession of waves, the heaviest onslaught of the battle. Anti-aircraft and planes brought down three and damaged several others. But of the marines' three planes, one was destroyed on the ground and another washed out landing in damaged condition although the pilot escaped.

Incendiaries Are Used

"The Japanese used incendiary bullets and bombs in this raid and caused heavy damage. By pattern bombing they were able to cover much of the island areas with such large numbers of planes. When the raid was over the marine defenders, had one plane left in service.

"How the marines were able to patch up another plane in the space of a few hours on the blacked-out island with wrecked facilities may never be known. But when daylight of the fifteenth came, the marines again had two planes.

"During the night the ninth raid was made, but no serious damage was done.

"On the sixteenth more than twenty-five bombers raided the island and again in the early evening of the seventeenth. By now practically every installation on the island was heavily damaged. The storehouse with spare parts and other material was gone, burned to the ground. The machine shop and blacksmith shop were wiped out. Frames of some of the buildings were standing, but the roofs and walls were badly damaged.

More And More Damage

"On December 18 a heavy force of bombers, apparently medium-class, two-engined craft which had carried out most of the raids, again attacked. They dropped heavy bombs which caused severe damage to buildings left standing.

"Next day there was no raid, but on the twentieth large numbers of dive bombers, apparently operating from a carrier, attacked.

"On the twenty-first the enemy withheld his hand, then came back on the twenty-second for the kill. Both land-based and carrier operated planes attacked in large force—how large was never reported.

"Among the carrier planes were modern fighters. Nevertheless, against these overwhelming odds, Wake's two planes went up to give battle. Several enemy planes were shot down but one of the Wake pilots was lost and the second forced down, wounded. Wake had no further air defenses and the enemy closed in rapidly from sea after that. The island was shelled heavily and continuously, a barrage being laid down behind which the enemy began a landing attempt.

To The Very End

"Early the morning of December 22 Wake reported in the next-to-its-final dispatch that the enemy was on the island. Then for the first time did the courageous garrison admit the battle was lost, and even then in as gallant a bit of understatement as a brave man ever wrote.

"'The issue is in doubt,' the dispatch related. That was the end. The last report said the enemy had gained a foothold and that more ships and a transport were moving in. Even in this final phase the Wake batteries blasted away with great effect.

"The last phrase of the last dispatch was the statement that two of the enemy destroyers had been disabled. In all, the Wake garrison shot down at least a dozen enemy planes and took a toll of at least five enemy warships—three destroyers, cruiser and a submarine."

14 Civilian Workers Killed On Wake Island

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—Senator McCarran (Dem., Nev.) said tonight that the navy listed fourteen fatalities among about 1,000 civilian construction workers on Wake Island.

One of those killed was Joe McDonald, Jr., of Reno, an engineer and the son of the editor of the Nevada State Journal.

McCurran said McDonald was the only Nevadan among those killed and that he did not make note of the names of the other thirteen when he inspected the casualty list at the Navy Department yesterday. Reporters seeking to obtain the names direct from the navy were told by officers that the list was "not available."

Army Grateful For Care Given To Its Women And Children

Honolulu, Dec. 28 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, commander of the Hawaiian Department, today thanked the civilian population of Honolulu for its "genuine and spontaneous kindness and helpfulness" in caring for women and children evacuated from army posts after the Japanese struck at this area December 7.

In an open letter, General Emmons told the citizens:

"The assistance gave relief, comfort and a feeling of security" to the evacuees, and "the whole morale of the army and of husbands and fathers at their posts of duty in the field was strengthened thereby."

'We Wish They'd Come Again,' Navy Flyer Says In Hawaii

Newsmen On Tour Shown Evidence That Aerial Line Of Defense Is Back In Commission

DEC 29

[By the Associated Press]

Honolulu, Dec. 28—Uncle Sam's naval aerial defense was ready and willing today for the Japanese to repeat their sneak visit to Hawaii.

"We wish they would come again," said the commander of a naval air station on Oahu Island.

This air station was the first objective of the Japanese squadrons which struck Hawaii three weeks ago today.

Bomb craters, machine-gun perforations, a burned hangar and hillside graves remained as reminders of the attack, but there was ample evidence that the line of defense was back in commission.

The commander said that twelve Japanese planes attacked the station at 7.45 o'clock the morning of December 7, while another formation swept over at 10,000 feet.

"The twelve that slammed us seemed to know exactly where they were going," the commander said. "They strafed planes, hangars and cars with machine-gun incendiary bullets. They did plenty of damage, but salvage work was started immediately and there was a good chance of saving the burning hangar.

"However, twenty-five minutes later, a second group of eighteen, some fighters and some bombers, swooped in and an almost direct bomb hit damaged our fire-fighting equipment. They dropped eighteen bombs. Practically all of our planes were disabled."

The commander said the Japanese planes that crashed carried parts made in the United States and were of "first-class construction."

He told how one Japanese pilot, brought down by rifle fire, wore a threadbare and extensively patched blue uniform and carried a chart of the Hawaiian Islands and nearby waters.

This pilot was given a military burial by the men whom he had been sent to kill.

many British casualties.

The pens exploded when the ends were removed and the cameras blew up when the cranks were turned.

By EDWARD KENNEDY

[Associated Press Correspondent]

Cairo, Dec. 28—Units of the RAF with the aid of Free French bombers have struck fresh blows at the Axis life line in Libya, British headquarters reported today, while tank-supported British troops maintained continuously increasing pressure on the main force of Nazi Gen. Erwin Rommel's African army.

British and French warplanes not only blasted Axis motor transport and fuel-tank trucks southwest of Agedabia, where Rommel's forces are engaged, but also were said to have ranged far to the west in raids on ships and supplies in the principal Libyan port of Tripoli and the harbor of Zuara, a railhead seventy miles further west and only thirty miles from the border of French Tunisia.

[London observers yesterday expressed a growing conviction that the Axis is rushing heavy reinforcements to Tripoli in spite of the constant toll of transports being taken by the British fleet in the Mediterranean. The London radio, heard in New York by CBS, quoted a Reuters correspondent with the Imperial Eighth Army as saying that "enemy bombers based on Crete and Greece now are attacking our lines and communications."]

Tripoli Attacked

The attacks on Tripoli and Zuara took place Friday night. At Tripoli, capital of Libya and only major supply port in Axis hands since the fall of Bengasi, the bombers have scored direct hits on ships in the harbor, started a large fire, and machine-gunned a transport steaming in the direction of Homs seventy miles to the east.

Two merchant ships were the principal targets at Zuara, the communique reported, and one of them exploded as the result of a direct hit. Supply dumps in the town also were bombed.

The RAF also gave an expanded account of a raid on Tripoli Wednesday night, in which bombs were said to have been dropped on Axis naval units northwest of the town, and "violent explosions" were set off on the Spanish quays.

Resistance Wiped Out

Meanwhile, Lieut. Gen. Neil M. Ritchie's Eighth Army, said the Middle East command, has wiped out virtually all resistance in the ninety-mile area from Bengasi south to Agedabia, where the main battle is in progress. Small pockets of Axis resistance in that area are being mopped up, the communique said.

A British source declared General Rommel's "considerable forces" were being assaulted constantly at Agedabia, but that it was not yet clear whether the Axis commander was making a definite stand or merely fighting a delaying action in the hope of obtaining reinforcements.

Axis Internal Trouble

Capture of court-martial records of the German air force during the advance in Cyrenaica have disclosed numerous cases of "regrettable clashes" between Nazi and Italian airmen.

Many of these were laid to the Germans drinking too much Italian wine. In the case of a German flyer who hit his superior officer, the court recommended a tighter rein on the sale of liquor in canteens.

The Italians, on the other hand, were blamed by the court-martial review for a number of traffic accidents in which German troops were involved. The Italians were guilty of "bad road discipline," it said, pointing out that the Nazis must make allowances for this and "cut down their speed accordingly."

British Tank Attack Repulsed, Rome Claims

Rome, Dec. 28 (Official Broadcast Recorded By AP)—The Italian high command asserted today that Axis forces south of the fallen Libyan port of Bengasi had repulsed a tank-supported British assault but acknowledged that some prisoners had fallen into the hands of the attackers.

The daily war bulletin mentioned artillery activity in the Salum and Bardia sectors and said German planes had repeatedly attacked airports in the British rear, damaging tanks and grounded aircraft and causing many fires.

Italian naval anti-aircraft batteries were credited with shooting down three British planes in the North African war theaters, and four more were said to have been destroyed while attacking Tripoli.

The British Mediterranean base of Malta was attacked again by German air raiders, which shot down three British planes and destroyed four more on the ground, the communique said.

Death For Food Hoarding

Bern, Dec. 28 (AP)—On official Italian news agency dispatch said today that the death penalty had been decreed in Libya for grave cases of food hoarding.

Bengasi Is Observed As Stark Ruin

DEC 29 1941

RAF Bombing Nearly Wrecked Port Before Capture, is Report; Harbor Ship Graveyard

BY PRESTON GROVER.

With the British Army in Bengasi, Dec. 25.—(Delayed.)—(AP.)—Triumphant British troops planted the Union Jack again over Bengasi this Christmas Day but if Santa Claus had been around he wouldn't have recognized the place.

In the 10 months since the Germans and Italians wrested the north African port from the British only to lose it again, the RAF has literally blown to pieces Mussolini's once proud symbol of empire.

On the sea front it looked like another Dunkerque, with the harbor this time filled with sunken Axis vessels instead of sunken British craft. Harbor buildings are wrecked. Many buildings deep in the city are as full of holes as a moth-eaten cutaway.

Desolate Spot.

This was the scene of utter desolation as I arrived yesterday afternoon. With a Scottish driver and a British newsreel cameraman, I broke away from a British motorized column approaching the city along the coast from the north and drove 40 miles through "enemy" territory.

We got here without sighting a solitary Italian soldier. Preceding us by two hours was a column of British armored cars which had blazed a bee-line 200 miles across the roadless desert.

They found Bengasi deserted save for a few thousand wide-eyed natives who for the most part cautiously remained indoors.

The most pleased were some 90 wounded British soldiers left in a hospital and a dozen or more, not wounded, who had been sheltered by friendly Arab residents, in some cases for several weeks, after being cut off from their own forces.

Barely had we arrived, however, when the German air force made a visit. Huge, slow-moving planes came in so close it was almost possible at times to hit them with rocks.

Catholic Church Saved.

Among the few undamaged buildings here are a Catholic church and a brewery, out of operation because of a lack of supplies. Catholic fathers continued occupancy of the church, whose bells tinkled pleasantly on this quiet, sunny Christmas morning.

The whole Christmas Eve scene was a weird spectacle. Palms and other trees were as green as in midsummer, swaying gently in the chill air. Expensively furnished hotels were stripped by the departing Italians. Curtains hung wet and limp from bombed houses.

Just as at Dunkerque, which I saw after the British withdrawal, Bengasi's harbor is full of ships in every stage of sinkage.

Two 10-000-tonners side by side were hit alongside the quay and settled a few feet to the bottom, leaving most of their hulls above water. Farther out were ships with only their superstructures showing while a few hundred yards from the quay in deeper water there were ships with only the tips of their masts showing.

Two vessels literally were cut in half by direct hits. The iron door of one squeaked eerily, opening and clanking shut with each succeeding wave.

German Plane Carries Bumper to Cut Cables

DEC 29 1941

LONDON, Dec. 28 (AP).—A German Heinkel bombing plane recently shot down in Great Britain was equipped with a sharp "bumper" designed to cut through barrage balloon cables, the British disclosed today. Long metal blades extended from the wing tips of the plane to a point about five feet in front of the cockpit and were held rigid by braces extending back to the leading edge of the wings.

The contraption made the plane look like a pointed arrow in flight, but it was evident that the weight of the cutter and its supports would decrease the plane's speed and bomb-carrying capacity.

Rumor Von Brauchitsch, Another General in Ireland After Hess-Like Flight Spiked

DEC 29 1941

Dublin, Ireland, Dec. 28—(AP.)—Informed sources declared tonight there was no truth to rumors current in Northern Ireland that two of Adolf Hitler's generals, one of them Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch, had landed in County Kerry from a forced-down German airplane.

(Belfast dispatches mentioned County Cork.)

Such a plane did come down Friday in County Kerry, near Waterville on Eire's southwest coast, but no important Nazi was among its four occupants, these sources said.

In fact, they asserted, none held a rank higher than sergeant, none was more than 28 years old and all were bona fide German airmen.

Plane Actually Down.

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Dec. 28.—(AP.) — Rumors were currernt tonight that two of Adolf Hitler's generals had landed Hess-like in County Cork, Eire, and one such unconfirmed report was that Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch was one of them.

Von Brauchitsch was removed from the command of the German Army by Hitler on December 19 and has been reported seen in Vienna in civilian clothes.

Of the whole story, this much was known to be true: That a German plane actually did make a forced landing Friday in County Kerry, near Waterville on the southwest coast of Eire, and that the occupants were interned.

This was a revision of a previous official Eire announcement which said the plane came down in County Cork.

That much had been announced yesterday in Dublin. But the official announcement was not amplified and informed sources at Dublin refused to comment.

Four In Plane.

It is understood, however, that there were, in all, four men in the plane, described in Belfast as of a reconnaissance type, and that all were unhurt although the plane was badly damaged.

The rumors at once recalled the prize mystery of the war, the parachute landing of Deputy Fuehrer Rudolf Hess from a crash-bound Messerschmitt in Scotland on last May 10.

Evidence of a rift between Hitler and Von Brauchitsch more deep-seated than the Fuehrer's mere dissatisfaction with German Army operations was indicated by their inability to get together on the story explaining Von Brauchitsch's ouster just one week ago.

Hitler said he fully recognized "the merits of the present supreme commander" but he had been induced by the magnitude of the war in Russia to "follow his intuitions" and take over the post.

Stories Differ.

The next day Von Brauchitsch issued an order of the day to his armies saying he had sought his own dismissal "on account of heart trouble."

Rumors current at the time of Von Brauchitsch's dismissal hinted also at the possibility of a breach between Hitler and other of his topflight commanders.

Field Marshal General Fedor von Bock, commander of German forces on the Moscow front, was mentioned among others in these unconfirmed reports as one who might have been relieved of his command.

London Also Denies.

London, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—A British source declared tonight that "absolutely nothing" was known here about a report that an important Nazi personage had landed by airplane in Ireland.

New York, Dec. 28 (AP) — The British radio quoted a Kuibyshev broadcast today as saying that from November 25 to December 25 the Germans lost 120,000 officers and men on the Moscow road alone. The period covers the Soviet counter-offensive.

EDEN AND STALIN CONFER IN MOSCOW, REACH FULL ACCORD ON WAR PROGRAM

Both See Need For 'Utter Defeat Of Hitlerite Germany'

Kremlin Parley Keeps In Touch With Churchill And Roosevelt

DEC 29 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Monday, Dec. 29—The Soviet Union and Great Britain announced today they had agreed on plans to prosecute the war and discussed post-war organization of Europe in a series of talks in the Kremlin between Premier Stalin and Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary.

A communique on the conferences was issued here simultaneously with an identical announcement in London.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Monday, Dec. 29—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Premier Joseph Stalin have been in conference in Moscow for the past two weeks and have reached an agreement in full on conduct of the war and especially on "the necessity for the utter defeat of Hitlerite Germany," the Foreign Office disclosed in a historic announcement at midnight.

Eden and Stalin were talking in the Kremlin, it was disclosed, even as Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt were conferring in the White House.

Statesmen Keep In Touch

The four statemen in their two conferences kept in constant touch with each other, producing in effect a great unity of policy directed at the final defeat of Hitlerism and looking toward reconstruction of the post-war world.

The Eden-Stalin talks, the Foreign Office said, "took place in a friendly atmosphere and showed an identity of views of both parties on all questions relating to the conduct of the war."

This identity of views covered especially the aim to defeat Hitlerite Germany "and adoption of measures to render completely impossible any repetition of German aggression in the future."

Views Exchanged

There also was "an exchange of views on questions relating to the post-war organization of peace and security" which "provided much important and useful material, which will facilitate future elaboration of concrete proposa's on this subject."

The announcement ended recent speculation over the whereabouts of Eden—speculation which frequently was made over the German radio stations, just as they had speculated on Churchill's whereabouts prior to the disclosure that he had arrived in Washington.

United Action Agreed On

The United States, Britain and Russia through the two conferences were understood to have agreed upon concerted action throughout the world on land, on the sea and in the air, and in addition were understood to have made equally important decisions on production, on a common pooling of war material, and on a common diplomatic policy.

Military representatives of China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek were understood to have been present at the Moscow conferences, as well as the British Ambassador to Turkey, Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Huggesen, and the Minister to Iran, Sir Reader Bullard.

The presence of the latter two was taken to indicate that the Middle East situation was involved in the talks, and that joint action in that area may have been one of the problems particularly stressed.

General Nye Takes Part

The vice-chief of the British imperial staff, Lieut. Gen. Archibald Nye, took part also, obviously in connection with the battlefront plans.

An official spokesman declined to comment on whether Eden was returning to Britain, and on a Tokyo report that he was en route to Chungking to confer with Chiang Kai-shek.

The Foreign Office announcement said:

"In the second half of December, 1941, there took place in Moscow between the President of the Council of People's Commissars, Joseph Stalin, and the People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs, V. M. Molotov, on the one hand, and British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Anthony Eden, on the other, an exhaustive exchange of views on questions relating to the conduct of the war and to post-war organization and peace and security in Europe.

Two Envoys Present

"The Soviet Ambassador in Great Britain, I. M. Maisky, and his Majesty's Ambassador in the USSR, Sir S. Cripps, were present at these conversations.

"Further, some of the meetings were attended by the British permanent Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Sir A. Cadogan, and by the vice-chief of the British imperial general staff, Lieut. Gen. Archibald Nye.

"The conversations, which took place in a friendly atmosphere, showed an identity of views of both parties on all questions relating to the conduct of the war, and especially with regard to the necessity for the utter defeat of Hitlerite Germany and adoption of measures to render completely impossible any repetition of German aggression in the future.

Importance Stressed

"An exchange of views on questions relating to the post-war organization of peace and security provided much important and useful material which will facilitate future elaboration of concrete proposals on this subject.

"Both parties are convinced that the Moscow conversations constitute a new important forward step toward closer collaboration between the USSR and Great Britain."

Arrangements for the Moscow conference were completed, informed sources said, and Eden already had left London before the Japanese attack on the United States.

It was observed that the vast extention of the war enormously increased the significance of the Foreign Minister's visit to the Kremlin.

All sources agreed that Washington and Moscow conferences would have a decisive effect on the war, likely to prove another step toward formation of a supreme Allied war council.

Nazi Division Of Boys Flees As Reds Attack

Counter-Offensive Gains North And South Of Moscow

DEC 29 1941

Germans Use Raw Men

Moscow, Dec. 28 (AP)—Raw German youths of 17 and 18 years, composing most of an entire German division, dropped their arms and fled at the first Russian assault in the Kalinin sector, 95 miles northwest of Moscow, Red Army dispatches reported today as the Russian counter-offensive continued to regain ground both north and south of the capital.

Panic was said to have spread and untrained reinforcements from the transport and clerical sections of the German Army were reported to have been rushed into the breach in a desperate effort to stem the rout.

(To the Germans, it has become "imperative that the present retreat must be stopped at all costs," the Moscow radio said in quoting an appeal by the Commander of the Nazi 23rd Division for a "revival of self-confidence" among his troops. The broadcast was repeated by the British radio and heard in New York by CBS.)

The Soviet Information Bureau said 332 towns and villages have been reoccupied in the area in the last 10 days.

The roads west and southwest of Kalinin on the frozen upper Volga were described in dispatches as littered with equipment abandoned by the young German soldiers.

A column of trucks in working order and with their tanks full of fuel, an artillery battery complete with shell-filled cases and 20 motorcycles were among the material hastily abandoned by the Germans, said Russian accounts.

The motorcycles were used by the Russians, they said, to chase the routed forces.

The official communique listed 103 tanks, 180 guns, 86 mine-throwers, six flamethrowers, 1,323 trucks, 348 motorcycles, eight planes and six radio stations among the war equipment seized during the 10-day period in the sector.

In the same time, 38 tanks, 120 guns and 400 trucks were listed among much other material said to have been destroyed by the Red forces.

South of Moscow, the Red Army widened its fan-like offensive across the Oka River between Kaluga and Orel, threatening the rear of these two major communication centers in the heart of European Russia. Kaluga is about 100 miles south of the capital and Orel about 200 miles.

The Russians pushed through Likhvin, 30 miles south of Kaluga and 50 miles west of Tula, and on through Belev, about 50 miles southeast of Kaluga.

Besides driving between Kaluga and Orel, the Russians also were pressing a frontal assault toward Orel by taking 24 settlements and the town of Novosil, 40 miles east of that rail center.

Eighty miles farther south, the Russians already had announced the occupation of Tim, 40 miles east of Kursk on the main Moscow-Kharkov Railway. They said today that they had inflicted heavy losses on German units there, including the Ninth Tank Division, 16th Motorized Division and 299th Infantry Division. The Germans lost more than 1,000 dead there on Dec. 26 alone, the Russians estimated.

In the same general southwest area more than 100 villages and towns are again in Russian hands, it was reported today.

In a decree, Premier Joseph Stalin named six new lieutenant generals and 24 major generals.

Finns Admit Soviet Attacks

Claim Lines Hold But Omit Details

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Russian attacks on all Finnish fronts were acknowledged in a war communique today but it said they were repulsed everywhere.

The war bulletin gave no specific details of place or strength of the Russian assaults but cited Red army initiative on the Karelian isthmus, along the Svir river on the northern and eastern fronts.

The strongest apparently was in the north where the communique said "an enemy battalion attempted to penetrate our lines at a certain point but the assault was repulsed."

It reported heavy artillery fire and lively patrol activity also on both sides of the main Finnish fronts.

MORE RUSSIANS ATTEND CHURCH, BISHOP ASSERTS

Prelate Declares Religious Freedom Will Continue After Victory

DEC 29 1941

By Eddy Gilmore

KUIBYSHEV, Dec. 28 (Wide World)—The bearded, bright-eyed, 62-years-old Archbishop of Samara sat in a room which featured a portrait of the Madonna and Child in one corner and a poster of a Red army soldier bayoneting a Nazi in the other.

Church With People

"The church," said the Archbishop of the Russian Orthodox Church, "always has been with the state or rather the people in crucial hours.

"Solemn services now are being said throughout Russia not only for our own warriors but for those of America and Britain, too, especially since we learned about the wanton Japanese attack."

I had submitted a set of questions to the archbishop two days earlier, and he had the answers written when I was granted an interview.

Question: "How much restraint is now placed upon worship in Russia?"

Answer: "One should draw a clear line of distinction between the Soviet government and those organizations which conduct antireligious propaganda, as for instance, the Union of Militant Godless. Our cause is to defend religion, theirs to defy, the majority of orthodox clergy does not oppose the Soviet authorities."

Q. "Do you think relations between the church and state will remain as they are now after victory? Will they be better or worse?"

Freedom Will Last

A. "Doubts of Russian Orthodox churchmen about the Soviets have vanished. I do not expect any changes in the existing attitude of the state after victory."

Q. "Has there been more or less worship and public church attendance since the beginning of the Russian-German war?"

A. "Since the church has been severed from the state, religion has become freer. As always happens, church attendance gains in times of national disaster and serious menace to the people."

Q. "How do you account for the change?"

A. "Now almost everyone has some relative at the front."

Q. "There are people who contend there is little or no difference between Hitler's and the Soviet's attitudes toward the church. Can you comment?"

A. "There is a tremendous difference between Hitler's and the Soviet's attitudes toward the church. Hitler has invented a god of his own."

Q. "What percentage of Russians now are churchgoers?"

No answer.

Q. "What percentage of the Red army are churchgoers?"

A. "Many believers are being called to arms. Some worship in civilian clothes, some in uniform, so maybe there are more Red army men who are believers than we know of ourselves."

Q. "What percentage of the youth are churchgoers?"

A. "About 5 per cent."

Concluding, the archbishop said: "God Almighty has assigned Russia to be the savior and bring the foe to reason for the benefit of the whole of Western Europe."

BRITISH TROOPS RAID NAZI POST ON NORSE COAST

Join Navy And RAF In Swift Thrust; Force Believed Commandos

Bombers Open New Attack After Blasting Foe's Factory Centers

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 28—A British army force—probably the Commandos—joined hands with the royal navy and the RAF yesterday in a successful lightning invasion thrust against a

30.24 — 13809

Nazi stronghold in German - occupied Norway, it was disclosed tonight.

Although there has not yet been any official statement as to where the raid was made, an Admiralty announcement that it was directed "mainly against shipping," coupled with an RAF communique of an attack last night on the Sola airdrome near Stavanger, was taken as an indication the landing was made at or near that important port.

"Biggest Feather Yet"

Military observers pointed out that such a raid, carried out under the noses of as strong a Nazi force as it known to be at Stavanger, would be the "biggest feather yet" in the cap of the Commandos—Britain's famous if mysterious hand-picked troops which already have carried out other forays against German-occupied territories—even if the operation was on a "small scale," as the Admiralty reported.

The only other information offered by the Admiralty, which promised further news "as soon as details are available," was that all ships taking part in the raid returned "fit for immediate service."

RAF Renews Raids

The RAF, which last night bombarded targets in industrial western Germany, in Holland and in France, apparently returned to the attack this afternoon. For observers in a south coast town watched strong formations of British bombers, with fighter plane escorts, roaring out over the Channel in the direction of the French coast.

The Air Ministry reported a "powerful force" of bombers raided Düsseldorf, one of the Ruhr valley's chief manufacturing cities, last night in a heavy bombing attack which left many fires.

[Berlin, in acknowledging the raid, claimed that ten more British bombers were shot down.]

Nazi Planes Blasted

At the Sösterberg airdrome in Holland the RAF planes loosed their bombs on the runways just as Nazi aircraft were landing, while still other forces attacked the naval base of Brest, where German battleships are taking shelter, and the harbor works at Boulogne.

The communique said the RAF lost seven bombers in these operations. A Nazi bomber, the Admiralty said, was shot down in an unsuccessful attack on a convoy.

Germans Admit Raid, Claim Destroyer Sunk

Berlin, Dec. 28—(Official Broadcast Recorded By AP)—British naval forces which made two surprise landings on the Norwegian coast were driven back to their ships in short, violent engagements yesterday and one of the destroyers of the fleeing warship formation was sunk, a German communique declared today.

A cruiser and another destroyer were damaged by planing German aircraft, and 10 bombers of the heavily air-supported British expedition were shot down in sharp dogfights and thick anti-aircraft fire, it said.

The German patrol boat Foehn was sent down under the crashing fire of the cruiser and several destroyers as they bore down on the isolated Norwegian coast, the communique continued, but not until after the patrol boat in a "heroic struggle" had shot down one of the swarm of attacking bombers.

Authoritative sources, elaborating on the High Command of the raid which they termed nothing more than "an adventurous episode," pointed out the character of the Norwegian coast offers opportunities for landing attempts, "particularly in the winter months with their continual darkness, when fog envelops the entire coast."

"The few German outposts and advance positions," they explained, "are open to surprise attacks. It is possible for the enemy to land there, but a brief counter-attack suffices to force the landing troops to withdraw to their ships unless they are risking complete annihilation. This also was the situation in this latest enemy attempt."

From the Russian Front, the High Command reported the destruction of three more small transports and the damaging of four others and a gunboat in the narrow straits of Kerch by strong dive bomber formations. The High Command announced yesterday that four transports were sunk and five damaged in that passage between the Crimea and the Caucasus.

Nazis In Norway Act To Avert Typhus Spread

Bern, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Stockholm correspondent of the Swiss newspaper Neue Zuercher tonight quoted the Swedish press as saying that the population of Narvik, in northern Norway, had been vaccinated recently against several diseases, including typhus.

This measure was said to be in connection with a German intention to move greater units of German soldiers from northern Finland to Norway. The dispatch said that spotted typhus already had appeared in some areas in northern Finland.

One Swedish paper spoke of extended Russian prison camps in northern Norway, some of which had as many as 40,000 prisoners who are being used in construction work on highways and also to shovel snow.

Nazis Decry Interest in Russia

The Berlin radio, in a Spanish-language broadcast heard in New York last night by the National Broadcasting Company, said: "People all over the world are far too interested in the events on the Far Eastern front to pay any attention to what is going on in Russia."

Heavy Serb Fighting Reported

BERNE, Dec. 28 (AP).—A Budapest dispatch to the Swiss newspaper "Neue Zuercher Zeitung" said tonight that Field Marshal Milan Nedich's Yugoslav troops, who are co-operating with the German occupation forces in former Yugoslavia, had advanced further south in Serbia and are now cleaning up insurgents in the neighborhood of Leskovaks, thirty-five miles south of Nish. Heavy fighting near Lebani also was reported.

U. S. Envoy And Whole Staff Hustled Out Of Bulgaria

DEC 29 1941

Earle, In Turkey, Says Retreating Nazis May Burn And Loot Occupied Europe

[By the Associated Press]

Istanbul, Dec. 27 (Delayed)—George H. Earle, United States Minister to Bulgaria, and all his legation staff arrived in Istanbul today after being hustled out of Bulgaria mysteriously amid rumors of a Nazi plot against them to create an "incident."

Instead of being put on the train at the regular station in the center of Sofia, Earle and his staff were taken at the last minute to little-used stations on the outskirts of the Bulgarian capital.

Members of the legation staff said the Bulgars explained the sudden shift in plans by blaming the Russians. The Bulgars claimed "there is danger the Russians are planning a bombing in order to make it appear that Bulgaria is violating diplomatic protection."

Nazi Plot Suspected

The general opinion among the legation staff, however, was that the Bulgars heard in advance of a Nazi plot to create an "incident" and that they had used this device to keep Bulgaria's record clean.

Earle said "German fortunes definitely are declining, but the death throes may be unprecedentedly violent." He added that there was some evidence that the Germans are planning to destroy utterly everything in any occupied countries they are forced to leave "in the biggest vandalism in history."

German Gloom Noted

Assumption of personal command of the army by Adolf Hitler "sickened the German people and soldiers alike," he said, adding that a monotonous dreariness prevails throughout Germany and among her satellites so that "it is impossible to distinguish the conquerors from the conquered."

The hospitals of Rumania and Hungary, Earle said, are choked with German wounded from Eastern front hospital trains arriving constantly, creating an ever-deepening gloom.

Today's arrivals, who included Major Cornelius C. Jadwin, the legation military attache, reached here after a hard automobile and train journey through the worst snowstorm experienced in European Turkey in many years.

All non-diplomatic American residents in Bulgaria, numbering about twenty, had to be left behind because the Nazi-controlled Bulgarian police would not permit them to cross the border even though the Bulgarian Foreign Office had issued them exit visas. Bulgaria has declared war on the United States.

Those left behind included ten women, mostly teachers in American schools in Bulgaria, and four children. It was believed the Germans wish to hold all possible Americans in Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary and Germany in order to trade them off for Germans living in the United States.

Madrid Foreign Minister Host To Axis Officials

Spanish-German-Italian Talks "Were Of Cordial Nature," Rome Announces

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Rome radio, as heard today by CBS, reported that Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish Foreign Minister, yesterday at Madrid received the Spanish Ambassador to Berlin, the Italian Ambassador to Madrid and the Charge D'Affaires of Germany's Madrid Embassy.

Rome said the subject of their talks was not known, "but it is officially stated that they were of a cordial nature."

De Gaulle to Get Views Of Allies on Island Coup

Office at London Reveals Plan for 'Exchange' of Ideas

LONDON, Dec. 28 (AP). — Free French headquarters announced tonight there will be an "exchange of views" between General Charles de Gaulle and interested Allied governments on diplomatic questions involved in the occupation of the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, off Newfoundland.

The United States has described the Free French occupation of the Vichy French possesions in the Western Hemisphere as "arbitrary" and done without consultation with Washington.

Vote 98.2 Per Cent for De Gaulle

ST. PIERRE, Dec. 28 (AP).—The Free French Information Bureau announced tonight that the question of Free French rule over St. Pierre and Miquelon has been "definitely established" by final returns from a plebiscite showing 98.2 per cent for General Charles de Gaulle's leadership.

After compiling votes cast today in the last of the islands' several districts, it announced the vote was: 783 for Free France, 215 void and 14 for collaboration with the Vichy government.

The bureau said this overwhelming majority was registered "despite propaganda from Vichy, despite the presence of a representative of the Vichy government during the voting and despite the fear of foreign intervention."

DEC 29 1941

(Strong opposition has been registered by the United States against the Free French seizure of the islands, which lie off southern Newfoundland, by the de Gaullists.)

Control of St. Pierre and Miquelon has been in the hands of the Free French since an expedition arrived aboard four corvettes Christmas Eve and ousted the Vichy-appointed regime.

Mexican General Staff Will Be Strengthened

Mexico City, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Important military changes expected to center more power in the presidential general staff will be made known within the coming week, it was said tonight in authoritative quarters.

The purpose was said to be to put the country's most able generals in key positions.

No change is contemplated, it was said, in the Pacific Coast command, which recently was placed under General Lazaro Cardenas. General Reynaldo Perez Gallardo, former governor of San Luis Potosi, and Colonel Damasco Cardenas, General Cardenas's brother, have been assigned to the coast and will leave at once to form a part of General Cardenas' staff.

The projected changes are expected to affect various parts of the country. Five cavalry regiments are to be transformed into infantry units as part of a general army reorganization plan.

Naval infantry forces are to be increased by more than 60 per cent in order to garrison vital points on both coasts. A number of seaplanes are expected shortly from the United States for use in coastal reconnaissance.

Speaks Tomorrow In Ottawa

OTTAWA, Dec. 28 (AP)—An atmosphere reminiscent of the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth in 1939 fell upon this snow-mantled dominion capital tonight as it prepared to welcome Winston Churchill on his arrival from his historic conferences in Washington with President Roosevelt.

The British Prime Minister will address a joint informal meeting of the Senate and House of Commons Tuesday, and Canadians expect it to equal in importance his speech last week before the United States Congress in Washington. The Ottawa address will be broadcast over national and international networks.

He will attend a meeting of the war committee of the Canadian cabinet and will meet cabinet members and chiefs at a reception.

Cuba Plans Health Parley For Defense

Havana, Dec. 28.—The Cuban government has invited Vice President Henry A. Wallace, several congressional leaders, Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, and other medical leaders to come to Cuba to organize health work in connection with continental defense, it was announced today.

U. S.-Salvador Arms Contract

San Salvador, El Salvador, Dec. 28 (AP)—Congress today approved a decree authorizing President Martinez to accept a United States offer of a $1,640,000 armament contract under which El Salvador would pay back only $1,040,000 in six annual installments, without interest.

U.S. Communiques on Far East

MANILA, Dec. 28 (AP).—A communique of the United States Army forces in the Far East:

DEC 29 1941

Nothing new since morning from the front.

Until Manila was declared an open city, it was noticeable that the Japanese did not attempt to attack civilian installations from the air.

But as soon as the Army was withdrawn, including anti-aircraft protection, they immediately raided, hitting all types of civilian premises, including bridges, convents, churches, business houses and residences.

Manila will no longer be blacked out. Tonight and all nights in the future Manila will be lighted.

A night communique:

Enemy pressure is increasing from the southeast. Our troops are resisting valiantly. There is little change in the north.

Our anti-aircraft shot down at least three enemy bombers yesterday. Our bombers hit enemy transports at Davao Christmas night successfully. One transport was known to have been sunk.

On Dec. 28 there was little activity on the Lingayen front. The Japanese apparently have reorganized behind the Agno River preparatory to an attempt to push south.

Newly formed Philippine Army troops, under fire since the beginning of the war, are rapidly becoming seasoned veterans and are approaching the standards of the well trained Philippine Scouts.

Japanese advances have been considerably slowed up, due to the excellent demolition work executed by our troops under supervision of Army engineers.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—A War Department communique:

1. PHILIPPINE THEATER: Fighting on all fronts on the Island of Luzon was confined to relatively unimportant operations. Enemy reinforcements are landing in large numbers in the vicinity of Damortis on Lingayen Gulf. Heavy enemy air activity continues.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

War Communiques

British

SINGAPORE, Dec. 28 (AP).—A British general headquarters communique:

On the Perak front our forces are in contact with the enemy. There has been patrol activity around Blanja.

Our artillery has been harassing the enemy's lines of communication and interfering with his efforts to cross the Perak River.

In northeastern Malaya our artillery knocked out two of five enemy lorries (trucks) proceeding along the coast between Kemaman and Kuantan.

Some armed Japanese dressed as Malays were captured yesterday.

During the night our aircraft carried out a very successful bombing attack on Supgeipaadi airdrome. At least ten enemy aircraft were completely desaroyed on the ground and numbers of others were damaged.

Some buildings were destroyed and many fires were started. A heavy explosion occurred, and the resultant fires could be seen by crews of returning aircraft at a distance of fifty miles. All our aircraft returned safely.

CAIRO, Dec. 28 (AP).—A British general headquarters communique:

Yesterday our forces intensified their pressure on the enemy in the Agedabia area.

The area between Bengazi and Agedabia now is almost clear of enemy forces, and such small parties as remain there are steadily being mopped up.

Still more enemy motor transports and petrol-tank wagons were destroyed by our air forces yesterday southwest of Agedabia.

A strong R. A. F. force and Free French bomber aircraft attacked objectives within the Bardia perimeter yesterday. Hits were scored on pillboxes and gunnery defense positions, as well as motor transport vehicles and barrack buildings, where fires broke out.

During Friday night bomber aircraft raided two merchant ships in Zuara harbor, on the coast of Tripolitania. A hit was obtained on one of the ships, which blew up with a violent explosion. Store dumps in the town also were bombed.

The harbor at Tripoli again was attacked, bombs falling on ships in the port and a large fire being started near the Spanish fort. Aircraft also machine-gunned an enemy transport moving from Tripoli toward Homs.

Further details now are available on the raid carried out on Tripoli during Wednesday night. A number of violent explosions took place on the Spanish quays, while motor transport, military huts and shipping were machine-gunned.

Bombs also were dropped on a group of enemy naval units northwest of the town, results being unobserved.

Enemy aircraft were active over the approaches to Malta yesterday, but were intercepted by our fighters, which shot down one Ju-88.

LONDON, Dec. 28 (AP).—An Admiralty communique:

On Saturday, Dec. 27, a small-scale raid, mainly against enemy shipping, was carried out on the Norwegian coast by the combined force of the Royal Navy, Army and R. A. F.

The operation was entirely successful in all respects, and all our ships returned fit for immediate service.

A further communique will be issued as soon as details are available.

Another Admiralty communique:

An enemy bomber was destroyed last night by the gunfire of one of our convoys. No casualty or damage was suffered either by the ships in the convoy or their escorts. There are no survivors from the enemy aircraft.

An Air Ministry communique:

Last night a powerful force of Bomber Command aircraft attacked targets in western Germany.

The airdrome at Soesterberg, in Holland, was attacked while enemy aircraft were landing, and bombs were seen to burst on the runways.

Mines were laid in enemy waters. Hudson aircrift of the Coastal Command last night bombed the airdrome at Sola, Norway.

An Air and Home Security Ministries communique:

There was slight coastal activity by the enemy during the early part of last night.

Bombs which were dropped at one point on the northeast coast of England caused but little damage. No one was seriously injured.

Dutch

BATAVIA, Dec. 28 (AP).—A Netherlands East Indies communique:

In the outer possessions of the Netherlands East Indies, Japanese bombers attacked a number of naval aircraft lying on the water, causing some damage. Further particulars are not available.

In the eastern part of the Netherlands East Indies archipelago, a ship of the K. P. M.—Royal Packet Navigation Company—was attacked and machine-gunned by Japanese aircraft. One person was killed and three were wounded. Damage done to the ship is insignificant.

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 28 (AP).—A late Soviet communique:

During Dec. 28, our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

On a number of sectors, our troops engaging the enemy, continued their advance and occupied a number of inhabited localities. On Dec. 27, eight German planes were brought down. Our losses were six planes.

On Dec. 27, seven German planes were brought down in the vicinity of Moscow.

During the night of Dec. 27-29, our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

On one sector of the southwestern front, our troops captured 250 lorries, twenty motor cars, twenty motorcycles, an ammunition dump, provisions and other equipment.

Our units operating on one sector of the southwestern front engaged in fierce fifighting with the enemy, successfully advanced and occupied a number of inhabited localities.

Inhabitants of village "B," armed with rifles, captured some of the Germans and took an active part in the fighting.

As a result of two days' fighting, our troops on one sector of the Leningrad front captured eighteen German machine-guns, five mortars, more than 100 rifles, 700 mines, 3,000 grenades, 25,000 cartridges, and annihilated over 500 officers and men.

DEC 29 1941

German

BERLIN, Dec. 28 (official broadcast recorded by AP).—A German high command communique:

In the southern sector of the eastern front, the enemy, who had made a few local breaches in our positions, was thrown back by a daring counter-attack. German, Italian and Slovak troops, as well as Danish, Finnish, Flemish, Dutch and Norwegian volunteers of an S. S. Viking division, have again distinguished themselves in the fighting.

In the central sector of the eastern front, strong enemy attacks were halted in hard fighting.

Weak enemy attacks in the northern sector of the front also were repulsed on all sectors of the front. The German air force supported operations of the army by effective attacks on prepared positions, installations in the rear of the enemy and railway objectives.

In the Straits of Kerch, strong bomber and dive-bomber formations continued their attacks on enemy shipping. They sank three transports totaling 2,800 tons and damaged a gunboat and four other ships.

Off the east coast of England, a merchantship of 5,000 tons was sunk bybombers in the night of Dec. 27.

British naval forces on Dec. 27 attempted a surprise attack at two remote points of the Norwegian coast. After brief, violent engagements, the British landing detachments were ejected by local patrols of the army and navy. The British landing detachments retired to their ships.

German bombers sank a destroyer of the fleeing warship formation. A cruiser and another destroyer were damaged. Ten enemy bombers were shot down in air fights and by our anti-aircraft artillery.

During the approach of the enemy, the German patrol boat Foehn was attacked by numerous bombers. The patrol boat shot down one enemy bomber and then lost in a heroic struggle against the superior fire of a Britisch cruiser and several destroyers. Some Norwegian merchant ships which were engaged in peaceful coast traffic were attacked and sunk by the British.

In North Africa, British attacks on German-Italian positions were frustrated. Formations of the German air force successfully attacked British airdromes, motorized columns and encampments in Cyrenaica.

During bomb attacks on airdromes and harbor installations at Malta, three British planes were shot down by escorting German pursuit planes.

British bombers raided western Germany last night. A number of civilians were killed or wounded. According to reports thus far at hand, ten enemy bombers were shot down by night chasers and anti-aircraft artillery.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Dec. 28 (AP).—A Finnish communique:

Karelian Isthmus: There was infantry and artillery harassing fire on both sides. The Totleben fortification was shelled in the Rajajooki area. Our own artillery scored hits on enemy positions, silenced a couple of cannon and dispersed a detachment numbering about 100 men.

Svir River front: The center was unusually lively with harassing fire by both sides. The enemy launched a heavy local attack against our lines, but was repulsed. Also to the eastward, the enemy attacked with the strength of a couple of companies but was thrown back. Local patrol activity was lively.

East front: In the southern sectors there was artillery and trench mortar harassing fire on both sides, as well as infantry skirmishes. An enemy detachment numbering about 100 men attempted to advance but was repulsed, and the enemy was forced to retreat. In the center, there was patrol activity by both sides.

North: An enemy battalion attempted to penetrate our lines at a certain point, but the assault was repulsed.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 28 (official broadcast recorded by AP).—A high command communique:

An enemy formation supported by tanks attempted to attack south of Bengasi. The enemy was repulsed and suffered some losses. They have taken some prisoners.

There was artillery activity on the Sollum and Bardia fronts.

A German air formation has repeatedly attacked airports in the British rear. Explosions and fire were observed. Tanks and several planes were damaged or destroyed.

Italian naval anti-aircraft batteries succeeded in shooting down three British planes. Four were shot down during air raids on Tripoli.

German air formations have repeatedly attacked Malta with notable results. Three planes were shot down in air combats. Four were set on fire on the ground.

Requisitioning By U. S. Of Odenwald Approved

Puerto Rican Court Order Guarantees Possession Of German Ship Seized in Atlantic

DEC 29 1941

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Dec. 28 (AP). Possession of the 5,038-ton German freighter Odenwald by the United States was guaranteed today in a court order approving the requisition of the vessel by the United States Maritime Commission. Its cargo of raw rubber and automobile tires will go to the Defense Supply Commission.

The Odenwald was seized by the United States cruiser Omaha in South Atlantic waters November 16, and her crew members were stopped in their attempt to scuttle her.

At the time of her seizure, the Odenwald was reported to be flying the American flag and to have had the Stars and Stripes painted on her sides.

Severe Rules Clamped Down On Coast Fishing

Licensing And Identification Of All Boats And Men Required As Anti-Spy Step On Atlantic

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—Ironclad regulations designed to prevent espionage and sabotage have been clamped down on commercial and sport fishing along the Atlantic Coast.

DEC 29 1941

The rulings, requiring the licensing and identification of all fishing boats, their owners, operators, crews and dock handlers, were made mandatory Christmas Day after fishing-boat operators failed to comply voluntarily with the regulations laid down by Secretary Morgenthau last October.

Under the restrictions fishing boat operators must be finger-printed, give complete information about themselves and submit to investigation of their citizenship, character, records and associations. Enforcement of the rulings is in charge of the Coast Guard.

Axis Aliens Surrender Radios And Cameras

DEC 29 1941

San Francisco, Dec. 28.—(AP.)—Scores of Axis aliens appeared at San Francisco police stations today with short wave radios and cameras which had been ordered surrendered by Attorney General Francis Biddle.

Only one police station, however, accepted the articles. Officers at the others informed the aliens they had no authority to accept the radios and cameras.

Chief of Police Charles Dullea indicated he was awaiting formal Federal orders. He approved the action of Lieutenant Dan Collins of Northern Station who acted on his initiative and gave receipts to the aliens.

Biddle issued the surrender order after it was reported unauthorized short-wave messages were being sent and received on the Pacific Coast.

"I hope the Americans beat the tar out of those Japanese war lords," said George S. Hirooka, vegetable stand operator, as he turned over his camera to police at Los Angeles.

The Japanese said he is giving a 10 cent defense savings stamp with every vegetable purchase of $1 or more.

Police were receipting for the cameras and radios, and storing them for the duration.

Enemy Envoys Living in Comfort

German Diplomats At Popular Resort

Housed at White Sulphur Springs, State Department Informs Nazis

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—(AP)—All members of the German embassy staff and their dependents have been housed comfortably at the Greenbriar Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and are receiving considerate treatment, the State Department said, last week.

The department has requested the American legation in Bern to inform the Swiss government, for transmission to the German government, of the conditions under which their embassy personnel and dependents are living.

In particular, the following conditions apply:

1. The whole group is permitted freely to move about in an extensive area of park grounds outside the hotel. This arrangement includes the mineral springs.

2. The German charge d'affaires with his wife can, upon request, also visit the town.

3. The representative of the Swiss legation is permitted free access to the German group at all times.

4. There is unrestricted two-way telephone communication at all times between the German group and the Swiss legation at Washington.

5. Postal communication between the Swiss legation and the German group is also permitted.

The department pointed out that since diplomatic relations were severed, the United States Government, under international law, has treated on a reciprocal basis the former representatives of the governments with which it is now at war.

The department understands that reciprocal treatment is being accorded the American diplomatic representatives in Germany.

Recent news dispatches via neutral countries reported that American diplomats and newspaper correspondents in Germany have been taken to Bad Nauheim in Southern Germany to await departure for the United States. Bad Nauheim is a popular health resort with several good hotels.

Hillman Asks 24-Hour Day In Training Of War Workers

Knudsen Urges Vital Defense Plants To Avoid Shutdowns For Year-End Inventories

DEC 29 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 28—OPM officials called on vocational schools today for an around-the-clock program of training of workers for war industries and, coincidentally, urged that vital defense plans keep their machinery humming despite year-end inventories.

Sidney Hillman, associate director of the OPM, asked that vocational institutions place all shop and training machinery on a twenty-four-hour-day and seven-day-week basis.

600 Now On Schedule

He said that more than 600 schools already were operating on that schedule and added that the existing pool of skilled workers soon would be entirely absorbed in war industries.

"The outbreak of war makes it as imperative to use our training machinery to the utmost as it does to use our production machinery full-time," Hillman said.

He added that all available persons, including women and "loyal non-citizens," should be trained to hold skilled jobs in the nation's wartime production machine.

Total To Be Boosted

Originally, the 1942 training program contemplated instruction of 900,000 defense workers, but Hillman said our involvement in war would boost the total far above that figure.

From William S. Knudsen, director general, meanwhile, came another OPM statement that war industries should attempt to avoid shutdowns for year-end inventories.

Saying instances where companies planned such shutdowns had been brought to his attention, Knudsen added:

'This will mean a loss of many man hours and if the practice is prevalent throughout the country there will result a serious delay in getting war materials to our hard-pressed fighting forces.

Time Important Now

"Each man hour spent on war materials now will be worth several later on. Our important time is today, and we must make the most of it."

Knudsen added that if any war industry found it "absolutely necessary" to shut down for inventory, it should "take every possible step to minimize the period of such shutdown."

In the textile and fiber section of OPM, Frank L. Walton urged mills to speed up production of cotton yarns and fabrics by working overtime and by beginning third-shift operations wherever possible.

Unemployment Up, CIO Says

Walton, chief of his section, declared that "defense demands are increasing rapidly and will, no doubt, continue to increase."

In the field of labor, the CIO said material shortages were causing economic dislocations which would add about 2,500,000 persons to the rolls of the unemployed. That increase would bring unemployment to approximately 7,500,000, a CIO statement added.

Obey Air-Raid Alarms, General Warns Nation

Chief Of Interceptor Command Points Out That Discipline Is Most Important Now

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—Brig. Gen. John C. McDonnell, commanding officer of the First Interceptor Command, appealed tonight to every American citizen to obey without question every air-raid alarm as a solemn, serious and patriotic duty.

Stressing that an air-raid warning was merely a warning and not a definite promise of enemy attack, General McDonnell declared in a nation-wide broadcast:

"An alert and disciplined people with a sense of their common good and their common safety will already have solved one of the great problems of air defense."

He said it still was a matter of "speculation and conjecture" whether New York city or the Atlantic seaboard would suffer air raids, but added: "Success in war is built upon surprise. We must therefore estimate the enemy's capabilities rather than his probable intentions."

FINANCE PROBLEM TO FACE CONGRESS

DEC 29 1941

Austin Says Anti-Axis Powers Must Plan Monetary Exchange Stabilization

Program Is Held Imperative To Efficient Coordination Of War Effort

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 28—Senator Austin (Rep., Vt.) predicted today that the United States, England, Russia, China and other nations battling the Axis powers must work out a plan for stabilizing their monetary exchanges "in order to coordinate efficiently our full war effort."

Austin, assistant Senate Republican leader, said this would be one of the many war problems facing the new session of Congress that will begin next week.

Would Prevent Fluctuations

The Vermont Senator supported the lease-lend program, but he said he thought it would not prove adequate in meeting financial problems of the joint war efforts of the Allies.

Wide fluctuation among monetary values of anti-Axis nations could cause "serious difficulties," he said, and must be "neutralized."

"We are going places we never dreamed we would go before we get through," he commented.

Second Session January 5

Any monetary agreement probably would be only for the duration of the war, Austin said, but he added that a similar problem would rise again with peace.

Congressional leaders plan to begin the second session of the Seventy-seventh Congress January 5.

The new session ordinarily would begin January 3, but leaders expected general agreement on a delay until Monday, January 5. All pending legislative matters will carry through into the new session.

DEC 29 1941

Major Fiscal Problems

House committees will begin consideration of major fiscal problems—writing a new tax bill to bring in additional billions of Federal revenue and making wartime appropriations with an eye to trimming non-vital expenditures.

The Senate will have three major matters for immediate disposition: price-control legislation already voted by the House; the effort to disqualify Senator Langer (Rep., N. D.), and proposed legislation against strikes.

The Senate Banking Committee is scheduled to complete revision of wartime price-control legislation Friday after drastic rewriting of the measure passed by the House before the outbreak of war.

Debate Is Expected

The Senate Privileges and Elections Committee already has voted, 13 to 3, to deny Langer his seat. A spirited debate possibly lasting a week or longer is expected to precede Senate action.

Senator Thomas (Dem., Utah), chairman, said he would call the Senate Labor Committee together soon after the first of the year to discuss a variety of bills dealing with wartime labor policies.

Thomas was associate moderator of the special labor-industry conference which recently agreed on elimination of all work stoppages, and arbitration by a war labor board of such disputes as arise.

Legislation Opposed

Thomas said he believed this board could be set up under executive order without Congressional action, and indicated he thought no legislation should be enacted.

"The conference assumed there will not be any strikes during the war, and we must give it full faith and credit," Thomas said.

The National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, a private organization, made public a statement signed by 352 persons saying enactment of anti-strike legislation would be "a dire threat" to the unity needed for prosecution of the war.

DEFENSE-VITAL INDUSTRIES FROM POSSIBLE AIR RAIDS BY ENEMY BOMBERS-- AND THEY CAN KEEP A SECRET.

DEC 29 1941

THEY ARE WORKING SIX HOURS DAILY--AND SEVEN DAYS A WEEK--IN THE AIR RAID WARNING SERVICE SET UP BY MAJOR JAMES E.TOTTEN OF THE ARMY SIGNAL CORPS. SOME FEW ARE WORKING LONGER--10 OR 12 HOURS A DAY.

MORE ARE NEEDED. AND MORE ARE VOLUNTEERING, DAILY. MAJOR TOTTEN SAID THERE WERE 750 VOLUNTEERS, THEN SAID WAIT A MINUTE. THAT MIGHT BE TOO HIGH. A RECHECK SHOWED 850. ONE HUNDRED HAD COME IN THAT DAY.

THE WOMEN ANSWER TELEPHONES AT A GIANT SWITCHBOARD. THEY WORK AS STENOGRAPHERS, AS TYPISTS. MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL, THEY PLOT THE COURSE OF ANY UNIDENTIFIED PLANES REPORTED NEARING LOS ANGELES.

IN THE FIRST WEEK OF THE WAR--THERE WAS A BLACKOUT AND TWO AIR ALERTS, ALL BASED ON REPORTS OF UNIDENTIFIED PLANES. FROM OBSERVERS PLACED STRATEGICALLY THROUGHOUT THE COUNTY, THEY PLOTTED THE COURSE OF THE PLANES--AND WARNED MILITARY SERVICES JUST WHERE THE CRAFT WERE AND THEIR APPARENT OBJECTIVE, JUDGED BY THE ROUTES THEY TOOK.

THE WOMEN ARE MAKING SACRIFICES--GIVING UP HOME, LEISURE, DATES, SLEEP, HOLIDAY PARTIES--TO HELP THE MILITARY SERVICES PROTECT THEIR HOMELAND.

THAT'S ONE REASON MAJOR TOTTEN IS ANXIOUS TO GET MORE VOLUNTEERS. HE WANTS AT LEAST 2,000. THEN HE CAN REDUCE THEIR HOURS TO SIX EVERY OTHER DAY.

THE WOMEN WORK FREE. ONLY A FEW, THOSE WHO ARRIVE AT 1 A.M., AND THOSE WHO LEAVE AT 1 A.M.. ARE GIVEN TRANSPORTATION. THE SALVATION ARMY OPERATES A SMALL LUNCH STAND IN THE FIVE STORY BUILDING THE SERVICE OCCUPIES. IT SERVES COFFEE, SANDWICHES AND DOUGHNUTS FREE.

WHAT TYPE OF WOMEN ARE BEST SUITED FOR THE SERVICE? MAJOR TOTTEN SAYS THEY MUST: BE BETWEEN 18 AND 45 YEARS OLD, BUT MAY BE SINGLE, MARRIED OR DIVORCED. THEY MUST NOT HAVE YOUNG CHILDREN WHO REQUIRE ATTENTION AT HOME.

PREFERABLY UNEMPLOYED, AND NOT ATTENDING SCHOOL. HOWEVER, THE SERVICE ACCEPTS WORKING GIRLS--AND HAS MANY WHO DONATE SIX HOURS NIGHTLY AFTER WORKING IN A STORE OR OFFICE ALL DAY.

TELEPHONE SWITCHBOARD, TYPING OR STENOGRAPHIC EXPERIENCE IS PREFERRED, BUT NOT REQUIRED. "IF THEY CAN DO ONE OF THESE THINGS, WE CAN QUICKLY FIT THEM INTO THE SERVICE," THE MAJOR SAID. "IF THEY CAN'T, WE'LL TRAIN THEM AS PLOTTERS, TELLERS, CLERKS OR MESSENGERS."

BE ABLE TO TAKE ORDERS--AND CARRY THEM OUT.

HAVE GOOD HEALTH, GOOD HEARING AND GOOD EYESIGHT.

BE MENTALLY ALERT. DEC 29 1941

BE ABLE TO TALK WELL INTO A TELEPHONE--AND TO UNDERSTAND WHAT IS TELEPHONED TO THEM.

DEC 29 1941

POSSIBLY MOST IMPORTANT, KEEP A SECRET. THEIR WORK IS HIGHLY CONFIDENTIAL.

BARBARA ANN KIRCHNER, WHO WORKS IN MAJOR TOTTEN'S PRIVATE OFFICE, WAS AMONG THE FIRST TO VOLUNTEER. SHE'S BEEN WORKING SINCE BEFORE

THANKSGIVING--THREE WEEKS BEFORE PEARL HARBOR.

"I'VE BEEN HOME ONLY THREE OR FOUR TIMES IN THREE OR FOUR WEEKS," SHE SAID--AND SMILED, ALTHOUGH SHE'D BEEN ON DUTY AROUND THE CLOCK. "I USUALLY SLEEP THREE OR FOUR HOURS ON A BUNK THE SALVATION ARMY PROVIDES ON THE FIFTH FLOOR, THEN COME BACK TO WORK. I HAD 10 HOURS SLEEP LAST NIGHT--AND DID I FEEL GOOD. THAT WAS THE FIRST NIGHT I'VE REALLY SLEPT SINCE I CAME HERE.

DEC 29 1941

"NO ONE REALIZES WHAT SACRIFICES THESE WOMEN ARE MAKING. EVEN THEIR NEIGHBORS DON'T. AND THE PUBLIC CAN'T POSSIBLY. THEY GO UNRECOGNIZED BECAUSE THEY DON'T EVEN WEAR ANY UNIFORM."

MAJOR TOTTEN INTERRUPTED TO ADD:

"THESE WOMEN HAVE BEEN WORKING HARD AND FAITHFULLY AND LONG HOURS EVER SINCE THE WAR STARTED. MANY OF THEM WORK SIX HOURS EVERY OTHER NIGHT IN ADDITION TO ALL DAY AT THE OFFICE. THEY'RE GIVING UP HOLIDAY CELEBRATIONS."

SO WAS MAJOR TOTTEN. IT WAS 11 P.M.--AND HE'D BEEN AT HIS DESK SINCE 8 A.M. HE WAS WEARY. THERE WERE TIRED LINES AROUND HIS EYES AND HIS VOICE WAS TIRED. HE WAS CHARGED WITH RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE WHOLE SETUP, WHICH INVOLVES AN ADMINISTRATIVE FORCE AND GUARDS OF SCORES OF SOLDIERS.

PROBABLY THE NO.1 VOLUNTEER OF ALL OF THESE WOMEN IS MRS.BARBARA MCCARTHY. SHE'S DEAN OF WOMEN NOW. AND WHAT DOES A DEAN OF WOMEN DO?

"WHY, KEEP ALL OF THESE OTHER WOMEN HAPPY."

HOW DOES SHE DO IT?

"I COULDN'T POSSIBLY SAY," MRS.MCCARTHY LAUGHED. "BUT THEY'RE A SWELL BUNCH."

BUT WHAT ABOUT KEEPING MR.MCCARTHY HAPPY? IT WAS 11 P.M., REMEMBER, AND SHE'D BEEN ON THE JOB SINCE 9 A.M.--14 HOURS.

"OH, HE DOESN'T EVEN KNOW ME ANY MORE. HE TELEPHONED HE'D PICK ME UP TONIGHT, AND SAID I'D BETTER HAVE SOMEONE ALONG TO INTRODUCE US."

Spirits of Defenders High, Resistance Stubborn, Washington Says

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP)—In a terrific effort to soften up the coast defenses of Manila Bay, a huge force of Japanese bombers blasted at them for three hours, the War Department reported today, but antiaircraft fire brought down four of the enemy craft.

Guard Entrance

The heavy fortifications guarding the entrance to the bay include Ft. Mills on Corregidor Island, Ft. Drum across the bay, Ft. Hughes and others.

Meantime, north of Manila, American and Filipino defense forces—with spirits high and resistance stubborn—fought doggedly against heavily reinforced invaders on a shortened defense line.

Sink Two Ships

At sea, American submarines torpedoed and sank two more Japanese ships, a transport and a supply vessel. This success was slightly diminished by scant damage Japanese planes inflicted upon an American destroyer. The Navy Department reported only minor casualties aboard.

Good tidings continued to come in concerning the part American volunteer fliers played in combatting a Japanese bombing raid on Rangoon, Burma, the day after Christmas. The China Defense Supplies, Inc., announced it had received a message saying that the American volunteer unit of the Chinese air force shot down 26 Japanese planes out of a squadron of 80. The Americans lost only two of their own planes, the message added.

Four Destroyed Earlier

The Japanese losses, it was pointed out, were in addition to the destruction of four enemy bombers by an American volunteer unit south of Kunming, China, three days previously.

Scornfully, the State Department replied to a Japanese protest alleging that 10 Japanese nationals were killed (presumably by Americans or Filipinos) at Davao in the Philippines at the time Japanese forces attacked that city.

Declaring that it had no reports whatsoever that would substantiate the alleged killings the department accused the Japanese of trying "to divert attention from their own in-

The department then called attention to the bombing of Manila, saying the Japanese have "ruthlessly, wantonly and with complete lack of humanity bombed the defenseless civilian population of a declared open city, have killed scores of civilians and have wounded hundreds more."

In another announcement, the department said it had received word that the American consulate at Manila was undamaged and the entire diplomatic staff safe as well.

DEC 30 1941

Terse Communique

The War Department high-lighted the day's Philippine developments with a terse communique relating Gen. Douglas MacArthur's consolidation of a majority of his troops in Pampanga Province and the shortening of his lines.

This strategy was an apparent move to fall back on a better-defended position north of the Philippine capital.

MacArthur's report to the military establishment here underscored the high spirits in which the American and Philippine troops met the foe. They battled a strengthened enemy and against heavy odds. "Losses were heavy on both sides" was the communique's cryptic climax.

The Japanese brought up tank regiments, horse cavalry and several infantry divisions to reinforce their position, the communique said. Veteran soldiers, modernly equipped, composed the Japanese units.

Manila Has Respite

Meanwhile, Manila, its citizenry burning in anger against Japan's assault from the skies, had a respite from bombing. But Corregidor, the island fortress at the door of Manila Bay, was subjected for two hours to an air attack. The Japanese were said to have lost a number of planes in the effort. The effect of the raid was not disclosed.

Other Philippine fronts apparently remained unchanged, although reports filtering into Manila from Northern Luzon indicated that the Japanese might be falling back in one sector 100 miles north of Manila.

Gen. MacArthur's new consolidated line seemed to be midway between the Gulf of Lingayen and Manila, an area long pictured as a probable standpoint against invasion.

Consolidation of defending troops in Pampanga Province placed them not far above Manila. The northern border of Pampanga is about 55 miles above the capital and the southern boundary about 25 miles.

Deep Withdrawal Possible

There were a number of suggestions in War Department and Manila reports that a deep American withdrawal might have to be effected in the face of a sharply augmented enemy.

Filipinos were advised by the office of High Commissioner Francis B. Sayre to remain quietly in their homes if Manila were occupied. He did not tell them this, however, without first assuring them that:

"Help is surely coming—help of such adequacy and power that the invader will be driven from our midst and will be rendered powerless ever to threaten us again."

The ringing resolve came scarcely more than a day after President Roosevelt issued his statement to the Philippine people, pledging that their freedom would be redeemed and their independence established and maintained.

The determined but somber tone of the Sayre pronouncement was emphasized by the admonition that "in the event of occupation all inhabitants remain quietly in their houses. Let us show that we can be calm and self-controlled."

Propaganda Fails

There was every indication that the Japanese had failed miserably in their propaganda effort to drive a wedge between the Filipinos and the Americans. Scores of stories related how steadfast and heroic were the citizens and soldiers of the commonwealth. From Northern Luzon came reports of "suicide squads" of young Filipino soldiers who halted the first rush of Japanese invaders and of others who were so eager to get at the foe that they plunged in ahead of American tanks.

A high Filipino in Manila said the citizenry was so incensed that he "could go out on the downtown plazas today and raise thousands of middle-aged and older men who are anxious to go to the front lines to battle these destroyers."

Approximately 4000 prisoners in Bilibid Prison were reported to have attempted to escape because they wanted to get out to fight the Japanese.

Warns of Retribution

Here in Washington, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic leader, called the bombing of Manila "the most stupid imaginable" because of "the retribution Japan has brought on herself."

"Manila is suffering," Barkley said in a statement, "with its 600,000 helpless inhabitants huddled under the rain of Japanese missiles. Think of Tokyo, with 10 times as many inhabitants, when the inevitable day of destruction comes, as our bombers swoop down upon the city."

President Roosevelt, his historic week of world-wide war mapping with Prime Minister Churchill at an end, began the last week of the old year with a relatively light schedule for the day, conferring with Dr. Alexander Loudon, the Netherlands minister, and Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet.

From the White House came the suggestion that it might take time for sufficient aid to reach the Philippines. This, said Presidential Secretary Stephen Early, took into account the tremendous distances involved.

Asked if the President's use of the word "redeem" in the message to the Philippine people indicated that the President felt the islands might be lost temporarily, Early replied: "I shouldn't think so, no."

Developments on the great civilian defense front brought a prediction from government experts that the new restrictions on automobile tires might cut 1942 gasoline consumption by 85 per cent under this year's use.

"Everything Quiet"

MANILA, Tuesday, Dec. 30 (AP)—This open city, still smoking from the week-end Japanese air raids, had a seventeen-minute alarm this morning, but no planes appeared, and the United States Armed Forces in the Far East at 11:45 A. M. issued its shortest communiqué of the war:

"Everything is quiet."

A haze out over Manila Bay prevented observers from seeing whether the Japanese had again attacked Corregidor, the island fortress at the harbor mouth, which was heavily attacked from the air yesterday. After those opening salvos of what may be a long and dramatic siege, the Japanese dropped leaflets bearing the Japanese and Philippine flags and the words:

"We join you in honoring the memory of José Rizal."

The Filipino patriot Rizal was shot by the Spanish forty-five years ago today.

The assault on Corregidor was a costly one, for the Japanese lost "a number" of planes to the accuracy of the fortress gunners. Four were shot down out of one formation of 27.

Ignoring undefended Manila, which had been savagely bombarded on Saturday and Sunday, the raiders circled high over Corregidor unloading their bombs.

MORE TROOPS LANDED

This first officially reported sustained attack upon the heavily fortified little Gibraltar of the Philippines came as the invaders landed new land forces in southern Luzon where island defenders were battling steadily rising pressure while on the northern fronts the situation was little changed.

Heretofore Manila observers had noted one or two flights of Japanese planes over Corregidor and saw bombs dropped in that direction but these were short and the attackers flew extremely high, maneuvering away from the fortress guns.

Official reports of damage were lacking but General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters indicated the effectiveness of the defending gunners with the succinct statement:

"A number of Japanese planes were shot down."

This opening major assault was considered here to be the forerunner of many more to come.

Although Manila went through Monday bomb-free, two alerts sounded in the city. One observation plane flew low during the morning over the Pasig river and other areas of Manila proper.

Capital residents still were apprehensive lest yesterday's lull might be only a temporary respite while the Japanese were concentrating on Corregidor.

Apparently the elimination of everything of a military nature in Manila as a result of the city's official designation as an open city had been completed today.

An Army officer arrived from the northern front reported that at the time of his departure the assailant appeared to be falling back from Tayug, 100 miles north of Manila and 20 miles inland from Lingayen Gulf.

DEC 30 1941

HEROIC RESISTANCE

A Manila newspaper reporter returning from the same theatre, told of the heroic resistance of young Filipino soldiers who, with heedless valor, had breasted the full shock of the initial Japanese push and for 48 hours beginning on Christmas morning had beaten off the attackers until the American command had been able to reorganize its main bodies on favorable terrain.

(These and other reports in Manila indicated an improvement in the Lingayen Gulf area, but the supposition arose that they had referred to developments now superseded.)

(The War department's communique issued from Washington on Monday morning stated that General MacArthur had consolidated the majority of his troops in Pampanga province, thus shortening his lines, and that the enemy in recent days had been heavily reinforced by several infantry divisions, tank regiments and horse cavalry.

(It thus appeared, on the basis of this communique, that MacArthur's main bodies had fallen back to an area about 55 miles below the Lingayen gulf and about the same distance above Manila.

(The Navy reported in Washington new successes for U. S. submarines. Sunk in the Far East were two additional Japanese ships, a transport and a supply vessel. An American destroyer was attacked by enemy planes and slightly damaged.)

While military information was scarce during the day in Manila, it became increasingly apparent that the violent Japanese air attacks upon this undefended city after it had been declared open, had produced a deep and bitter anger, not the terror that had been intended.

While the ordinary people walked silently amid the tragic wreckage, Filipino spokesmen made plain their determination.

Said one:

"The Filipinos are so incensed that I could go out on the downtown Plaza today and raise thousands of middle-aged and older men anxious to go to the front lines to battle these destroyers."

Said the radio commentator, Ignacio Javier, in a broadcast to the country:

"It is now plain that the Japanese are changing their tactics toward the Filipino people.

Cannot Divide U. S.

"They realize that they cannot divide us from our American benefactors and protectors, nay, comrades. They realize that they cannot fool us with promises and propaganda. Now they are resorting to the usual weapon of the stupid and clumsy. They are trying to intimidate us by bombing churches and colleges as soon as Manila is (declared) an open city."

More than 4,000 prisoners, it developed, attempted to break from Bilibid Prison late Sunday night to join in the fight against the Japanese. Minority pro-Japanese felons had put about untrue rumors that the American and Filipino forces had been unable to halt the Japanese, said press accounts, and the great majority then revolted in an effort to help at the front.

No Raid On Manila

Today, this city had a respite from aerial assault, at least up until late afternoon.

Four other raiders unsuccessfully attacked two bridges near Calumpit in Balacan province, twenty-six miles northwest of Manila. Three civilians were wounded there.

DEC 30 1941

Anti-aircraft gun emplacements indicated that anti-aircraft guns alone had shot down nine Japanese planes Saturday. Three more were smashed Sunday.

MANILA, Tuesday, Dec. 30 (AP)—The opening salvoes of what may be a long and dramatic siege of the Corregidor Island fortress whose powerful guns stand athwart the sole seaway approach to Manila were fired yesterday when Japanese planes roared through an earth-shaking barrage to blast the citadel for two hours.

Suicide Units Rush Ahead Of Tanks

[By the Associated Press]

DEC 30 1941

Manila, Dec. 29—"Suicide squads" of young Filipino soldiers were credited today with halting the first rush of the Japanese advance in northern Luzon and helping to drive back the invaders in at least one sector. But United States Army headquarters at the same time warned of a fresh threat in the south, where, it said, the Japanese were landing reinforcements.

Army advices otherwise were meager simply reporting "no material change" in the north or south. An officer returned from the northern front said the Japanese appeared to be falling back from Tayug, 100 miles north of Manila and 20 miles inland from Lingayen Gulf, and a Manila bulletin reported back from the same sector told of the work of the "suicide squads."

"In Full Retreat"

(Bert Silen, NBC reporter in Manila, said eyewitnesses reported the Japanese "in full retreat" in the province of Pangasisnan, just south of Lingayen Gulf, with four towns recaptured out of the six they had occupied. In the south, Silen said, the defenders' lines "are in excellent position . . . expected to hold the enemy in check.")

The young Filipinos, he said, had fought off the Japanese for at least forty-eight hours beginning Christmas morning, thus enabling the army command to reorganize the main body of the defense forces and redispose them.

Transports Chased

One tank commander told the reporter that "during our many sallies into enemy territory those Filipinos just rushed in front of our tanks to get at the Japs. Hell, what do they think our tanks are here for?"

After the American lines had been reestablished, the fighting settled down into long-range artillery exchanges, with frequent tank action in which the Japanese infantry, following up its tanks, was said to have lost heavily.

A fleet of Japanese transports in Lingayen Gulf, off the coast of the province of La Union, was reported driven off by the American guns without even attempting any further landings.

No Raiders Appear

Manila, meanwhile, after two days of successive bombing in spite of its designation as an open city, saw no raiders today. There was a fifty-six-minute air raid alarm starting at 12.37 P. M., but no raiders appeared.

An earlier alarm at 8.30 A. M. was caused by a Japanese reconnaissance plane which roared over the walled city's bombed area and down the Pasig river. The alert lasted an hour and two minutes.

(Silen reported two alarms without bombs being dropped. He said there were unconfirmed reports that Dutch planes had sunk twelve Japanese transports seeking to land reinforcements at Davao, on the Island of Mindanao.)

Prisoners Revolt

Approximately 4,000 prisoners in Bilibid Prison attempted an unsuccessful break late Sunday night reportedly because they wished to join the army and fight the Japanese.

Press reports said that prisoners of pro-Japanese Ganap party affiliations had circulated rumors the United States and Philippine forces had been unable to stem the Japanese advance, and that the prisoners revolted. Several buildings were set afire and ten of the prisoners were believed to have been shot or burned to death. All the prisoners were kept within the compound.

That the Filipino reaction to Japanese bombings of Manila Saturday and Sunday was one of bitter indignation rather than terror was evident on all sides as masses of people viewed the scenes of death and destruction.

One high Filipino said "Filipinos are so incensed that I could go out on the downtown plazas today and raise thousands of middle-aged and older men who are anxious to go to the front lines to battle these destroyers."

Jap Tactics Changed

Ignacio Javier, a Filipino radio commentator, said during a broadcast, "It is now plain that the Japanese are changing their tactics toward the Filipino people. They realize they cannot divide us from our American benefactor and protectors, nay, comrades. They realize they cannot fool us with promises and propaganda. Now they are resorting to the usual weapon of the stupid and clumsy. They are trying to intimidate us by bombing churches and colleges as soon as Manila is an open city."

Eight coastal ships which had been moored in the Pasig river and which had been objectives of repeated bombing by the Japanese Sunday and Saturday were scuttled in order to elminate them as targets.

Even their superstructures were destroyed as the river is too shallow to permit them to be completely submerged.

The raiders who bombed the city Sunday for the second consecutive day found no opposition.

12 Planes Bagged

Japanese planes raided the island fortress of Corregidor, at the entrance to Manila Bay, for two hours, but lost a number of planes in the operation. Four planes staged an unsuccessful attack on two bridges near Calumpit in Balacan province, twenty-six miles northwest of Manila, where three civilians were injured.

Anti-aircraft guns at the front were reported to have brought down nine Japanese planes Saturday, and official advices said three more were shot down Sunday.

(A Tokyo broadcast said the spokesman of the naval section of imperial headquarters today denied that Japanese air forces had bombed indiscriminately at Manila. He said the navy would produce photographs "to blast all such allegations intended to discredit the imperial forces.")

Roaring in at low altitudes, at least five formations of nine planes each pounded the city savagely between 11.24 A. M. and 1.28 P. M., loosing scores of bombs and setting at least four major fires.

At 4.22 P. M. Manila had another forty-six-minute alert when three more Japanese air raiders strafed suburban Camp Murphy—which previously had been evacuated—from a height of only 200 feet.

Though preliminary reports showed that Sunday morning's attack injured only three persons and caused no fatalities, material damage was heavy.

The Philippine Treasury Building, badly damaged in Saturday's three-hour-and-17-minute assault, was hit again. Also struck were old Fort Santiago and the headquarters of the U. S. Army Engineers on an island in the Pasig river, the buildings of Deletran College adjoining Santo Domingo Church, which was destroyed yesterday, and the plant of the Manila Herald.

Two Schools Struck

One bomb struck the Dunlop Tire Co. building and others hit the Santa Rosa and Santa Catalina Schools, starting a fire which swept through an entire block.

Bombs also fired the big Elizalde rope warehouse on the Pasig river, just back of the Escolta, Manila's main business thoroughfare.

A communique issued from General MacArthur's headquarters declared pointedly that "until Manila was declared an open city it was noticeable the Japanese did not attempt to attack civilian installations from the air.

"But as soon as the Army was withdrawn, including anti-aircraft protection, they immediately raided, hitting all types of civilian premises, including bridges, convents, churches, business houses and residences."

Despite this declaration, and a Tokyo announcement asserting the Japanese had no intention of recognizing Manila as an open city, there was no hint that authorities planned to restore Manila's defenses.

On the contrary, MacArthur's headquarters announced last evening that Manila no longer would be blacked out and the radio station was permitted to resume long-wave broadcasts.

"Tonight and all nights in the future Manila will be lighted," the announcement said.

In accordance with the order police cars picked their way through bomb-scarred streets last evening with loudspeakers blaring: "Turn on your lights — the blackout is ended."

After 20 lightless nights, however, Manila residents appeared reluctant to heed the order. Here and there a light appeared in residential sections, but most homes remained dark.

(The Tokyo radio broadcast explaining the official Japanese attitude toward Manila declared that it had been a nerve center for resistance in the Philippines, and that the Japanese air force would continue its attacks.

(The broadcast urged Manila residents to leave the city and go to the inland towns of Antipolo and Montalban in Rizal province, in which Manila is situated.)

Arm All, Leader Urges

Meanwhile, Pedro Abad Santos, Philippine Communist Party leader, urged the Government to mobilize the masses for national defense and give the people arms with which to fight the invaders.

Earlier four Chinese and one Filipino were arrested on charges of wartime profiteering as the Government continued its campaign against unreasonable prices.

A gasoline-rationing order was suspended, meanwhile, and civilians were told they would be permitted to purchase gas as long as the supply lasted. They were warned, however, that supplies were limited because of the destruction of tank facilities.

Filipinos Urged To Stay Calm

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Dec. 29—The office of High Commissioner Francis B. Sayre issued a statement today assuring Filipinos that "help is surely coming" but advising them to remain quietly in their homes in event of occupation.

"Help is surely coming—hedp of such adequacy and power that the invader will be driven from our midst and will be rendered powerless ever to threaten us again," the statement said.

"It is our duty not to demand details, but have an abiding faith that help is on the way."

Hits Rumor-Spreading

The high commissioner's office will continue to do all possible to coordinate "the work of various organization that are striving to make the ilves and property of all the people of this city as secure as possible during the period of waiting," the statement continued, "and urges upon the people of Manila that in the event of occupation all inhabitants remain quietly in their houses. Each of us would have a great responsibility, as any untoward act might bring tragedy to our city and its people. Let us show that we can be calm and self-controlled."

The people were cautioned against repeating "depressing rumors that may have been started for the very purpose of undermining the tough morale of our city."

1st Jap Wave Walked Up to Be Wiped Out

By RUSSELL BRINES.

DEC 30 1941

Manila, Tuesday, Dec. 30 (AP).—The first Japanese troops which came ashore at Mauban on Lamon Bay, southeastern Luzon, were killed to the last man, but the defenders were forced back into the hills by successive Japanese reinforcements, declared two youthful Filipino soldiers interviewed by Manila reporters on their arrival from the front today.

They said six Japanese transports arrived at Mauban, in Tayabas Province, during the rainy Christmas Eve and started landing operations at 2 A. M. Christmas morning.

The Japanese illuminated the entire coastline with blue flares and threw out a smoke screen.

Concentrated fire from the shore nevertheless sank many of their landing boats, but the survivors drove ahead.

"The invaders landed first in waves of 30 to 50 men," said the Filipinos.

"We waited until they were 70 ards away from us before letting go.

"We mowed down the first series, but as succeeding ones came thicker and stretched the battle line wider around the bay, we finally had to retreat.

"We entrenched ourselves in the hills back of the bay."

Then in two days the defenders stopped the Japanese four times halting the forward line but always having to withdraw under the pressure of invader reinforcements even while taking a heavy death toll at every stand.

"They just marched grimly on, without taking cover," said one of the Filipinos.

Soldiers returning from the northern front also reported the Japanese failed to take cover, firing at defenders who were virtually invisible in tall grass.

In the north the Japanese also showed marked inferiority in bayonet fighting and marksmanship, soldiers reported.

Sometimes the invaders wore aluminum plates on their foreheads, they added.

FILIPINOS BACK OPEN CITY EDICT

Manila, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Presidential Secretary Jorgeb Vargas declared today on behalf of the Philippine Government that the Filipino people were in full accord with Gen. Douglas MacArthur's action in declaring Manila an open city.

Mr. Vargas, the number one Commonwealth official in Manila since President Manuel Quezon's departure, made his statement in answer to Japanese assertions that the Filipinos did not approve of Gen. MacArthur's declaration. The secretary emphasized President Quezon had moved the Government offices from Manila so that such a declaration might be made.

New ABCD Ally

DEC 30 1941

With the USAFFE in Central Luzon, Dec. 29 (AP)—The ABCD powers have a new ally in their war against Japan. He is "General Tomas," the ruler of the warlike, if diminutive, Balugas who live in the mountains of west central Luzon.

Tomas, with a sling of poisoned arrows over his shoulder, an ancient cartridge belt around his waist and a gleaming bolo in his hand, approached a group of American officers. He wore an old United States army shirt and a fatigue cap.

He drew himself up to his full height—four feet—and, with great dignity, informed the officers that the Balugas, with the approval of their tribal councilor, his father, "King Alfonso," had decided unanimously to help America fight Japan.

Tomas previously had captured three Japanese airmen, who had parachuted from their planes, and delivered them to the American forces.

U. S. LIEUTENANT GETS 50 JAPS

With U. S. Troops in Central Luzon, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—A United States cavalry colonel told today how one of his lieutenants overpowered a detachment of fifty Japanese soldiers by simply "shouting real loud."

"Thinking they were Filipino troops," said the colonel, "my lieutenant walked within fifty yards of their groups. Suddenly they waved two small Rising Sun flags. He hollered and made signals to tell them they should wait, then went back and got his machine gun and, when he returned . . ."

The colonel went no further.

"Those Charlies—we call them Charlies—can't shoot. Somebody gets hit about every 5,000 shots. At Tayug on Christmas Day we fought them for seven hours and they were firing all the time, making a wonderful display, lots of noise and wasting ammunition.

"When it was all over one of my men was hit in the hand and one horse was killed.

"Busted Their Tank Attack"

"At Binalonan (West of Tayug) the previous day they surprise-attacked before dawn and cut us off from our horses. Our line of withdrawal was open, but we love horses, so we fought our way back to our bivouac. That scrap lasted five hours and ended when we busted their tank attack."

Two American officers, whose names were withheld, were credited with playing an important part in smashing this attack at the price of their lives.

One of the officers, a young lieutenant, took a supply of hand grenades and crawled down an exposed road toward the Japanese tanks. He had almost reached his objective when he was struck three times by machine-gun bullets. Though mortally wounded he kept on and hurled his grenades.

Gasoline Bottles Hurled

A short time later an American major and an unidentified driver operating a mounted 75-millimeter cannon drove off the first few Japanese tanks and then charged down the road with the gun blazing. The leading Japanese tank was smashed by a direct hit, and the attack was halted. The major was killed but the driver somehow escaped.

Filipino scouts, inspired by the action of the Amercan officers, rode in among the Japanese tanks flinging gasoline-filled bottles at them and completed the job of breaking up the attack, thus letting the main body of cavalry make an orderly withdrawal.

The only USAFFE members who have seen recognizable Japanese officers are those who have been taken prisoner.

Members of the Philippine Scouts who were captured and then worked their way back to rejoin their units report that behind the lines the officers can be identified because they are armed only with sabers. All Japanese troops in the front lines have identification marks.

Captives Freed By Japs

Many men who appeared on the Scouts' casualty lists are fighting the Japanese again or, as they put it, "beginning a new life." They were captured by the Japanese and expected to be killed. But they were turned loose, dressed only in their underwear, and told to head into the mountains.

Instead they rejoined their units as soon as possible.

A typical case in this outfit, with its tradition of thirty-four years of tough soldiering under American officers, is that of Private First Class Domingo Hidalgo, who, though he stands only 5 feet 2 and weighs 110 pounds, is a veteran of twelve years' service with the Scouts.

Keeps In The Fighting

Cut off from his cavalry troop at Damortis, Hidalgo spent the night circling the Japanese lines and by the following morning had worked his way through them. Farther south he joined a Philippine army unit which was attacked by the Japanese.

"I ran to a machine gun and succeeded in hitting sixteen Japanese," said Hidalgo.

Later he joined an American tank unit, whose commander reported that "he proved his courage while with us."

Kelly Died Near Home Field

Had Only Two Minutes to Go When a Pair of Jap Fighter Planes Attacked.

With the United States Forces in Central Luzon, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Field artillery officers of the United States Army told this story today of how Capt. Colin P. Kelly Jr. met his death after bombing and sinking the Japanese battleship Haruna:

Kelly was within two minutes of his home field, his big bomber sailing along prettily and getting ready to land, when two Japanese fighter planes dove through a bank of low-lying clouds, their cannon and machine guns spitting fire.

Kelly's plane staggered, righted itself and had gone another half-mile when flames suddenly broke out in the motors.

Five members of the crew bailed out and as they neared the ground the Japanese dove repeatedly to machine gun them, but without success.

With the plane shrouded in smoke and flame, Kelly pulled back the stick and got the nose straight in the air when the ship exploded in a blinding blast.

The explosion blew Lieut. Robbins from the plane. He snapped his parachute open and landed burned but in a fighting mood. Kelly died in the explosion.

Said the artillerymen: "The Lord had Robbins by the hand and pulled him out of that plane."

JAPS CLAIM SINKING OF 10 U. S. SHIPS

Eight More Damaged by Submarines, Tokyo Says

TOKYO, Dec. 29—(Official broadcast recorded by AP)—The Japanese high command today announced the capture of Ipoh, Malayan tin mining centre 200 miles north of Singapore, and Kuching, capital of Sarawak on the Island of Borneo, about 475 miles across the South China Sea, east of Singapore.

TEN U. S. SHIPS SUNK

Imperial headquarters also asserted that 10 American ships totalling 70,000 tons have been sunk by Japanese submarines off Hawaii and the United States mainland up to Dec. 25, while eight others totalling another 70,000 tons were damaged.

The situation on Japan's multiple fronts as claimed in a series of communiques broadcast by the news agency Domei:

Philippines—Heavy air raids on Manila's docks and harbor objectives, on the nearby U. S. naval base of Cavite. Intensive fighting raged on all ground fronts in Luzon, with the Japanese less than 100 miles from Manila in the drive southward from Lingayen Gulf.

Malaya—Japanese troops are "pushing southward" in pursuit of the "retreating British," after capturing Ipoh, whose fall "opens to the Japanese advance for the first time modern roads and methods of transportation for a power drive toward Singapore."

Claim Oil Gained

Borneo—Kuching fell after a four-day assault and the Japanese thereby gained "oil and other precious natural resources, while the British lost important air bases." The Japanese navy, operating off shore, downed 10 planes and destroyed two submarines; while losing one destroyer and one minesweeper.

China—Japanese troops crossing swollen Milo River occupied four key points in northeastern Hunan Province, including Kweiyi, "about 50 miles north of Changsha, provincial capital. Japanese planes successfully raided Chinese bases in western Anhwei Province. In northwestern Kiangsi Province, Japanese land forces continued to gain ground against China's new 12th Division along Chin River, while other units operating farther north in a snowstorm captured a point 15 miles west of Wuning.

Meanwhile Masayuki Tani, head of the government information bureau, said that negotiations were under way at Kuibyshev, Russia, for an extension of Japan's fishing rights in Russian coastal waters. The agreement expires Dec. 31.

Premier General Hideki Tojo will fly tomorrow to the grand shrines of Ise, 250 miles southwest of Tokyo, to report to the sun goddess, Amaterasu O Mi Kami, on the outbreak of the East Asia war and to pray for victory.

tured by the Japanese yesterday after a four-day assault, a joint army-navy communique announced at the same time.

Admit Destroyer Lost

It said Japanese naval forces sank two submarines and shot down ten large-type aircraft in waters off the Borneo north coast and admitted that on Japanese destroyer and one mine sweeper were lost.

(The navy section of Japanese imperial headquarters declared today in an official broadcast that up to Christmas Day Japanese submarines raiding American commerce off Hawaii and the North American mainland had sunk ten ships totaling 70,000 tons, crippled three others totaling 30,000 tons and damaged another five totaling 40,000 tons.)

The army communique said Japanese units were pushing southward from Ipoh "in pursuit of the retreating British."

Ipoh, it continued, is of considerable strategic value as one of the major stations on the west coast railway system connecting Prai, on the mainland opposite Penang, with Singapore.

"The fall of Ipoh opens to the Japanese advance for the first time modern roads and methods of transportation for a power drive toward Singapore," the communique said.

Jap Infantrymen Called 'Distinctly Fourth-Raters'

By CLARK LEE, Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

With the USAFFE in Central Luzon, Dec. 29—In the opinion of one hard-bitten United States cavalry colonel whose regiment has seen some sharp fighting in northern Luzon, the Japanese troops invading the Philippines are distinctly fourth-raters—and that, he says, is a charitable estimate.

"They're no damned good on the ground," the colonel declared contemptuously. "We licked the pants off them three times and were beaten only by their tanks and planes.

"When our tanks and planes go into action we'll chase them back to the sea.

Japanese Claim Ipoh, Kuching

JAPS DISCUSS REDS

Call Them Friends in Telling of Fishery Parley.

Tokio, Dec. 29 (Official broadcast recorded by A. P.).—Masayuki Tani, head of the Government Information Bureau, told a press conference today that negotiations between Japan and the Soviet Union concerning extension of their fisheries agreement, which expires December 31, were continuing at Kuibyshev.

Tani asserted that Japan's relations with Russia continued to be perfectly friendly and that Japan was quite satisfied with them. Relations with Moscow were regulated by the terms of the Japanese-Russian neutrality pact signed at Moscow last April 13, he said.

The fisheries agreement, dating back to 1905, gives Japan the right to fish in certain Russian coastal waters. Authorities on the Far East have expressed the belief that the question of its renewal might provide a test of Russia's stand in regard to the Pacific war.

Tojo To Tell The Goddess

Tokyo, Dec. 29 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Premier General Hideki Tojo will fly tomorrow to the Grand Shrines of Ise, 270 miles southwest of Tokyo, to report to the sun goddess, Amaterasu O Mi Kami, the outbreak of the "greater East Asia war" and to pray for ultimate victory, said an official announcement today.

He is expected to return to Tokyo at noon December 31.

(Amaterasu is the principal diety of the Japanese pantheon, "the divine ancestress of the race" and of the imperial house. All major developments are reported to her by high officials making ceremonial visits to her shrines at Ise.)

INVADERS PUSH SOUTH OF IPOH, ON WEST COAST

DEC 30 1941

Complementary Drive On East Side, However, Is Reported Checked

British Admit Fall Of Kuching, Capital Of Sarawak

By C. YATES McDANIEL

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 29—The British defenders of Singapore's approaches fought back strongly today against a Japanese penetration south of Ipoh, tin and communications center in western Malaya, but the invaders' complementary drive along the east coast apparently made no progress.

The fall of Kuching, capital of British-protected Sarawak on the island of Borneo, where the Japanese seek a lodgement in such force as to threaten British-American communication with the allied Dutch East Indies, meantime was conceded. Kuching lies 475 miles due east of Singapore.

Fighting Heavy In Perak

As to the Malayan peninsula itself, the heaviest fighting was in progress in Perak state (presumably in the coastal areas above the Perak river) to the south of Ipoh, which itself is 290 miles north of Singapore and just at the edge of the harsh mountain range which flanks the western coastal plain.

Here, said the British headquarters communique, "our forces are in close contact with the enemy."

Elsewhere in Malaya, it was added, the situation was unchanged. Enemy air attacks on British east coast positions about Kuantan were reported, but caused neither damage nor casualties.

RAF In Heavy Action

At the same time, the Royal Air Force was in heavy action against the Japanese operational bases to the north. Hard hit was the Japanese air base at Sungei Patani, up the west coast from Ipoh, where British bombs left fires and explosions. This was on Sunday night; a previous attack on Saturday night was shown by reconnaisance to have smashed seven Japanese fighter planes and three heavy bombers and to have badly damaged five other enemy fighters.

Headquarters' only reference to Medan in Dutch Sumatra was a report that enemy planes had raided the town, along with Port Swettenham in Malaya, and that only slight damage was done.

Plane Shot Down

In these forays the invader lost one plane shot down and another damaged. Medan lies across the Malacca strait from Penang, Japanese-captured British base off western Malaya.

[As to Ipoh, the British radio pointed out that the announcement of fighting south of Ipoh did not necessarily mean that the town itself had been lost, since it might have been by-passed. The same source quoted a Batavia communique as stating that reports of Japanese parachute landings on Medan were based on a misunderstanding resulting from the official confirmation of the Japanese air raid on the town.]

40-For-One Losses On Japs

A special Reuters correspondent on the northern Malayan front describes the fighting there as unending savage hand-to-hand clashes night and day through the semi-darkness of the rubber country, with the British sometimes inflicting 40-for-1 losses upon the Japanese.

There is no recognizable static front, he wrote, but rather the line wavers fluidly as the Japanese try to infiltrate with tactics generally based on individual effort.

"Small parties are told to reach objectives at all costs," the correspondent related. "Sometimes disguised as Malays, the tommy-gun carrying Japanese use all sorts of tricks to deceive the British."

A favorite trick of the invaders, he said, is to climb rubber trees to drop grenades on the defending forces.

Nippon Forces Sweep Past Tin Center

DEC 30 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 29—The British acknowledged today that Japanese troops had swept south of Ipoh, Malay, tin-mining city and communications center 290 miles north of Singapore, and announced the fall of Kuching, capital of Sarawak on the island of Borneo.

A headquarters communique said the British on the Perak front in Malaya are "in close contact with the enemy south of Ipoh," but gave no further information.

(The British radio in London said the announcement of fighting south of Ipoh "does not necessarily mean that Ipoh has been lost." The broadcast was heard by CBS.)

The Swiss radio, quoting a Bangkok report, said Japanese troops crossed the Perak River after heavy fighting and, after capturing Ipoh, now were advancing southward.

SHIP-A-DAY SINKING RESUMED BY DUTCH

Bombers Score Direct Hit On Japanese Transport Off Sarawak

Batavia Indicates Invaders Failed To Land 'Chutists On Sumatra

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, Dec. 29—The Dutch army air force has resumed the Indies' interrupted one-a-day toll of Japanese shipping by scoring a direct hit on a transport off the harbor of Miri in Sarawak, it was announced today.

Aneta news agency, which released the communique, said it had no confirmation of Manila radio reports that twelve more Japanese troopships had been sunk by Dutch planes off Davao in the Philippines. But the communique did credit the squadron of American-built Martin bombers which raided Miri with shooting down "probably" two Japanese fighter planes.

'Chutist Report Minimized

Though the communique gave a detailed account of the Japanese attack on the airport at Medan on Sumatra yesterday, in which thirty persons were killed, seventy wounded and the airdrome was damaged, there was no further official word on the Japanese parachute troops which were reported to have been landed simultaneously within ten miles of Medan.

Observers saw this official silence as an indication the Japanese, in their first effort to effect a landing on Indies territory, had not been able to do so in sufficient force to constitute a serious threat.

[Quoting a Batavia communique as its authority, BBC announced that "the reports of a Japanese parachute landing on Medan in Sumatra are based on a misunderstanding from the Japanese air raid on this town."]

Pamphlets Dropped

It was learned, however, that the Japanese had followed up the Sumatra attack by dropping leaflets over the northern part of the island. Crudely lettered in English and Malayan, they were said to be similar to those dropped on Singapore on Christmas Day and read:

"Stand up hand in hand with one accord. Burn to death the white devils with the blazing, sacred fire of victory."

Today's communique spoke of only scattered activity in the other parts of the archipelago. It confirmed the firing of a Japanese cruiser north of Celebes by Australian warplanes stationed on an Indies airdrome, which first was reported yesterday, and said Japanese bombing and machine-gun attacks at "various places in the outer provinces" caused no military losses.

Meanwhile, the Soerabaya Handelsblad, a leading Japanese newspaper, urged the Netherlands government-in-exile in London to release Dutch naval units now in European waters for duty in the Indies in order to "assist the navy here in carrying out its offensive purposes."

Tokyo Claims City

The Tokyo radio broadcast an army announcement saying Ipoh had been in Japanese hands since about noon Sunday.

Elsewhere in Malaya the situation remained unchanged, it was said.

On the east coast, at Kuantan, Japanese aircraft bombed and machine-gunned British positions but no damage or casualties were reported.

DEC 30 1941

Sarawak Beaten On

Fighting in the Ipoh area blazed up yesterday when the British land units, backed by artillery, beat off the Japanese at Chemor, a railroad point about twelve miles north of Ipoh, and beat off Japanese patrols at a strategic ferry crossing over the Perak river, which runs besides the British positions along the Malayan north-south railroad about fifteen miles southwest of Ipoh.

(The action reported today apparently was in the area southwest of the Malayan city, where fighting has been in progress now for two days.)

Kuching Captured

The British headquarters here said reports regarding Sarawak confirmed the Japanese capture of Kuching, capital of that part of the Borneo Island and 475 miles due east of Singapore.

The communique said that medium bombers of the RAF made another attack on the airdrome at Sungei Patoni, near Penang and nearly one hundred miles north of Ipoh, causing a number of fires and explosions.

Destruction Confirmed

It said that reconnaissances confirmed that British bombers in an attack on that same target Saturday night destroyed seven fighters and three heavy bombers and badly damaged five other Japanese fighters.

The Japanese raided Medan, Sumatra, and Port Swettenham, Malaya, yesterday, the communique added. Slight damage was reported.

There was a raid this morning on Kluang airdrome, it said.

Netherlands Flyers Bomb Transport in Attack Near Miri.

12 SHIPS REPORTED SUNK

Batavia Not Able to Confirm Action by Other Dutch Airmen Near Davao.

Batavia, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Dutch pilots flying American Glenn Martin bombers scored a direct hit on a big Japanese transport and probably downed two protecting fighters in an attack on Miri, Sarawak, and Australian pilots manning American Hudson bombers set fire to a Japanese cruiser steaming north of Celebes, a N. E. I. communique announced today.

This official announcement confirmed previous reports of the hit on the cruiser, which was in a convoy attacked by Australian pilots operating from a Dutch East Indies airdrome.

A special communique declared that bombers of the Indies army air force had attacked a Japanese convoy. No further details were available.

The fact that the communiques made no reference to yesterday's landing of Japanese parachute troops near Medan, on the island of Sumatra, led observers here to believe the invaders had been unable to make much headway in their first attempt to win a foothold on Indies territory.

[BBC, in a broadcast heard in New York by NBC, quoted a Batavia communique as authority for the statement that "the reports of a Japanese parachute landing in Medan on Sumatra are based on a misunderstanding from the Japanese air raid on this town."]

The communiques did, however, raise the toll of a simultaneous Japanese air attack on the Medan airport. "At present," it said, "casualties are reported to amount to 30 dead and 70 injured. Further particulars are awaited." First accounts had fixed the casualty list at 20 killed and 40 wounded.

It was learned on good authority that the Japanese had followed up their attack on Sumatra by dropping leaflets over the northern part of the island warning the population to cease resistance.

The raid on Medan apparently was intended to distract Dutch attention from the parachute troops

30.24—13819

A direct hit was scored on the office of the K. N. I. L. M.—the Royal Netherlands Indies airline.

The action around Medan was part of a series of week-end blows by and against the Japanese.

A Sunday daylight raid on Sorong on the north coast of New Guinea caused the death of one person and the wounding of others, Aneta news agency said.

Homes, shops and office buildings were demolished. Many fires were set.

A brief communique reported two other Japanese air assaults on outlying Dutch islands.

A number of anchored naval aircraft were reported attacked on one. Some damage was caused but particulars were not available.

During the other raid, in an eastern region of the archipelago, the communique said a Dutch merchant vessel was machine-gunned by Japanese aircraft. One person was killed and three persons were wounded. Damage to the ship was slight.

Meanwhile, an official warning was issued against Japanese trickery.

The Netherlands East Indies population was told not to run out after propaganda leaflets dropped from Japanese aircraft because the Japanese often scatter such leaflets to lure people from shelters and spray them with bullets from fighter planes.

An official announcement said 128 persons were killed during the Japanese air attack on the city of Pontianak, in Dutch West Borneo, on December 19.

No conformation could be obtained here of reports broadcast from Manila that Dutch planes had sunk twelve more Japanese transports off Davao, in the Philippines.

Naval Reinforcement Urged.

Aneta reported that the Soerabaya Handelsblad, one of the leading Javanese newspapers, has urged that the Netherlands government-in-exile in London transfer Dutch naval units from European waters to the Indies.

"As long as things had not started moving in the Pacific," said the Handelsblad, "it was a good thing that the Netherlands naval forces tried to jump on the enemy anywhere they could find him in European waters.

"Now things are different and it would be an act of wise naval policy if the relatively valuable naval forces which are at Netherlands disposal in European waters would be sent to the Netherlands Indies to assist the navy here in carrying out its offensive purposes."

Minesweeper, Destroyers Lost, Japanese Admit

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Dec. 29 (AP).—The Tokio radio today broadcast an announcement by the navy section of the Japanese imperial headquarters conceding the loss of one minesweeper and two destroyers in operations off British Borneo. The broadcast was heard by N. B. C.

Jap Spearhead Drives To Within 40 Miles Of Key China City

Civilians Reported Fleeing Changsha; Fresh Troops Bolster Enemy

DEC 30 1941

By the Associated Press

CHUNGKING, Dec. 29.—The main spearhead of a broad Japanese offensive in Central China was reported in Chinese front dispatches today to have pierced to within 40 miles north of Changsha, capital of Hunan Province, and now for the third time the objective of a major Japanese drive.

Civilians were fleeing the city as the Japanese, reinforced by several thousand fresh troops, drew near, after forcing a crossing of the Milo River under a heavy artillery barrage, the dispatches said.

It was not known whether a small American community, composed mostly of missionaries, had withdrawn. Valuable American property in Changsha includes the Yale-in-China University, a hospital and a medical school.

First Attempt in 1939.

The Japanese first tried to seize Changsha in 1939, but were beaten back short of their goal. Last summer they captured and held it for three days before withdrawing to bases farther north, declaring the purposes of their thrust had been achieved.

A Chinese communique issued here, however, indicated the Chinese were holding the broad Japanese offensive on most of the sectors, which stretch across parts of four provinces.

The Chinese Army newspaper, Saotangpao, said the battle above Changsha was not merely a part of the China war, but also a vital phase of the World War.

The Japanese offensive, the paper said, is intended, firstly, to split the Chinese forces along the Hankow-Canton railway in order to lessen Chinese pressure on Kowloon, the mainland part of fallen Hongkong, and to prevent Chinese troops in Hunan, Kwangsi and Kwangtung provinces from reinforcing their Allies in Burma Malaya. Secondly, it is to test the strength of Chinese forces which may be available "under the new strategy of the Allied powers."

The army paper said that the Japanese command fears a Chinese offensive on all fronts, and that the Hunan drive actually is a defensive move intended to ward this off.

It said the Chinese were resisting "along the entire Northern Hunan (Province) front," around Kweiyi on the Yellow River in Honan in the Nanchang area of Northern Kiangsi Province, at Wuning, 75 miles northwest of Nanchang, and on the Southern Anhwei Province front.

Strong Japanese forces appeared on the south bank of the Yellow River near Kweiyi Saturday afternoon, the communique said, and by midnight 6,000 Japanese were locked with defending Chinese in a battle which was costing both sides heavily.

By Sunday morning, the Japanese advance south had been stopped, the communique said, and the Chinese were counterattacking furiously all along the line.

The Japanese left flank on the North Kiangsi front was particularly punished, the Chinese said, in a pitched battle in the Nanchang area, while about 4,000 Japanese were being fought on the outskirts of Hawan, south of Nanchang, which they penetrated Saturday afternoon.

At Wuning, 75 miles northwest of Nanchang the Japanese were checked after several days of hard fighting, the Chinese said.

In Southern Anhwei Province the Chinese drove attacking Japanese back to their starting positions at one highway town, it was said, and Chinese surrounded one Japanese detachment of undisclosed strength.

Australia Plans Hike In Plane Production

DEC 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 29—The Australian War Cabinet is completing a plan for a tremendous expansion of the commonwealth's aircraft production effort which will revolutionize the aircraft industry, it was announced here today.

The plan is expected to take final shape in a War Cabinet session tomorrow. It calls for consolidation of the operations of all aircraft producing agencies, including the Commonwealth Aircraft Corporation and the Aircraft Production Commission.

Should Merit Aid

Premier John Curtin declared he was determined that Australia should merit the powerful assistance of her friends in the Pacific by making a powerful effort to help herself.

Curtin, replying to critics of his "look to America" statement, declared today that his sole purpose was to "preserve Australia as a part of the British commonwealth."

Curtin asserted that critics had misinterpreted an article he wrote Saturday for the Melbourne Herald in which, discussing Australia's viewpoint on the war, he said:

"I make it clear that Australia looks to America, free from any pangs, about our traditional links of friendship to Britain."

Faces Own Problems

Replying to a statement by Deputy Opposition Leader W. M. Hughes that his article meant Australia should look for aid to America and Russia rather than Britain, Curtin said:

"It doesn't mean what Mr. Hughes says. Australia, as an integral part of the empire, is facing strategical problems of its own defense with sheer realism.

"It is useless to imagine that without a definite plan and without cohesion between the United States, Russia, China, the Netherlands, Britain and Australia in relation to problems in the Pacific, the dangers facing Australia can be averted.

View Termed Deplorable

"I am sure Mr. Hughes acknowledges that the preservation of Australia is vital."

The Sydney Herald, meanwhile, described Cutrin's Saturday statement as "deplorable and damaging to Australia's reputation."

The Sydney Telegraph, on the other hand, applauded Curtin's attitude as realistic.

Curtin Is Criticized For Remark On Britain

Former Australian Premier Accuses Incumbent One Of Failing To Recognize Ties To London

Sydney, Tuesday, Dec. 30 (AP)—Former Prime Minister Robert Menzies said today that Prime Minister John Curtin is making "a grave blunder" if he thinks the ties between Australia and Great Britain are merely traditional.

DEC 30 1941

Commenting on a statement by Curtin that Australia is dependent on the United States, Menzies said, "If the people of the United Kingdom were our only colleagues in the war, we would fight by their side to the end. The ties between Australia and Britain are real and indissoluable."

NASH FIRST ENVOY OF NEW ZEALAND

DEC 30 1941

New Minister Here Former Labor Party Head.

Auckland, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—With the approval of King George VI and President Roosevelt, Walter Nash, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, has been appointed New Zealand's first Minister to Washington.

Wellington, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Peter Fraser, stressing the United States' importance in the battle of the Pacific, suggested today that perhaps New Zealand could interpret Britain to the United States better than Britain could interpret itself.

Commenting on the appointment of Walter Nash, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, as his country's first Minister to Washington. Fraser said:

"The imperative need of English-speaking peoples to completely pool their resources in order to insure victory in the Pacific as well as in the Atlantic has never been greater.

"It has never been more necessary for the United States to have a complete understanding of the viewpoint of British Dominions in the Pacific. It might be that New Zealand, through its Minister in Washington, can help interpret Britain to the United States better than Britain could interpret itself."

DASH

A former president of the New Zealand Labor party, Mr. Nash was named to Prime Minister Peter Fraser's war cabinet last year and lately has been Acting Prime Minister. He has served as Minister of Finance, Customs and Marketing since 1935, and has been a member of the New Zealand Parliament since 1929.

A native of England, where he was born on February 12, 1882, he settled in New Zealand in 1909.

Captive Indians Escape Foe With Valuable Data

New Delhi, India, Dec. 29 (AP)—Five British imperial Indian soldiers escaped from ther Japanese captors with the aid of a Malay Moslem's boat, crossed the Perak river under heavy fire, and reached their lines with valuable information, a dispatch from the front said today.

The same story told how five weary British officers worked their way through the Japanese lines after having been cut off.

War Declaration

Wellington, New Zealand, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Government of New Zealand announced today it had declared war on Bulgaria as of December 13.

WAR MOVE SEEN BY INDIA CONGRESS

Group May Overrule Gandhi, Approach Cooperation With Britain

Powerful Faction Favors Action—Decision Soon Is Forecast

DEC 30 1941

By WEM HANCOCK

[By the Associated Press]

New Delhi, India, Dec. 29—Political leaders viewed as extremely important tonight reports from Bardoli indicating the All-India Congress is about to overrule the policies of Mohandas K. Gandhi in favor of an approach toward war cooperation with Britain.

A protracted deadlock in the sessions of the Congress working committee showed clearly that a powerful perhaps dominant, section favors abandonment of the Gandhi-espoused policy of non-cooperation and non-violence, now that the war is at India's very borders.

Gandhi himself is holding unswervingly to his principles, but may withdraw from the party's leadership, should it decide against him. The Congress, however, would have the benefit of his counsel.

Early Developments Seen

The next few weeks likely will bring the most important political developments since the Congress withdrew from office following the outbreak of war in 1939.

There were indications it would offer to form a coalition national government for the duration, although undoubtedly an effort would first be made to secure a fresh London statement about India's future.

In this connection, there is considerable speculation about the United States' attitude toward India, now that she is an ally, and whether India's position was discussed at the Roosevelt-Churchill conference.

Chinese Admiral And 82 Britons Flee Hongkong

Escape Of Party In Five Motor Launches Disclosed By Chungking Radio

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—A Chungking broadcast heard here tonight said Chinese Admiral Chang and eighty-two prominent Britons escaped from Hongkong in five motor launches on the day of that colony's capitulation.

It said the Japanese intercepted the party but were beaten off, one launch being sunk.

Among the Britons were listed a Commander and a Lieutenant Commander of the Royal Navy, and RAF Squadron Leader, two Majors and two Captains of the army.

Navy in Terse Log Describes Valiant Wake Island Defense

DEC 30 1941

Traces Story to Demolition of Last Plane and House Until Severely Penalized Japs Invaded Helpless Atoll.

Honolulu, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Dispatches sent while death rained from sky and sea on virtually shelterless Wake Island sketched tersely today how less than 400 Marines, with only four planes aloft, held off numerically superior Japanese for fourteen days, bagging twelve aircraft and five ships before being overpowered.

"Probably no military force in American history, not even the defenders of the Alamo, ever fought against greater odds nor with greater effect in view of those odds," acclaimed the navy in summarizing the reports for the first time.

Nor did those tough marines once admit defeat.

"The issue is in doubt," read the last dispatch sent on December 22.

Attack after attack was hurled back. Beset by 200 planes during those fourteen days, the little garrison, knowing there could be no re-enforcements from Hawaii 2,500 miles away, loosed such deadly fire that the Japanese had to abandon low-flying assaults for a time.

Navy Reveals the Log.

The navy's account, pieced from the dispatches, laid bare a gripping struggle:

December 8—Between twenty and thirty twin-engined bombers in the opening attack caught eight of the garrison's twelve planes on the ground, put the eight out of action and killed twenty-five of the marines.

December 9—There were two more raids by planes which also carried incendiaries, but due to vigorous plane and anti-aircraft defenses, damage was less severe than on December 8.

December 10—There was a fourth air raid at dawn, while for the first time enemy warships "started pumping shells onto the flat, virtually shelterless atoll. . . . Nevertheless Wake's guns replied with such good effect to this double attack that a light cruiser and destroyer were sunk. The defenders also had the satisfaction of chalking up a total of six enemy planes destroyed to and including this third day of the battle."

"The effectiveness of the Wake shore batteries evidently impressed the enemy." Two transports, escorted by cruisers and destroyers, kept out of range and made no attempt to land while eighteen planes came over for the fifth air raid. Only sixteen departed. The marines still had three planes aloft.

December 11—A four-engined seaplane attacked. Marine flyers were ready for it and promptly shot it down. The convoy reappeared. Marine flyers damaged one vessel and sank a submarine.

December 12—The enemy did not appear.

December 13—By moonlight, four-engined bombers came over. Anti-aircraft fire discouraged them from dropping bombs.

Losses Keep Mounting.

December 14—Fifty bombers unloosed the heaviest air raid. Anti-aircraft and planes brought down three and damaged several others. The marines' three planes were reduced to one—but during the brief night hours they managed heroically to patch a second one together.

December 15—At night a ninth air raid caused no serious damage.

December 16—More than twenty-five bombers attacked.

December 17—They came back again. "By now practically every installation on the island was heavily damaged. The storehouse with spare parts and other material was gone, burned to the ground. The machine shop and blacksmith shop were wiped out."

December 19—There was no raid.

December 20—Dive bombers, evidently from a carrier, roared down on the dwindling group of marines.

December 21—The enemy withheld his hand.

December 22—Land-based and carrier-operated planes attacked in large force—how large was never reported. Wake's two planes gave battle. Several enemy planes were shot down, but one of the Wake pilots was lost and the second forced down, wounded. Wake's air defenses were lost. The enemy at long last landed in force. There came finally a message the navy praised as a big of understatement: "The issue is in doubt."

"The issue is in doubt," the dispatch related. That was the end. The last report said the enemy had gained a foothold and that more ships and a transport were moving in. Even in this final phase the Wake batteries blasted away with great effect.

"The last phrase of the last dispatch was the statement that two of the enemy destroyers had been disabled. In all, the Wake garrison shot down at least a dozen enemy planes and took a toll of at least five enemy warships—three destroyers, a cruiser and a submarine.

14 STILL MISSING IN 2 TORPEDOINGS

Rest Of 65 Men Aboard Two Freighters That Sank Have Been Saved

DEC 30 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Honolulu, Dec. 29—All but fourteen of the sixty-five men aboard two American freighters torpedoed and sunk in the Pacific December 17 were accounted for today with the announcement by naval district headquarters at San Francisco that another boatload of nineteen has been rescued. No other details were given.

The nineteen were from the freighter Manini, which had thirty-three on board. Twelve others of the Manini crew were picked up Saturday in a lifeboat which had been adrift for nine days after the submarine attack. That left only two missing crewmen.

Torpedo Killed Nine

Of thirty-four men aboard the other freighter, the Prusa, nine were killed b. the torpedo which sank it, thirteen were picked up Saturday from a lifeboat, which also had tossed about for nine days, and the other twelve are unaccounted for.

Survivors in two lifeboats picked up Saturday were brought to Honolulu.

Survivors from the Prusa are Levi Plesner, first mate; Henry Hunter, first assistant mate; August Huber, third assistant engineer, and Samuel Bartholomew, Pedro Perez, Joseph Cannon, James D. Clark, Alfred Dyer, Adneris Martinez, John Campbell, Jerry Hammell, Estrada Enrique and George Thompson, all crew members.

Prusa's Captain Missing

The missing from the Prusa, 7,000-ton vessel operated by the Lykes Brothers Lines, included Capt. G. H. Boy. Hope still was held out for their safety. Survivors said they saw the captain and eleven others in a lifeboat immediately following the torpedoing.

The Manini, a 6,000-ton ship, was operated by the Matson Navigation Company. She left Honolulu December 16 for an undisclosed destination and apparently was in the same general location as the Prusa when attacked by an enemy submarine.

Survivors From Freighter Manini Are Picked Up in Lifeboat.

25 OTHERS REACH HAWAII

Two New Yorkers Were Standing Watch When Prusa Was Struck by Torpedo.

San Francisco, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Nineteen more survivors of the torpedoed freighter Manini, sunk on December 17, were picked up today, the Twelfth Naval district announced. This accounts for all but two of the thirty-three men on the ship.

The navy disclosed no details of today's rescue, but said that all the rescued men were safe. Twelve men in two lifeboats were picked up on Saturday after nine perilous days on the Pacific Ocean.

The 5,000-ton Manini freighter was sunk at the same time as the 7,000-ton Prusa of the Lykes Brothers Lines. Thirteen of the Prusa's crew of thirty-four were saved.

The men rescued today were believed to have been in a single lifeboat, well-provisioned with fruit, fruit juices and sardines the day before an enemy submarine attacked the freighter. While they did not lack food, they had no protection in the open boat from the blistering sun or the cold nights.

The crew was largely from San Francisco, with a sprinkling of men from other Pacific coast ports.

U.S. Accuses Japanese Of 'Inhumanity'

DEC 30 1941

State Dept. Reply to Protest Cites Attempt to Cover 'Iniquities'; Staff at Manila Safe

Washington, Dec. 29—(AP.)—The United States accused Japan today of bombing the defenseless civilian population of Manila "ruthlessly, wantonly and with a complete lack of humanity," killing scores of civilians and wounding hundreds more.

The accusation was made by the State Department in replying to a charge by the Japanese that 10 of their nationals had been killed, presumably by American authorities, at Davao in the Philippines when the Japanese attacked the city.

The Tokyo protest was relayed through the Swiss legation. The State Department declared that the object of the Japanese was "to divert attention from their iniquities by making accusations against others."

Text of Statement.

The Department issued the following statement:

The Department of State has received through the Swiss legation, representing Japanese interests in the Philippines, a communication from the Japanese government in which it protests the alleged killing of 10 Japanese nationals at the time of the assault by the Japanese forces against Davao on the island of Mindanao.

This Government has not previously heard of the incident and has no reports whatsoever which would substantiate in the slightest degree the incident complained of by the Japanese government.

For days previous to the delivery of this note, the Japanese not only have been continuing their unprovoked aggression against Philippine Islands, but they have also ruthlessly, wantonly and with a complete lack of humanity bombed the defenseless civilian population of a declared open city, have killed scores of civilians and have wounded hundreds more.

Scores Recent Acts.

While the United States would not condone acts of any of its officials or of any persons under its authority which contravene the accepted rules of international law, and will always investigate complaints and take such proper steps as may be warranted under the facts, the record established by Japan over a number of years and in her recent activity in the Philippines clearly shows a wholly wanton disregard by Japan of international law and of principles of humanity and even of the elemental rules of decency designed to avoid needless injury to the defenseless civilian population.

Th objective of the Japanese in making this protest is clear; that is, to attempt to divert attention from their iniquities by making accusations against others.

Consulate Undamaged.

Washington, Dec. 29.—(AP.)—The American Consulate at Manila is "undamaged" and the entire diplomatic staff is "safe and well," the State Department announced tonight.

Utah Senator Says Big Nations Will Crush Japs

DEC 30 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 29—Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Dem., Utah), probably the only member of Congress who can speak and write Japanese, said today he was confident Japan "will be crushed" before the present war ends.

At the same time, Thomas, who spent seven years in Japan as a Mormon missionary, warned against underestimating the fighting power of the Far Eastern enemy.

Japan may score additional early victories and some further new surprises, Thomas said in an interview, "but she can't survive because she is surrounded by the bulkiest nations on earth—Russia, Canada, the United States, the Commonwealth States and Netherland areas."

Psychology Like Hitler's

The Senator, who lived with and taught the Japanese from 1907 to 1913, attributed the present bold attacks upon outposts of the United States and England to the "new rich class, the secret societies and the imperialists who got rich during the last war and got ideas."

He said this combination of powerful groups "have a psychology much like Hitler and Mussolini that if you strike hard enough and fast enough you can have your way."

Thomas said he was confident this country and her anti-Axis allies would be able to crush Japan eventually. He thought this would come when Allied bombers were in a position to pound Tokyo and Nippon's vital war industries, and the lone main railroad line between Tokyo and the port of Osaka.

Daughter Has Jap Name

"Japan is a good deal like France as a military force," Thomas said. "Everything in France was centered in Paris, so that when Paris fell France was done."

Thomas learned to read, converse and write in the difficult Japanese language as head of the Tokyo mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints. His daughter, who now works in his office, has a Japanese name, Chiyo Thomas. She was born in Tokyo.

After his missionary work, Thomas returned to this country as a university instructor and during the last war was a major in the Utah National Guard.

"Acted In Good Faith"

He was asked about the negotiations of Japanese diplomats here after military and naval leaders in Japan had decided to launch their surprise attacks on Hawaii and the Philippines.

"I'm certain that the diplomats here were acting in good faith," he said. "They knew what might happen at any moment, but they hoped to prevent it."

Nomura, Kurusu Among Japanese At Hot Springs

Reinebeck, 43 Other Nazi Diplomats Held at Ellis Island

Hot Springs, Va., Dec. 29.—(AP.)—About 80 Japanese from the embassy at Washington, headed by Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura and Special Envoy Saburo Kurusu, arrived here today on a special train in charge of State Department officials.

Agents with the party said the trip and arrival were made without incident. Other groups from Japanese consulates in the United States are expected to join the party here.

The Homestead Hotel, where the diplomatic party is quartered pending arrangements for an exchange of the Japanese and American diplomats now in Japan, is closed to the public and no other guests are registered, a State Department spokesman said.

German Embassy officials and other nationals are quartered at another nearby resort, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

New York, Dec. 29.—(AP.)—Dr. Otto Reinebeck, German minister to Central American republics, and 43 other Nazi diplomatic officials were in custody at Ellis Island today following their seizure aboard an American ship arriving from Central America.

Officials said the group would be transferred to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where other Axis nationals enjoying diplomatic status are being kept until their exchange for Americans in Axis countries.

Dr. Reinebeck's activities in Central America aroused widespread press criticism in Costa Rica in July, 1940, when he warned the country not to participate in the Havana Conference on Pan-American solidarity.

White Sulphur Spa Housing Axis Nationals, Acts "For Time Being"

Greenbrier Management Says Move Was Requested By State Department

[By the Associated Press]

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec. 29—The Greenbrier Hotel and cottages have been closed for the "time being" to the public, it was disclosed today.

The famous Eastern spa has been the home for two weeks of about 150 German and Italian nationals, members of diplomatic staffs and their families, and more are en route.

Capital Request

George O'Brien, assistant manager of the hotel, said the closing "was requested by the State Department in Washington, and this we gladly do in a spirit of cooperation."

The closing will be of short duration, O'Brien indicated in saying that "we expect that in another four or five weeks the State Department will have completed plans for moving internees to other sections of the country."

Among those expected to arrive here this week are Dr. Otto Reinebeck, German Minister to Central American Republics, and forty-three other Nazi diplomatic officials. They are at present in custody at Ellis Island after their seizure aboard an American ship arriving from Central America.

Jap Propaganda: San Francisco Declared Afire

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 29.—The Navy, disclosing that Japanese broke in on an American short-wave broadcast to the Philippines with false reports of a bombing attack on San Francisco, asked radio listeners today to be watchful for such enemy activities.

An announcement by the Navy said listeners in Manila were astonished Sunday morning when the regular broadcast from San Francisco's Station KGEI was interrupted by announcements that Japanese planes had bombed San Francisco, leaving much of the city in flames.

Naval intelligence officers at Manila reported that KGEI's regular early morning war broadcast was cut into three or four times. Each time an English-speaking announcer read a "flash" giving details of the "San Francisco disaster."

"The interference," said the Navy, "obviously came from a powerful Japanese station deliberately intruding on the KGEI wave length."

Actually San Francisco spent a quiet night during the period it was reported to have been attacked.

Coast Aliens Turn In Cameras, Radios

DEC 30 1941

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 29 (AP)—Up and down the Pacific Coast Germans, Italian and Japanese nationals are turning in cameras and radios capable of receiving short-wave broadcasts.

In Alameda, Cal., a German surrendered seventeen cameras to police; at San Francisco a Japanese divested himself of four cameras, a German surrendered a camera and a German-made short-wave receiving set; Los Angeles Japanese insisted upon turning in firearms.

In Seattle police were so flooded with the items they were forced to move to larger quarters, but in outlying Tacoma, Puyallup and other smaller cities officers reported a bare trickle, although an increase is expected as tonight's 11 P. M. dead line approaches.

Yarnell for Equal Quota Privileges

Says We Should Be Impartial With All Nations

DEC 30 1941

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP)—Rear Admiral H. E. Yarnell, U. S. N., retired, addressing delegates to the joint meeting of the American Political Science Association and the American Society for Public Administration in a discussion of post-war problems today, declared that the United States should no longer exclude Asiatics, but should grant them the same quota privileges as other nationalities.

"Perhaps the most difficult problem is that of surplus population," he said. "Suitable areas are becoming less suitable in desirability and extent. Japan's population increases annually by hundreds of thousands, yet migration into Manchukuo is of small amount on account of the inhospitable climate.

"There are only 700,000 Japanese in Manchukuo after 10 years occupation. China, if taken over, offers no relief as it is already overcrowded."

TYDINGS ENVISIONS JAPS DRIVEN FROM ISLANDS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP)—Senator Tydings (D-Md), chairman of the Senate territories committee, expressed the conviction today that current attacks on the Philippine Islands were "but the opening chapter of Filipino hostilities" and that the final chapter would tell of every Japanese invader being driven from the islands.

He made the assertion in a statement prepared for a broadcast to the islands.

"The United States Government and all citizens of the United States," he said, "are watching with keen pride and deep admiration the valiant, gallant and resolute resistance of the combined American-Filipino armies under General MacArthur and of the Filipino people against the savage and lawless Jap invaders."

He told the residents of the islands that "we shall continue our covenant of friendship, helpfulness and support until our every promise to the Filipino people has been fulfilled. In view of their courageous resistance we could do no less."

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—To Gov. Joseph B. Poindexter's request that Hawaii be permitted to postpone the President's birthday ball in Honolulu because of the war situation, Keith Morgan, committee chairman, replied:

"Yanks soon be there avenge Pearl Harbor. Your spirit magnificent. Carry on. Hold President's celebration whenever possible. Suggest it connection first big victory."

1,600 Missionaries In Far East From U. S.

Conference Is Told Of Number In War Areas, Including Philippines And China

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—More than 1,600 United States missionaries are in war areas in the Far East, the Committee on East Asia of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America reported today.

Joe J. Mickle, secretary of the committee, said the best available information placed these missionaries as follows: Japan, 82; Korea, 29; penetrated China, 862; Indo-China, 56; Thailand, 83; British Malaya, 69; Netherlands East Indies, 59; Philippine Islands, 424, and 47 en route either to or from the United States.

In addition, he said, there are more than 2,000 missionaries scattered throughout Free China; 300 in Burma; and a few in Oceania who may become involved.

Wife Watches As Japs Down Husband's Plane

Lieutenant At Pearl Harbor Lands In Ocean, Swims Ashore, Gets New Plane, Rejoins Fight

Belleville, N. J., Dec. 29 (AP)—The wife of Lieut. George R. Bickell, of Nutley, told today how she saw her husband shot down uninjured and take off again in another airplane to fight the Japanese raiders who struck at Pearl Harbor in the dawn of December 7.

Mrs. Bickell said her husband, flight commander of a pursuit squadron, was attacked as his plane and two others were taking off from an auxiliary airfield.

The pilots of the two other craft were killed and Bickell's plane crashed into the sea 200 yards off shore. The Nutley flyer swam ashore and took another plane to join the fight against the air invaders.

Berlin Comments

Berlin, Dec. 29 (Official broadcast recorded by A. P.).—The German radio said today the Washington and Moscow conferences "will hardly be regarded by the world as signs of British sense but are more likely to be viewed as signs of the weakness of a whining, aged and blind lion."

REDS SMASH NEW GERMAN DEFENSE LINE

MOSCOW, Dec. 29 (AP) — The westward rolling Soviet offensive smashed German attempts to hold new defense lines on several sectors of the front today and the uninterrupted Red Army advance reoccupied a number of additional villages, the Russians announced tonight.

DEC 30 1941

"The enemy is suffering heavy losses," added the Soviet Information bureau's late night communique.

In a new burst of aerial activity, the official announcement said, 26 German planes were destroyed yesterday against only six Russian losses.

HAIL NEW ACCORD

While battle line correspondents told of still other successes in every one of the main fighting sectors, the Russian press hailed the Soviet-British accord on Anti-Axis strategy and declared the bonds of the two nations have been "strengthend by the flames of war."

Izvestia, the government newspaper, declared there was no doubt the peoples of both Britain and Russia would receive with great satisfaction the announcement that as a result of the visit of British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden to the Kremlin the two countries are in agreement on policies of defeating Hitler and preventing a repetition of German aggression.

HITLER MAIN ENEMY

The paper stressed the view that Hitler is the main enemy, and that the anti-Hitler coalition "now joined also by the United States with its tremendous resources," would need to exert all its efforts to beat him and his allies.

War reports broadcast on the radio declared Moscow and Tula, 100 miles south, have now been freed of immediate danger as a result of crushing defeats administered to the Germans on both Moscow flanks.

The Nazis wedge at Mozhaisk, 57 miles directly west of the capital, is now threatened as a result of Soviet gains to the north and south, it was said. The reports said the Germans were beginning to withdraw from areas around Mozhaisk and Maloyaroslavets, 65 miles southwest of the capital.

NAZI ATTACK REPULSED

On the Kalinin front, northwest of Moscow, a new Russian success was said to have resulted in capture of headquarters of a German infantry regiment. The German troops, surprised at night, rushed into the snow wearing only their nightclothes and were mowed down, said the Soviet Information bureau.

An Izvestia correspondent said a picked German division, "crammed with officers" made desperate counterattacks on the Leningrad front but was repulsed without gaining a yard and lost 1,500 men.

The newspaper Pravda reported from the southern front that Italian divisions encountered there put up a sorry appearance, although the Celare Division had offered brave resistance before being ejected from one position.

Large groups of Italians, led by their own officers, often surrender in units, with their weapons in working order, the paper said. Many of them are without overcoats to protect them from the blizzards, and have wound themselves in blankets and shawls, it added.

Eight hundred Italians were killed in one action and nearly two battalions annihilated in another, it was reported, and 106 Russian villages were recovered by the Red Army in six days.

RUSSIA'S ARMIES PRAISED BY EDEN

Foreign Secretary, Back In London, Calls Them 'Truly Magnificent'

Declares Moscow Parleys Were 'Full, Frank And Sincere'

[By the Associated Press]

London, Tuesday, Dec. 30—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden returned to London early today from two weeks of Moscow conferences at which Britain and Russia came to complete agreement on conduct of the war.

"Our talks in Moscow were full, frank and sincere," Eden said in a statement.

"I was lucky enough to see something of the military performance of the Russian armies, which are truly magnificent."

As Eden and his party left the station a large crowd carrying banners bearing the hammer and sickle cheered and sang the "Internationale."

EDEN RETURNING FROM PARLEY

London, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden is expected to return to London within the next few hours from his conferences with Joseph Stalin and other Soviet authorities in Moscow, authoritative informants said late today.

DEC 30 1941

He will make a statement to the House of Commons on his talks with Stalin in the near future, it was said.

A party of Soviet trade union officials is coming to London with Eden to return the visit paid to Moscow by Sir Walter Citrine and other British trade unionists.

RED 'CHUTISTS SWOOP BEHIND GERMAN LINES

Blow Up 29 Bridges, Kill 400 Nazis and Burn Much Equipment.

RAIDERS THEN RETURN HOME

Russians Smash Efforts to Make Stand at New Defensive Positions in East.

Moscow, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Red Star, the army organ, reported today that Soviet parachutists had landed in the rear of retreating German troops, blown up twenty-nine bridges, killed 400 German officers and men, burned quantities of equipment, then rejoined their detachments. Meanwhile, Soviet forces smashed German attempts to make a stand in new defensive positions and the Red armies occupied a number of additional villages in their unchecked advance, the Russians announced tonight.

Mozhaisk Bulge Threatened, Reds Say

DEC 30 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Dec. 29—Moscow and its armory, Tula, one hundred miles to the south, have been freed from immediate danger by the crushing Red army drive which is pushing back the Germans, the Moscow radio declared today.

With new advances on each flank of the Moscow front, the Russians are threatening the Nazi bulge at Mozhaisk, fifty-seven miles west of Moscow—the pivot of the German arc which three weeks ago menaced Moscow.

450 Towns Retaken In 10 Days

Red army dispatches at the same time told of the rout of raw German youths of 17 and 18 years who made up most of an entire German division. These reports said the youths dropped their arms and fled at the first Russian assault in the Kalinin sector, ninety-five miles northwest of Moscow.

DEC 30 1941

Headquarters Captured

The morning communique also told of new successes on the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow, where Russian troops were said to have launched a sudden attack which captured the headquarters of the Three Hundred and Twelfth German Infantry Regiment.

"The attack caught the Germans by surprise," the bulletin declared. "Undressed officers rushed out-of-doors in the snow and were mowed down by our fire. The commander and two of his aides tried to hide, but our bullets overtook them.

Secret Maps Taken

"Red army men captured the headquarters files, secret maps and documents and a large quantity of officers' arms."

The same bulletin also reported that 400 German officers and men were killed and considerable war material captured in a surprise attack on the Leningrad front.

On the southern front, the communique said, Russian planes wiped out more than 1,000 German infantry and destroyed 42 trucks, 70 supply wagons and other equipment in two days' operations.

The Soviet Information Bureau said 450 towns and villages had been reoccupied in the area during the past ten days. Later, the bureau declared more inhabited localities were occupied, but did not give the total.

Thrusts Endanger Germans

It was reported the Germans were resisting doggedly in the Mozhaisk and Maloyaroslavets sectors. Maloyaroslavets is sixty-five miles southwest of Moscow.

However, the Russians claimed their thrusts to the north and south of this part of the front had placed the Germans in a perilous position and that the Germans, evidently aware of this, had begun to withdraw.

The Russians also were said to be widening their offensive across the Oka river between Kaluga, southwest of Moscow, and Orel, about 200 miles from the capital.

They pushed through Likhvin, thirty miles south of Kaluga and fifty miles west of Tula, and on through Belev, about fifty miles southwest of Kaluga, it was reported.

Thus the Red Army was menacing the German line of retreat westward from Kaluga toward Smolensk 220 miles west of Moscow.

106 Villages Claimed.

An Izvestia correspondent said Red Army had recaptured 106 villages on the southwestern front in the last six days.

The paper's correspondent on the Leningrad front told of a determined attack by a picked German division which was "crammed with officers." The division failed to gain a single yard and lost 1,500 men, the writer said.

From the southern front, a Pravda reporter said Italians, led by their officers, were surrendering in units.

They are "starved, frozen, woebegone warriors," wrapped in blankets and wearing women's kerchiefs and stockings, he said.

Eight hundred Italians were killed in one action, nearly two Italian battalions annihilated in another, and the Celare division routed in a third, he reported.

TWO MEETINGS BACK UNITY ON WORLD FRONT

DEC 30 1941

Stalin-Eden Accord Reached in Moscow Is Linked With Talks Here.

BERLIN SEES WEAKNESS SIGNS

Britain and Russia Are Reported Already Agreed on Post-war Peace and Security.

Moscow, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia and Great Britain were in full accord today on conduct of the war through momentous Moscow negotiations between Premier Stalin and British Foreign Secretary Eden paralleling the Roosevelt-Churchill meetings in Washington.

Their agreement was announced simultaneously in London and Moscow last night following conferences which have taken place during the last half of this month in the Kremlin with the United States kept closely informed.

Not only have the London and Moscow governments agreed upon plans for prosecuting the war, the statement said, but they also have already initiated discussions on post-war peace and security.

German Defeat Discussed.

But the immediate task, it emphasized, is the defeat of Germany. On this subject the joint declaration said:

"The conversations, which took place in a friendly atmosphere, showed an identity of views of both parties on all questions relating to the conduct of the war, and especially with regard to the necessity for the utter defeat of Hitlerite Germany and adoption of measures to render completely impossible any repetition of German aggression in the future."

The Stalin-Eden conversations were regarded here as a counterpart of the recently concluded Washington talks between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, and also of their historic Atlantic charter meeting.

The United States interest in the Moscow deliberations was stressed by the fact that Walter Thurston, American charge d'affaires at Kuibyshev, the auxiliary capital, flew to Moscow to keep his Government informed.

Izvestia, the government newspaper, said in an editorial that "there is no doubt that further rapprochement between the U. S. S. R. and Great Britain will meet the ardent approval of the peoples of both countries."

Stalin was flanked at the meetings by Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London, and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov. Sitting in with Mr. Eden were Sir Stafford Cripps, British Ambassador to Moscow; Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs, and Lt. Gen. Archibald Edward Nye, vice chief of the British general staff.

Dinner Concludes Visit.

Mr. Eden had five lengthy talks with Stalin, and his visit was concluded with a dinner at the Kremlin attended by the full array of Soviet military and political leaders.

No specific instruments were signed, and the communique gave only the vague outline of the talks, but a high British source said both sides exchanged their views fully, presented concrete proposals and were "well pleased with the results."

The conversations were divided into two parts. The first covered both military and political conduct of the war.

The second involved post-war problems, a subject which was discussed directly for the first time by Stalin and the British Minister.

Impressed With Stalin.

The British delegation was impressed by what was described as the 'well-founded confidence" of Stalin and his thorough grasp of all questions raised.

Mr. Eden spent a day at the Moscow front, visiting the Klin area, 50 miles northwest of the capital. He saw the scene of a sharp tank engagement and talked with a half dozen German prisoners who were not aware of his identity.

The prisoners, clad in light overcoats, told Mr. Eden their principal complaint had been the cold.

Mr. Eden himself discarded his famous black homburg for a fur hat during the visit and wore a brown R. A. F. sweater and fleece-lined boots.

He kept a touch of nattiness with a white handkerchief tucked into the breast pocket of his dark suit.

In London it was understood that through the Moscow and Washington conferences the Unted States, Britain and Russia now have agreed on concerted action on the whole World War front and in addition made equally important decisions on production, on a common pooling of war materal and on a common diplomatic policy.

Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was understood to have had a representative at the Kremlin talks and it was reported that Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Huggesen, British Ambassador to Turkey, and Sir Reader Bullard, Minister to Iran also were present.

Hope of Full Collaboration.

The London News Chronicle commented: "Now there is hope of genuine and full collaboration between Britain's major partners, east and west. What is to be most hoped for is a similar mission soon from Washington to Moscow, or vice versa."

The Daily Express emphaszed that "the Axis power must be broken in Germany * * * the Red Army remains our instrument for victory over the German Army; peoples of our whole world alliance should be working with all their energy now to equip our ally for the coming struggle."

Reports reaching London said Mr. Eden was greatly impressed by Stalin's "complete mastery" of all details concerning both political and military supply problems facing Russia, Britain and the United States.

Russ Battleship Hit, Nazis Say

DEC 30 1941

Berlin, Dec. 29 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A.P.)—The German high command announced the damaging of a Russian battleship at Leningrad and reported the sinking of one Soviet troopship and damage to six others in the Black Sea.

Five direct hits, a communique said, were scored upon the battleship by Nazi heavy artillery supporting German troops before Leningrad.

Action In Kerch Strait

The action against the Russian transports took place in Kerch Strait, between the Crimean penisula and the Caucasus, and was carried out by German bombing planes, the bulletin declared. Numerous other smaller vessels were reported damaged in this action.

(Recurring references in recent German communiques to attacks on Russian shipping in Kerch Strait have led to the supposition that the Russians have been trying to reinforce their troops in the Crimea by water—across the narrow channel—from the Caucasus.)

Violent Defensive Fighting

The German high command dismissed land operations on the Russian front by declaring:

"On the Eastern Front defensive fighting is continuing with undiminishing violence."

35 P. C. Nazi Air Loss Claimed

DEC 30 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 29—Aviation observers estimated today that losses in the campaign against Russia have reduced the German air force to about sixty-five per cent. of its peak strength.

They noted in this connection that there has not been a really big raid on Britain since the Russian war began last June 22.

Termed Worn Out

"The German Air Force is literally worn out," said a reliable commentator with excellent sources of information. "The pilots are tired and there is a real shortage of planes in certain categories. To all appearances the German Air Force is just about thirty-five per cent. under what it was, for instance, when it gave London its first heavy fire bomb attack just a year ago."

In addition to the losses in the Russian campaign, this source said, the Germans' air strength has suffered severely in the Middle East.

"With the Luftwaffe in its present condition," he said, "Hitler can't just laugh off the loss of the 476 planes which the British shot down, destroyer or captured from November 18 (the start of the British drive into Libya) to December 23."

New Types Limited

This view that the Nazi air force actually is suffering shortages was supported by a reliable foreign source, who said that, according to information just received from agents on the Continent, the German high command two weeks ago banned the manufacture of any new types of planes which cannot be turned out in mass production.

But this source warned that the present German air lull, which British pilots on patrol over France have noticed, might only mean that "Hitler is getting his forces ready for some kind of winter campaign. On the basis of reports of activities in Sicily the Peloponnesus and North Africa it's a two-to-one bet it will be a blitz against the western and middle Mediterranean."

Gas From Greece

In this connection the Air Ministry news service reported today that until the British capture of the Derna airdromes a few days ago; Gen. Erwin Rommel, the Axis commander in Libya, had received gasoline brought from Greece by plane.

The news service said that the RAF in the last thirty-eight days had occupied thirty-nine Axis airdromes in Libya, and that the "twisted skeletons of wrecked aircraft litter every landing ground."

British Sink 8 Ships In Raid on Island Off Norway

DEC 30 1941

Attack Carried Out by Commandos, Assisted by Navy and R. A. F.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Eight enemy ships totalling 15,650 tons, oil tanks, ammunition stores and a Quisling-owned industrial plant were destroyed during a British raid on the small island of Vaagso, 100 miles north of Bergen, Norway, it was announced officially today.

The raid was carried out Saturday by the mysterious Commando force of the British Army, aided by light forces of the home fleet and by the R. A. F.

The story of the daring thrust against Germany's war machine was told in a communique issued jointly by the Admiralty, the War Office and the Air Ministry.

Vaagso is the assembly point for German convoys carrying supplies to the far northern front in Russia, and an officer who took part in the raid said the destruction of shipping had hampered German communications to the front.

DEC 30 1941

Garrison Destroyed.

The entire German garrison on an island involved in the attack was captured or killed, the communique said.

"An enemy tank was put out of action and an oil tank and ammunition stores were destroyed," the communique said.

"A wireless station and a certain industrial plant owned by a Quisling and known to be operating for the Germans were destroyed."

An officer of the combined operations headquarters said the German casualties totaled 120 men and 95 prisoners were taken.

A number of Norwegian civilians returned with the Commandos also.

The Commandos suffered "some casualties," but the raid was called a complete success.

"Although on a small scale, this raid was a good example of the combined operation in which the Royal Navy, Army and Royal Air Force each played an equally important and interdependent part," the communique declared.

Official Story of Raid.

The official story of the raid follows:

Light forces of the home fleet began the action when they arrived off Vaagso Island just before daylight, and under cover of an air-laid smoke screen landed a force of Commandos and some Norwegian troops in naval assault landing craft.

German coast defense guns opened fire on the British ships, but were silenced by the guns of the fleet and by aerial bombs.

The planes gave further support by laying smoke screens to mask the ships and by machine-gunning batteries and barracks on nearby Ragsundo Island.

There were two main military landings—one on the small island of Maaloy and the other at the southwestern extremity of the town of South Vaagso.

The entire garrison of Maaloy was killed or captured and the military storehouses and ammunition dumps were blown up. A battery of four guns also was destroyed.

Stiff Resistance.

"At South Vaagso the Germans put up stiff resistance and in street fighting we suffered some casualties before the town could be brought completely under our control," the communique said.

"An enemy tank was put out of action and oil tanks and ammunition stores were destroyed. A wireless station and a certain industrial plant owned by a Quisling, and known to be operating for the Germans, were destroyed.

"A total of eight enemy ships, including five merchant vessels, two armed trawlers and one armed tug totaling 15,650 tons were destroyed.

"The merchant vessels beached themselves to avoid capture and were destroyed by our naval forces. The armed vessels were sunk.

"An offensive patrol in conjunction with this operation was carried out by Blenheim aircraft of the bomber command. They encountered and attacked a convoy of enemy merchant ships. Many bombs fell among them and one ship was sunk."

DEC 30 1941

Attack Attacked.

While the operations were proceeding at Vaagso British bombers were attacking Herdla, the nearest enemy airdrome 100 miles down the coast. Wooden runways of the airdrome were hit from a height of 250 feet and a Messerschmitt fighter which was taxiing in at the time was destroyed.

The communique said eight bombers were lost in the operations and three fighters were missing after day-long fighting which came after the sudden raid.

British ships suffered only minor damage from the German air attacks afterwards and all returned fit for immediate service, it was said. British fighters prevented any successful attack on the ships.

Nine "Quislings" were included among the prisoners brought back.

Work Done "Too Quickly."

The soldiers landed at 8:31 a.m., did their work "too quickly" as an officer put it and were able to leave at 2:45 p.m. instead of 3 p.m. as scheduled.

The officer said the three chief captives were the Nazi officer commanding the garrison, the German naval captain of the port and the "chief Quisling," the 40-year-old chairman of the local canning factory supplying food for Nazi troops in Russia.

The Germans declared the British landing party in Norway was driven back to its ships in short and violent engagements Saturday and added that one destroyer of the fleeing British formation was sunk.

The Germans also said a cruiser and another destroyer were damaged by Nazi aircraft.

Berlin acknowledged that the German patrol boat Foehn sank under the fire of the cruiser and several destroyers.

REMADE CLOTHES FOR NAZI ARMY

London, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—A vast army of tailors and dressmakers is working day and night in Germany remaking for the army clothing surrendered by the German people, a Reuters dispatch from Stockholm said today.

Fur coats, hats, woolen jumpers, gloves and underwear are being collected throughout the Reich, the dispatch quoted the Berlin correspondent of the newspaper Stockholm's Tidningen as saying.

Coat collars are being made into body belts and baby quilts into soldier hoods in the vast remodeling program, the correspondent wrote.

WITNESS TELLS OF NORSE RAID

Reporter Found Commandos Seasick in Channel.

London, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—The Commandos, often called Britain's toughest troops encountered their toughest foe—seasickness—in the raid on Norway Saturday.

Ralph Walling, of Reuters, the first reported ever to accompany the raiding Commandoes, described how the rough North Sea crossing sent many hardened fighters to their bunks.

But all got on their feet to participate in the raid.

It was well that they did, he said, for the Germans, although outnumbered, put up a stiff and skillful fight.

DEC 30 1941

Walling added that the Germans received little help from their air force although airdromes at Trondheim, Stavanger, Lista, Alborg and Herdla all were within striking distance.

Warships Hammer Coast.

Two single engined Messerschmitts shot down two aircraft supporting the Commandos, he related, while gunners of one warship bagged one Messerschmitt and damaged a Heinkel.

Describing the attack, Walling said:

"The attackers' ships came to anchor and Commando barges were lowered. The warships directed a furious broadside against a four gun Nazi coastal battery on Maaloy Island.

"Beneath a cannonade of fifty shells a minute, a thin snakelike line of Commando barges drove straight for the islet. Within half an hour the raiders had climbed the island's rocky slopes and stormed the guns of the defenders. Many Germans were shot. Twenty were taken prisoner.

Reporter Wades Ashore.

"I waded ashore with the men through knee-deep rocky pools. Then the fun really started. The officers gathered their troops for the most desperate task of that short, eventful day—an advance down the town's main, sniper-infested street.

"Resistance was particularly stubborn in the center of the town. Many Germans roasted to death as they doggedly refused to emerge from homes set aflame by shellfire.

"Meanwhile Norwegian men, women and children anxious to go to England, some laughing, some in tears and all rather scared, were running to board our barges. I saw no civilian casualties."

RAF Lashes Nazi Bases From Norway To France

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Royal Air Force dealt heavy blows on western Germany and Nazi-held continental bases last night in a destructive climax to a week end of assaults by land, sea and air along the 1,000-mile front from Norway to occupied France.

DEC 30 1941

The RAF, striking "in force in favorable weather for the second successive night," smashed at:

The great naval ports of Wilhelmshaven and Emden, two of Germany's most important war centers.

The huge rubber substitute producing works at Huls, near the Ruhr. Düsseldorf in the Ruhr.

The industrial Rhineland.

Docks at Dunkerque, Boulogne and Brest.

Rail yards at Bethune, France.

Airdromes in the Netherlands.

Rubber Plant Blasted

Particular importance was placed upon the attack at Huls, where massive explosions were reported in the plant which produces considerable quantities of "Buna," Germany's costly rubber substitute.

Coupled with all this destruction poured from the air upon Adolf Hitler's military establishments, was this score, marked up officially in one of the most active week-end British offensives in months:

Eight enemy ships, totaling 15,650 tons, sunk, and oil tanks, ammunition stores and a Quisling-owned industrial plant destroyed by suddenly striking commandos of the British army in a raid on Vaagso and Maaloy islands, one hundred miles north of Bergen, Norway.

The entire garrison of Maaloy Island killed or captured; a total of 120 Nazi casualties and 95 prisoners taken in the entire operation; bomb hits on two German ships off the Netherlands.

Coordination Cited

In an account of the raid carried out Saturday night on Vaagso and Maaloy by commandos landing on the fog-shrouded islands, the British disclosed what was considered a perfect example of absolute coordination of land, sea and air forces.

It was the first time that all three arms participated in a joint action, and it was declared to have gone off "absolutely according to plan from beginning to end."

Official quarters emphasized this was a small-scale operation without bearing on major theaters of the war—an admonition regarded in some circles as an attempt to dispel the often-voiced idea that some such a raid or series of raids might herald the beginning of a continental invasion.

Raid Hailed By Britons

Despite the official tendency to de-emphasize the size of the raid, Britons hailed it as a heavy blow to German shipping, which has used Vaagso as [illegible] point for Nazi convoys carrying supplies to the far northern front in Russia.

During the Vaagso operations British bombers attacked Herdia, the nearest enemy airdrome one hundred miles down the coast. The British acknowledged loss of eight bombers and three fighters in day-long fighting after the raid.

While the RAF offensive again was on the upsurge after a period of virtual inactivity, aviation observers here estimated that German air losses in the Russian campaign have reduced the Nazi air force to about sixty-five per cent. of its peak strength.

DEC 30 1941

One reliable commentator put it: "The German air force literally is worn out."

RAF Fires Big Nazi Plant

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 29—An explosion of "great violence which shot flames many hundreds of feet into the air" followed an RAF attack last night on the great chemical works at Huls, where Germany manufactures costly rubber substitutes, Air Ministry sources said today.

The explosion came from the very center of the plant and fires spread unchecked to numerous buildings and guided other bombers to the flaring target, it was said.

Fire Seen 100 Miles

Fires visible for 100 miles were observed after British bombings at the Wilhelmshaven docks, and Emden was also bombed in force, the British said.

The raids extended from Western Germany to France and were the second forays over Nazi-held Europe on successive nights. Seven British planes were acknowledged missing.

Secondary targets, the communique said, included docks at Dunkerque, on the "invasion coast" of France, and airdromes in Holland.

Shipping Attacked.

While R. A. F. bombers made these assaults, coastal command planes attacked enemy shipping and the communique said bomb hits were scored on two vessels off the Dutch coast.

Fighter planes on night offensive patrols attacked air bases and other tagets in occupied France and Holland.

The Air Ministry News Service said American-built Havocs also had raided airdromes in German-occupied territory and a railway yard at Bethune, France.

"Considerable activity was interrupted at the Bethune marshalling yards when a Havoc unloaded its bombs and left two fires burning," the news service declared.

The Air Ministry said last night that a "powerful force" of bombers raided Duesseldorf, a principal manufacturing city of the Ruhr Valley, and left many fires burning.

The R. A. F. also attacked the Soesterberg Airdrome in the Netherlands, loosing bombs on the runways just as Nazi aircraft landed. Other bombers attacked the naval base of Brest, where two German battleships are sheltered, and the harbor works at Boulogne.

It was announced tonight that the Mediterranean island fortress of Malta underwent sixty Axis air attacks during Christmas week and said the defenders destroyed seven raiders and so severely damaged fifteen others that it was unlikely the planes ever reached their bases.

BRITAIN IS HIT BY HEAVIEST RAID IN WEEKS

Nazis Hammer Northeast Coast, Steer Clear Of London

RAF Bombers Lash German Bases Along 1,000-Mile Front

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 29—On this first anniversary of the great fire Blitz on London, German raiders pummeled the northeast coast tonight, but steered clear of the British capital.

It was the heaviest Nazi assault in weeks and there were casualties in one town. In one district anti-aircraft guns sent one bomber down in flames, while another fluttered back to sea losing altitude rapidly.

Other raids were reported over the heavily indutrialized Midlands, but no damage was reported immediately from there.

British Coast Town Blasted

A BRITISH NORTHEAST COAST TOWN, Dec. 29 (AP)—German planes blasted this area at length tonight on the first anniversary of the great fire-blitz on London. There were undetermined casualties. One bomber was seen heading seaward, losing altitude rapidly.

Raiders also were over the English Midlands, but no bomb damage was reported immediately.

In London authoritative sources said three enemy planes were destroyed tonight, but did not specify where.

Berlin Admits Emden Raids

Berlin, Dec. 29 (Official Broadcast Recorded By A.P.)—Nine British planes were shot down last night during raids on northern and western Germany the German high command declared today.

DEC 30 1941

A communique said the raids caused dead and injured among the civilian population, "particularly in Emden," site of a big German naval base.

One British plane was shot down yesterday over German-occupied territory, the high command said.

BRITISH SMASH 6 AXIS TANKS IN LIBYA CLASH

Draw Noose Still Tighter Around Foe's Main Force At Agedabia

Heavy Rains Turn Desert Into Mud And Make Operations Difficult

DEC 30 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 29—British mobile columns drawing a noose around the main Axis forces at Agedabia, eighty miles south of Bengasi, were reported officially tonight to have smashed six tanks in a sharp prelude to the big conclusive battle of Cirenaica.

Heavy rains turned the desert into vast mud fields and made ground operations difficult, but the RAF still sprayed explosives on all the tattered German and Italian column which had escaped into Tripolitania via the Bengasi-Agedabia coastal road.

Axis Retreat Continues

Official dispatches established that the Axis concentration in the Agedabia region is not a mere covering force, but embodies the main remnants of Gen. Erwin Rommel's African tank corps along with Italian contingents.

British columns closing in on this area from the south ran into stubborn opposition, but the high command's communique said the Germans and Italians retreated to the west after losing six tanks.

"Northeast of Agedabia," the bulletin added, "our artillery successfully engaged an enemy motor transport column."

The RAF was active all the way to Tripoli, 400 miles to the west of the Cirenacian border, "damaging or destroying a considerable number of vehicles."

British planes also rained bombs on a small pocket of Axis troops still holding out at Bardia, far to the rear of the imperial columns, which last week captured Bengasi.

Even if the Germans and Italians escape British encirclement at Agedabia, it was believed they would run into considerable trouble to the west in Tripolitania. British patrols have been reported 150 miles inside that western half of Libya.

Rome Reports Attacks Repulsed.

Rome, Dec. 29 (Official broadcast recorded by A. P.).—Attacks by British large motorized forces on an Italian position in the region of Agedabia, ninety miles south of British-held Bengasi, were immediately repulsed by Italian fire and fifty-eight British tanks and armored cars were destroyed or captured, the Italian High Command said today.

British Pursue Foe In Libya

DEC 30 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 29—British columns striking from the south found the retreating main Axis force in the Agedabia area yesterday and compelled at least part of the enemy to pull off to the west, the British command announced today.

Axis forces fleeing to the west lost six tanks, a communique said. The RAF heavily attacked enemy troops isolated in Bardia, and kept up raids on the motor transports along roads westward from Agedabia, "damaging or destroying a considerable number of vehicles."

Bengasi Port Damage

The RAF reported that "about fifteen hulks of ships lie in the inner and outer harbors" of Bengasi, the Italian port which fell to the onrushing British last week. "The whole harbor front is a battered and crumbling ruin" as a result of the RAF's raids preceding the city's fall, said the announcement.

It added that "the natives appear quite unconcerned at the presence of British and imperial troops."

RAF planes again have carried the war deep into the western half of Libya, it was said, attacking Tripoli and other points in Tripolitania, while Free French airmen raided positions still held by encircled Italian forces in the Bardia area, far to the east.

58 British Tanks Claimed By Axis

Berlin, Dec. 29 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—The German high command announced today that Axis forces in Libya had destroyed fifty-eight British tanks and other motor vehicles in a fierce counter-attack in the Agedabia zone, ninety miles south of Bengasi.

At the same time German bombing planes and submarines, smashing at British ships along the North African Coast, were credited by the high command with damaging a destroyer and two merchant ships, and sinking two transports aggregating 9,000 tons.

The transports, a communique said, were sunk by submarines off Matruh, Egypt, in an attack on a military convoy. Another ship was reported struck by a torpedo during the same attack.

German bombers scored several direct hits on the destroyer off Tobruk and also on a convoyed sailing ship, the bulletin added.

German planes also were said to have attacked airdromes and port installations at Malta by day and night with good effect.

ROME CLAIMS A HIT ON BRITISH CRUISER

Specifies the Heavy Type—Two Other Ships Listed.

DEC 30 1941

Rome, Dec. 29 (Official broadcast recorded by A. P.).—Italian torpedo-carrying planes scored hits with aerial torpedoes on a heavy British cruiser and two torpedo boats in the Eastern Mediterranean during a raid on a naval formation, the Italian High Command reported today. The communique said two Curtiss planes were shot down by escorting fighter planes and one Italian plane had not returned.

Unarmed American Quells Arab Rioting in Libya

Enters Barce Alone Ahead of British Armored Column and Organizes Welcoming Committee of Italians

DEC 30 1941

(Preston Grover, a native of Farmington, Utah, who lists farming, ranching and work in smelters and sugar mills as previous occupations, is a former captain of artillery of the United States organized reserves who joined the Associated Press staff at Salt Lake City in 1927. A crack shot with rifle and pistol, Grover's described the following unarmed adventure in a note to his New York desk as "absolutely screwball, but an unadorned description of what happened.")

By PRESTON GROVER

With the British Army near Bengasi in Libya, Dec. 23—(Delayed)—(AP)—Armed with two rocks and a stick, an American newspaper correspondent walked five miles ahead of a British armored column to Barce, entered the town alone, quieted rioting Arabs and organized an official Italian reception committee to welcome the British who arrived an hour later.

The correspondent was this writer.

The British armored column was winding through a mountain pass toward Bengasi when it was forced to stop to repair the road blown up by the retreating Italians at a point five miles east of Barce and 55 miles east of Bengasi.

The little town of white Italian-style houses was easily visible in the center of the wide valley. The column had encountered no Italians during the day so I felt sure they were in retreat far ahead.

Thinking it would be safe to walk into Barce, I set out.

When barely out of sight of the motor column, I could hear much shooting in Barce, but with my glasses I could make out no defense works.

Arabs Blamed for Shooting

A mile farther along the road I asked an Italian farmer what the shooting was about, and he replied, "Arabs."

I put two good rocks in my pocket, picked up a stick and went on.

By then the shooting in all quarters of Barce was growing in intensity and I was becoming plenty nervous.

From the direction of the center of town came a horse and buggy carrying two Italians and a native, the latter with a rifle. I stopped them.

"Are you a British officer," one of them asked in French.

"No, American correspondent," I replied.

"Good," was the reply.

I told them the British were five kilometers back and asked them to take me to the police station. The rifleman jumped out of the buggy. I took his place and we drove into town.

Rifles were firing in all quarters of the town. There were some hand grenade explosions, too.

I asked one of the Italians why they did not put a stop to the looting and he replied that there were only five gendarmes and 100 Italians in the city, while there were 600 resident Arabs plus several hundred coming from the surrounding desert to enjoy the plundering.

Quiet Comes Over Town

A mob of Arabs gathered around us in the middle of the street as we reached a hotel where the manager spoke English.

"Tell these Arabs that if looting and shooting is not stopped immediately the English will execute at least 50 when they enter the town," I directed the hotel keeper.

At the same time I motioned to five or six Arabs to come forward and hear what was said.

They took to their heels with the message. The mob melted and as the message was broadcast, quiet came over the town. In 20 minutes scarcely a shot could be heard.

A young sergeant gendarme, who was chief of police, appeared with his four policemen. The hotel keeper sent for the mayor.

The mayor, who also was the town doctor, came from the hospital with an overcoat pulled over his white surgeon's gown. He said that the last Italian soldiers had left early in the day, but that the main force had left two days earlier. For two days the Arabs had been looting unchecked.

The mayor waited in the hotel while a French-speaking druggist, the chief of police and I drove in an automobile to the edge of town where the armored cars were just approaching.

We piloted them to the hotel, and the lieutenant was presented to the mayor.

Italy Drastically Cuts Rail Facilities

Rome, Dec. 29 (Andi Agency to AP)—Further drastic reductions in railroad facilities throughout Italy were ordered today to meet "unavoidable exigencies of the general interest."

All reduced fares for family tickets, as well as season tickets for journeys of over sixty miles and other fare reductions were abolished.

This move followed a recent decree which greatly reduced the number of passenger trains in service, especially in the Milan area.

Europe Gloomy, Earle Says

[By the Associated Press]

Istanbul, Dec. 27 (Delayed)—George H. Earle III, who has been American Minister to Bulgaria, arrived today from Sofia and described a deepening gloom settling upon Nazi-dominated Europe.

He said Rumanian and Hungarian hospitals were choked with German wounded from Eastern front hospital trains, and asserted that the German people and soldiers alike were sickened by Hitler's assumption of personal command of the German army.

"German fortunes definitely are declining," he said, but added that "the death throes may be unprecedentedly violent."

Earle arrived with his entire legation staff after being bustled mysteriously out of Sofia after Bulgaria's declaration of war upon the United States. Members of the staff said they thought the Bulgars had got wind of a Nazi plot against them to create an incident.

It was said that Bulgar authorities who took them at the last minute to little-used stations on the capital's outskirts instead of the central station, explained that they feared a Russian bombing to make it appear that Bulgaria had violated diplomatic protection. The staff consensus, however, was that the Bulgars really feared a German plot.

All non-diplomatic American residents in Bulgaria—about twenty—were compelled by Nazi-controlled Bulgarian police to remain behind, the staff members said, presumably to serve as hostages for Germans living in the United States.

TROUBLE IN DALMATIA

Mussolini Orders Troops to Halt Disorders.

Rome, Dec. 29 (Andi agency to A. P.).—Premier Mussolini gave orders today for the most rapid possible definite elimination of several remaining centers of what he called "communistic disorder" in Dalmatia, the coastal region of dismembered Yugoslavia which fell to Italy, an announcement said.

These orders and others on military problems were given when he received Gen. Ambrosio to hear his report on the condition of his Second Army, stationed in Yugoslavia.

Nazis Reported Fining Greeting Card Printers

Swiss Paper Says Stationers Have Been Made Liable To Many Penalties

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Dresden newspaper Nueste Nachrichten reported today that German printers and stationers who print and sell New Year's greeting cards have been made liable to heavy fines.

The newspaper said many people had sent cards to their friends despite the urgings of Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, who announced all transport is needed for shipment of parcels to the front.

10 Executed as Norse Spies

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 29(AP).—Ten persons were executed in Stavanger, Norway, today on conviction of espionage before a German war court. One was a doctor, and others were merchants and employees, none having been prominent or politically active in normal times.

Day of Prayer Urged in India

DEC 30 1941

Peoples Mayor Joins U. S. in Observance Jan. 1

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Marquess of Linlithgow, Viceroy of India, appealed to the peoples of India today to join those of the United States in the day of prayer which Presiednt Roosevelt has proclaimed for Jan. 1.

The viceroy's message explained that time was too short to arrange special services in India, but expressed confidence that "the followers of all religions will wish to join their brethren in other parts of the empire in prayer for the people of the United States, for their country, and for the cause in which they now are our allies."

(Britain's religious leaders already have asked their followers to join in the day of prayer.)

NORTH IRELAND URGED TO PRAY

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Dec. 29. (AP)—Prime Minister John M. Andrews called upon the people of Northern Ireland today to demonstrate complete unity with the people of the United States by observing New Year Day as a day of prayer.

Praising President Roosevelt's proclamation of a day of prayer, Andrews said "we must rededicate ourselves to a task that can only be accomplished if we realize that we are the instruments of a divine purpose for the betterment of mankind."

Pope Receives Americans

Vatican City, Dec. 29 (Andi Agency to A. P.)—Pope Pius today received in private audience Harold Tittman, United States charge d'affaires at the Vatican, who presented New Year greetings to the Pontiff. Several other diplomats from American republics were received in similar audiences.

CITY PILOT SEIZED IN RAID ON NAZIS

Johnson of Canadian Flyers Made Bomber Flights.

DEC 30 1941

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—Sergt. Winfield Louis Johnson, who gave his address as in care of Wilbur E. Johnson, 2 West 67th street, New York, N. Y., was reported by German sources today to be a prisoner of war.

Sergeant-Pilot Winfield Louis (Win) Johnson, who left his home here to join the Royal Canadian Air Force because, as he put it, he wanted to do something to help, was reported today to be a prisoner in Germany after what may have been his first flight in a bomber over enemy territory.

In a letter to his father, Wilbur E. Johnson, of 2 West 67th street, Sergt. Johnson wrote last month of the thrill he felt while waiting to take off on that first flight. Today his father, a sick man, received news that Win had been forced down in the North Sea and was in German hands.

Mr. Johnson, who is first vice-president of Marschalk & Pratt, Inc., advertising agency of 555 Fifth avenue, had heard three weeks ago that his son was officially missing and one week ago from the International Red Cross that he was a German prisoner.

"Today," the 29-year-old New Yorker wrote shortly before his heavy bomber was forced down in the North Sea, "is a momentous day in my new-found career, a day that makes it possible to utilize all the knowledge I have gained in aerial warfare, because we're going over the top tonight for the first time."

"We're in the bus now driving to our satellite field at (censored). One by one we take off—J. for Johnnie, O. for Orange, F. for Freddie and all the rest, circling the airdrome for height and then out to sea. Tonight's there's a full moon and no clouds, so we must all keep a close and careful watch for night fighters, flak ships, &c. Well I could go on in imagination based on pictures and conversation, but I'll save that to tell you the McCoy."

This, however, was the last correspondence the family received and it is believed possible that Win might have been forced down on that first flight.

Earlier he had written:

"I'm expecting to go on a 'nickel sortie' over the channel ports this week as a second pilot. You see they break you slowly at first as a second and later give you a crew and a chance slap at the dirty dagoes before sending you across what is left of Berlin."

Sergt. Johnson attended Westminster College, Pa., and worked for several years at Wanamaker's. Shortly after Britain declared war he went to Canada. When he left Halifax for England, he was a pursuit pilot, but soon was converted into a bomber pilot, a step at which he was highly pleased, as he wrote to his father.

Ottawa, Dec. 29-(AP)-Sgt. Winfield Louis Johnson, whose father E. W. Johnson, lives at 325 east 41st Street, New York City, was reported to be a prisoner of war after having been listed as missing in a previous casualty list of the R.C.A.F.

FRENCH ISLANDS' VOTE IS TALLIED

DEC 30 1941

De Gaulle Bureau Holds Issue Is Settled.

St. Pierre, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—A plebiscite showing a 98.2 per cent margin for Gen. Charles de Gaulle has definitely established the matter of Free French rule over St. Pierre and Miquelon islands, the Free French Information Bureau said last night.

The bureau announced the final vote as: Free French, 783; void, 215; collaboration with the Vichy Petain Government, 14.

An expedition of Canadian corvettes arrived Christmas Eve and ousted the Vichy-appointed regime on the islands. The plebiscite was held immediately.

(The United States called the Free French act "arbitrary" and in London Free French headquarters announced that there would be an "exchange of views" between General de Gaulle and interested "Allies governments on diplomatic questions involved in the occupation.)

Vichy, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—An authorized source declared today that the French Government is not entering into negotiations over the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, but, instead, "asks to be put in a position to re-establish immediately its complete sovereignty over the islands."

The islands were occupied by Free French forces on the day before Christmas, an action which the United States State Department called "arbitrary."

Governmental circles made clear that they considered that there is nothing for Vichy to negotiate, that it only can wait for the State Department to implement its declaration favoring the restoration of the status quo.

Marshal Petain today named Baron de Bournat, the Vichy-appointed Governor of St. Pierre and Miquelon, an officer of the Legion of Honor. The Governor was taken into custody by Free French leaders when they seized the islands off Newfoundland coast last week.

Hull and Halifax Confer.

Washington, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Hull and the British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, conferred today on the St. Pierre-Miquelon situation but it was not disclosed whether a solution had been found.

Seizure of the little French islands off the Newfoundland coast by Free French naval forces last Wednesday created a delicate situation. The seizure was denounced by the State Department as an arbitrary action contrary to agreement.

It was understood that efforts were being made to reach a compromise settlement by which the islands would be restored to Vichy French sovereignty but with control of the St. Pierre radio station left in the hands of Allied representatives.

Prime Minister Addresses War Cabinet Lunch At Ottawa

British Leader Praises Dominion For Its "Magnificent Effort"

By LLOYD LEHRBAS

[By the Associated Press]

Ottawa, Ontario, Dec. 29—Prime Minister Churchill told Canada's war cabinet today the nations and peoples who fought for freedom had at least reached the crest of the road and now were able to see what lay ahead.

Speaking informally at a luncheon attended by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, members of the war cabinet and a few other notables, including Jay Pierrepont Moffat, the American Minister, Britain's war leader praised Canada's "magnificent effort" in the war against Axis aggression and pledged victory in the end.

Dips And Breaks

The struggle, Churchill declared, was bound to be hard and the road to be traveled might have some dips and breaks in it, but it was possible now clearly to see the destination of the nations that fought for a free world.

The Prime Minister said Britain felt grateful to the dominions because there was one dark period when the help and encouragement of the dominions was one of the mainstays which enabled the embattled islands to carry on the struggle.

Core Of The Future

Reacting to the fighting spirit of close cooperation achieved through his conferences with President Roosevelt and American leaders in Washington, he then asserted that the salvation of the world lay in some organization which would have as its core the English-speaking peoples. Churchill made no elaboration of his bare statement.

King, also speaking briefly, characterized Churchill as the embodiment of the determination and courage of the British people.

Canada, the dominion Prime Minister declared, has seen very clearly what lay ahead and nothing, he promised, would be spared in the way of effective aid to the mother country.

Senator Raoul Dandurand, Government leader in the Senate, thanked Churchill in French at the close of his address.

To Address Parliament

Lord Beaverbrook, who remained in Washington for continuing conferences on supply problems, and W. Averell Harriman, Lease-Lend Administrator, are expected to arrive by plane tonight to be present tomorrow when Churchill addresses the Canadian Parliament.

Churchill's speech will be broadcast over national and international networks.

The British leader is expected to appeal for an even greater Canadian war effort before he returns to Washington for further strategy and supply conferences.

Decision Foreseen

A spokesman for Churchill said "far-reaching decisions can be taken" once the Prime Minister has talked with Canadians on the Dominion's role.

Churchill, accompanied by King and service chiefs, left Washington yesterday afternoon aboard a heavily guarded special train in wartime secrecy. The secrecy was broken shortly before his arrival here so that thousands of persons were on hand to give him a tumultuous welcome.

Bundled in a heavy overcoat and muffler against the biting cold, and with his usual big cigar, Churchill stepped off the train and raised his chubby fingers in the V-for-victory salute.

Meets Cabinet

After going to Rideau Hall to call on the Governor General, the Earl of Athlone, the British leader was driven through icy streets for his meeting with the Canadian Cabinet.

Thousands Wait For Him

Thousands who stamped their feet to keep warm waited along Rideau and Wellington Streets for a glimpse of the prime minister, termed "the man of destiny" by the Canadian newspapers.

After an hour's session with the cabinet, the prime minister had luncheon with the 10-man war council and then plunged into a series of private conferences on specific problems.

Churchill was sworn in tonight as a member of the Canadian Privy Council. This honor is sometimes conferred on notable visitors but there has been no similar appointment to a visitor recently.

One hundred persons, mostly officials and diplomats, were invited to a dinner and reception in his honor tonight at Government House.

President Roosevelt's special Pullman car was placed at the disposal of Churchill and his party. As the train pushed through cold New England cities studded with war plants turning out equipment for the Allies, the prime minister worked on tomorrow's speech.

The Prime Minister plunged at once into a round of meetings with key figures in Canada's war effort and prepared to address the Canadian Senate and House of Commons tomorrow. He held an hour's conference with the Canadian Cabinet and was reported to have summarized his discussions with President Roosevelt.

He raised his hand in the "V" sign of victory and lifted his black hat as cheers of the crowd rang through the station area at the first glimpse of the familiar Churchillian countenance. He was gripping the inevitable cigar.

His ruddy face was wreathed in steam from nearby puffing locomotives.

The chill of the snow-carpeted Canadian capital was felt even inside the station.

Beside the British Prime Minister was Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada.

He also was accompanied by members of Canada's War Council, and Air Marshal Sir Charles Portal, Britain's Chief of Air Staff.

Mr. Churchill traveled in the special Pullman used by President Roosevelt with the crew of porters and secret service men who normally look after the President's safety and comfort.

The train left Washington in war-time secrecy at 2:15 P. M. yesterday. During brief stops at New York, New Haven and Springfield, Mass., special police details kept station platforms clear.

Late in the evening as the train sped through a snowstorm outside Springfield, Mr. Churchill held an animated conversation with Mackenzie King and began preparing the address which he will make tomorrow. He worked until well past midnight.

Sixteen American, British, Canadian and Australian newspaper men aboard asked for an interview, but he explained through his naval aid, Commander C. R. Thompson, that he had important matters to discuss with Mackenzie King.

"The Prime Minister can say that the conversations at Washington are progressing so favorably he was delighted to take advantage of the invitation to visit Ottawa," the statement continued.

"On his return to Washington he anticipates that important detailed co-ordination work will be well advanced so that practical, far-reaching decisions can be taken."

The train took Mr. Churchill through an industrial countryside studded with plants turning out war weapons for the nations fighting the Axis, but Britain's Minister of Supply, Lord Beaverbrook, remained in Washington. He may fly to Ottawa for Mr. Churchill's address however.

Despite the attempt to clothe Mr. Churchill's movements in secrecy, hundreds of spectators jostled in the wide street and square at the station, and planes and trains were bringing other hundreds hourly from the Maritime, Pacific and prairie provinces.

For the first time in history, microphones were being installed in the Canadian Commons so that the speech tomorrow may be broadcast. The Commons seats but 250 persons.

The official party moved away from the station through the seething crowd. Royal Canadian Mounted Police, railway police and Boy Scouts were on guard.

Crowds on the snow-covered streets and leaning from office windows cheered the party as it was driven to Government House where Mr. Churchill was welcomed by the Earl of Athlone, the Governor-General and Princess Alice.

A Government House dinner and reception formed other events on his program.

Mr. Churchill slipped out of formal attire and donned a super-comfortable zipper suit soon after leaving Washington yesterday on his long train ride to Ottawa.

The gray teddy bear coveralls gave the Prime Minister the appearance of a jovial kewpie puffing a cigar as he lounged and worked.

Mr. Churchill adopted the garment when air raids in London made it uncomfortable to jump out of bed on cold nights. He has both lights and heavies, and the red-flannel weather of Vermont and Quebec called for the heavies.

Churchill Says Peace Depends On English-speaking Peoples

DEC 30 1941

Prime Minister Tells Ottawa Salvation of World Lies in Hands of British Empire and America.

DEC 30 1941

Ottawa, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the Canadian Cabinet today upon his arrival from Washington that he believed that the salvation of the world depended on an organization having the English-speaking peoples as its core. The British leader spoke at a luncheon, congratulating Canada on the Dominion's war effort. After a round of conferences here it is expected he will return to Washington.

A member of the Prime Minister's entourage let it be known that Mr. Churchill left the United States to visit this Dominion capital because of the swift development of the strategy and supply talks in Washington and said that it was expected "far-reaching decisions can be taken" upon his return.

Canada Will Erase Debt

DEC 30 1941

Toronto, Dec. 29 (AP).—Canada plans to cancel the $1,500,000,000 debt which Britain owes her for munitions, food and raw materials, the Globe and Mail said tonight.

The cancellation will be announced during Prime Minister Churchill's current visit to Canada, the paper said, and "will convince skeptics and former isolationists in the United States that Canada is not now and never has been demanding 'cash on the barrel head' for war materials and supplies which have been shipped to Britain."

Uruguayan Police Raid Fascist Headquarters

Montevideo, Dec. 29 (AP)—The home of an Italian consular employe described as headquarters of a secret Fascist party was raided tonight by police and the Congressional committee investigating anti-Uruguayan activities. Several persons were arrested.

During the day the German Transocean News Agency and an Italian construction company also were raided. Documents were seized at all three places.

ENVOY TO REICH IS RECALLED BY ARGENTINA

Surprise Move Raises Question Of Change In Relations With Berlin

DEC 30 1941

Ambassador Is Ordered Home As Pan-America Conference Nears

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Dec. 29—Argentina recalled her Ambassador to Germany today to "give an account of some phases of his mission" in a surprise move which raised the question of a possible change in Argentine-German relations.

The Government spokesman who announced that Ambassador Ricardo Olivera had been called home did not confirm or deny that a change in the diplomatic status quo was imminent or whether Baron Edmund von Thermann, German Ambassador to Buenos Aires, might be withdrawn.

Nazi Envoy Absent

Von Thermann, who has been the target of Congressional condemnation since he was linked with pro-Nazi subversive activities in Argentina, could not be reached. His embassy said he was vacationing at Mar Del Plata, seaside resort.

It was considered significant that Olivera was called home on the eve of a Cabinet session which is expected to fix the nation's position at the Pan-American conference of Foreign Ministers in Rio de Janeiro in mid-January.

Argentina already has aligned herself with the United States, having declared the latter a non-belligerent—an action which permits United States warships and planes to refuge in Argentine harbors and fields without time limit.

At the same time, Acting President Ramon S. Castillo's regime is maintaining an attitude of neutrality toward other warring nations.

Foreign Office sources said Argentina's position at the Rio de Janeiro conference undoubtedly would be one of full solidarity with the United States, in keeping with her traditional Pan-American policy.

Recall Is Discussed

In connection with Ambassador Olivera's recall, it was noted that it was not time for his customary home leave, but it also was pointed out that Manuel Malbran, Ambassador to Rome, recently came home for consultation, but now is en route back to his post.

It was announced also that Miguel Angel Carcano, Argentine Ambassador to Vichy, has been transferred to London, succeeding Tomas Le Breton, veteran diplomat, who resigned.

German Agency Raided

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 29 (AP)—The committeee investigating anti-Uruguayan activities raided the offices of the German Transocean News Agency today and confiscated a quantity of documents.

In a raid on the premises of an Italian-owned construction company documents and Fascist insignia also were seized.

Pro-Nazi Attack Case Probed In Mexico City

DEC 30 1941

Mexico City, Dec. 29 (AP)—A formal court investigation was started today into the circumstances of an alleged pro-Nazi attack on Pablo Neruda, Chilean consul general, in a German restaurant at Cuernavaca Sunday night.

Under medical care at his home, Neruda said that as he and friends were toasting Presidents Roosevelt and Avila Camacho his assailants, "in military formation," descended upon him and struck him with a blackjack.

There were ten or thirteen men in the group, he said, and as they approached to assault him they had their arms raised in a typical Nazi salute. Police held the restaurant owner for questioning.

Mexico Checks Up On Axis Aliens

Mexico City, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Germans, Italians and Japanese living along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Mexico—including those who have acquired Mexican citizenship—were today ordered to present their papers immediately for inspection by the immigration authorities.

It was announced that this was part of the Government system for keeping a strict check on their movements.

Mexican Senate Okays Claims Accord With U. S.

Approval Given Pact Providing Settlement Of Oil Dispute, Among Other Things

DEC 30 1941

Mexico City, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Senate today approved the recent accords reached on all outstanding claims between Mexico and the United States.

The accords, which have the status of a treaty requiring such Senate ratification, were voted on by a show of hands. The senior house also approved the interchange of notes between the two governments which set up a plan for reaching an agreement on the question of the expropiated oil properties.

Under the claims accord, Mexico will pay $40,000,000 to settle all United States claims except in the matter of the oil properties. The plan for settling these calls for the appointment of one expert by each government to reach an agreement on the value of the properties.

United States

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—On the basis of reports received before 9 A. M., the Navy Department issued this communiqué today:

Far East: United States submarines have sunk two additional ships of the enemy. One was a transport, the other a supply vessel.

During enemy air operations one of our destroyers was attacked. Slight damage and minor casualties resulted.

Central Pacific: Thirteen survivors of the S. S. Prusa, torpedoed by an enemy submarine on Dec. 18, have been rescued.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

A War Department communiqué, outlining the situation as of 9:30 A. M.:

1. Philippine Theatre: The commanding general, United States Army Forces in the Far East, has consolidated the majority of his troops in Pampanga Province and shortened his lines.

In the last few days the enemy has been heavily reinforced by several infantry divisions, tank regiments and horse cavalry. Japanese units are composed of veteran soldiers with modern equipment.

American and Philippine troops, despite constant fighting against heavy odds, are in high spirits and are offering stubborn resistance.

Losses have been heavy on both sides.

Enemy air activity continues heavy, with repeated bombing of Manila in violation of the declaration of an open city.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

Later the War Department issued this communiqué, covering the situation as of 5 P. M.:

1. Philippine Theatre: A very large force of enemy aircraft bombed the coast defense of Manila Bay continuously for three hours. At least four Japanese bombers were shot down by anti-aircraft batteries.

No important ground operations were reported from either the Lingayen or Atimonan sectors.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

MANILA, Dec. 29 (AP)—Headquarters of the United States forces issued this communiqué today:

The enemy continues to build up its forces and is maintaining steady pressure in the south.

No material change in the situation in the north.

MANILA, Tuesday, Dec. 30 (AP)—The following United States communiqué was issued 11:45 A. M. today:

Everything is quiet.

British

LONDON, Dec. 29 (AP).—A communique issued jointly by the Admiralty, Army and Royal Air Force:

The following details have been received from combined operations headquarters in amplification of yesterday's communique about a small raid carried out Saturday, Dec. 27:

The raid was directed mainly against enemy shipping anchored off Vaagso, an island situated in latitude 62 degrees off the Norwegian coast.

Although only on a small scale, the raid was a good example of a combined operation in which the Royal Navy, Army and Air Force each played an equally important and interlocking part.

DEC 30 1941

Light forces of the Home Fleet arrived off Vaagso Island just before daylight at 8:30 a. m. and, under cover of a smokescreen laid by Hampden aircraft of the Bomber Command, military forces consisting of Commandos and some Norwegian troops landed ten minutes later in naval assault-landing craft.

Rear Admiral H. M. Burrough, C. B., was in command of the naval forces, and Brigadier J. C. Haydon, D. S. O., O. B. E., was in command of the military forces.

Coast defense batteries manned by Germans opened fire on our ships, but were silenced by a bombardment from our warships and bombing by Hampden aircraft of the Bomber Command. The latter also laid smokescreens to mask our ships and machine-gunned batteries and near-by barracks on Ragsundo Island.

There were two main military landings—one on the small island of Maaloy and the other at the southwestern extremity of the town of South Vaagso.

The entire garrison of Maaloy was either killed or taken prisoner, and military storehouses and ammunition dumps were blown up. A battery of four guns was destroyed.

At South Vaagso the Germans put up stiff resistance, and in street fighting we suffered some casualties before the town could be brought completely under our control.

An enemy tank was put out of action and oil tanks and ammunition stores were destroyed. A wireless station and a certain industrial plant, owned by a Quisling and known to be operating for the Germans, was destroyed.

A total of eight enemy ships, including five merchant vessels, two armed trawlers and one armed tug, totaling 15,650 tons, were destroyed.

Merchant vessels beached themselves to avoid capture and were destroyed by our naval forces. Armed vessels were sunk.

An offensive patrol in conjunction with this operation was carried out by Blenheim aircraft of the Bomber Command. They encountered and attacked a convoy of enemy merchant ships. Many bombs fell among them and one ship was sunk.

While operations were taking place at Vaagso, Blenheim aircraft of the Bomber Command were attacking Herdla, nearest enemy airdrome 100 miles down the coast. Direct hits from a height of 250 feet were obtained on the wooden runways of this airdrome, and an ME-109 which was taxiing at the time was destroyed. Huts and the wireless station near by were machine-gunned.

From all these Bomber Command operations eight of our aircraft are missing but one member of a Hampden crew was rescued by our ships.

DEC 30 1941

The damage to the Herdla runways undoubtedly reduced the scale of air attack on our ships, which were protected by Beaufighters and Blenheim fighters of the coastal command. During a series of fights which went on throughout the day they shot down four enemy HE-111's and prevented any successful attack being made on our ships. Three of our fighters are missing.

Our ships suffered only very minor damage and all returned fit for immediate service.

Our casualties were slight. The next of kin are being informed.

More than 120 Germans were killed and ninety-five German naval and military prisoners and nine Quislings have been brought back.

The entire combined operation went exactly according to plan, and all our objectives were attained within the time allowed, all forces withdrawing at 2:45 p. m.

An Air Ministry communique:

Aircraft of the bomber command again went in force to Germany last night. The weather was good and the main objectives, Wilhelmshaven, Emden and industrial districts in the Rhineland, were heavily bombed.

Other targets attacked included docks at Dunkerque and enemy airdromes in Holland.

Coastal command aircraft made attacks on enemy shipping during the night. Off the Dutch coast two ships were hit with bombs.

Fighter command aircraft on night offensive patrol attacked airdromes and other targets in occupied France and Holland.

From these operations seven aircraft of the bomber command are missing.

CAIRO, Dec. 29 (AP).—A Middle East command communique:

The enemy's main forces in the Agedabia area yesterday made efforts to repulse our columns closing in from the south. In one engagement an enemy column, including tanks, was compelled to retreat to the west with a loss of six tanks.

Northeast of Agedabia our artillery successfully engaged an enemy motor transport column.

In addition to heavy attacks on the enemy isolated in Bardia, our air forces continued their attacks on enemy motor transport on roads westward from Agedabia, damaging or destroying a considerable number of vehicles.

A Royal Air Force Middle East command communique:

Throughout yesterday bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. and Free French air force continued raids on objectives within the Bardia perimeter. Many direct hits were obtained on gun defensive positions.

DEC 30 1941

Elsewhere fighter aircraft intercepted a formation of enemy torpedo bombers which attempted unsuccessfully to attack our shipping. One bomber was shot down into the sea.

A JU-88 was shot down by one of our fighters in the Gazala region, the crew being taken prisoner.

Fighter aircraft of the R. A. F. and South African air force successfully attacked an enemy motor transport on the Jedabya-El Aghella Road Saturday. A number of lorries were destroyed and many others damaged. Fires followed the attacks.

Saturday night the quays, the castello, the railway station and the Harbor of Tripoli again were effectively raided. A violent explosion occurred, but a thick cloud prevented detailed observation of the results of the attack.

An enemy transport south of Marset Marean and at Zuara also was bombed.

Enemy aircraft which raided Malta Saturday night were intercepted by night fighters. One of the enemy bombers was shot down in flames.

From these and other operations one of our aircraft is missing.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 29 (AP).—A British headquarters communique:

On the Perak front our forces are in close contact with the enemy south of Ipoh.

Elsewhere in Malaya the situation remains unchanged.

On the east coast, at Kuantan, some enemy aircraft bombed and machine-gunned our position. No damage or casualties were reported.

Reports regarding Sarawak confirm the Japanese occupation of Kuching.

Medium bombers of the R. A. F. carried out another attack on the airdrome at Sungei Patani last night, causing a number of fires and explosions. Reconnaissances confirm that during the attack on the same target on the previous night seven enemy fighters and three heavy bombers were destroyed and five other enemy fighters badly damaged.

Enemy aircraft carried out raids on Medan (Sumatra) and port Sweetenham (Malaya) yesterday. Slight damage has been reported. One enemy aircraft was shot down by anti-air-craft fire at port Swetenham and at least one other was damaged.

BATAVIA, Dec. 29 (AP).—A Netherlands East Indies fighting services communique:

Reports are coming from various places in the outer provinces about enemy air activity and of enemy bombings, while there also have been certain instances of machine-gun attacks. Although various military posts have been machine-gunned, there are no military losses to report. One Indonesian civilian, however, was killed, while one Indonesian fisherman was slightly wounded.

A Japanese cruiser steaming north of Celebes was set afire by bombs dropped by Australian Hudson aircraft stationed on one of the Netherlands Indies airdromes.

As was previous reported, seventeen Japanese bombers attacked the airdrome of Medan. This airdrome was damaged. A direct hit was caused on the K. N. I. L. M. (Royal Netherlands Indies Airline) office. A. K. L. M. (Royal Dutch Airline) plane which was about to take off was burned out. At present casualties are reported to amount to thirty dead and seventy injured. Further particulars are awaited.

Glenn Martin bombers of the Netherlands Indies military air force attacked Miri again and scored one direct hit and several near misses on a large Japanese transport ship. Probably twelve Japanese fighters were shot down. Further particulars are awaited.

Chinese

CHUNGKING, Dec. 29 (AP).—A Chinese communique:

Chinese forces are resisting the enemy along the entire northern Hunan front.

Strong Japanese detachments appeared on the south bank of the Yellow River in the vicinity of Kweiyi Saturday afternoon. By midnight the enemy had brought about 6,000 troops across and was fully engaged by Chinese. Both sides suffered heavy casualties during this encounter.

More successes were achieved Sunday morning, and the Japanese were unable to advance farther southward. Chinese forces had been raining onslaughts on them at every point.

The Japanese left flank suffered particularly heavy losses on the North Kiangsi front, with a pitched battle raging in the Nanchang area. An enemy detachment entered Hawan, a highway town south of Nanchang, Saturday afternoon. A continuous battle has been fought on its outskirts. The Japanese strength is estimated at 4,000 men.

Meanwhile, the enemy's thrust against Chinese positions at Wuning, northwest of Nanchang, has been checked after several days of hard fighting.

The Chinese are stubbornly holding out northeast of a highway town on the south Anhwei front.

The Japanese were driven back to their original positions southeast of Kweichin on the south bank of the Yangtse River. One enemy detachment has been surrounded by Chinese forces.

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 29 (AP).—Tonight's Soviet Information Bureau communique:

During Dec. 29 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

On several sectors of the front our troops, overcoming attempts of the German Army to hold new defense lines, continued to advance and occupied a number of populated centers.

The enemy is suffering heavy losses.

On Dec. 28 our air force brought down twenty-six German planes. Our losses were six planes.

The mid-day communique:

During the night of Dec. 28-29 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

One tank unit during two days drove the enemy out of eighteen inhabited places and captured thirty tanks, 250 motor vehicles, fifteen guns and seven machine-guns.

Our air force, operating on the southern front, during one day's operations destroyed forty-two lorries, two motor cars, eight tanks, ten field guns, seven anti-aircraft guns, seventy supply wagons and anihilated 1,000 enemy infantry.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 29 (Official broadcast recorded by AP).—A high command communique:

On the eastern front defensive fighting continued with undiminished violence.

In renewed air attacks against movements of enemy ships and troops in Kerch Straits, a transport was sunk and six further transports as well as numerous smaller vessels were damaged.

In North Africa the enemy made contact with German-Italian positions in the Agedabia area. In successful counter-attacks fifty-eight British tanks as well as a large number of armored patrol cars and motor vehicles were destroyed.

In Cyrenaica enemy airdromes and troop concentrations were bombed.

In the waters north of Tobruk German bombers scored several hits on a British destroyer and on a merchant ship sailing in convoys.

A German submarine attacked a military convoy off Matruh, sinking two transports totaling some 9,000 gross tons. Another ship was damaged by torpedo hits.

German bombers attacked with good effect by day and night British airdromes and port installations on Malta.

During last night British bombers attacked localities in western Germany and in the northern German coastal region. The civilian population, particularly in Emden, suffered losses in dead and injured. Nine of the attacking British bombers were shot down.

A further British aircraft was downed while trying to fly into occupied territory in the daytime.

In the defensive fighting of the last few days, Lieutenant Muegge, leader of an infantry battalion, greatly distinguished himself. With very weak forces, he repelled strongly superior enemy forces which had broken through. Deciding by himself on a counter-attack, he took a locality occupied by the enemy and held it against further strong attacks. Der Feuhrer decorated Lieutenant Muegge with the Knight's Cross of the Iron Cross.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 29 (official broadcast recorded by AP).—A high command communique:

The enemy attempted to surround one of our positions in the Agedabia region with large armored forces. Quickly halted by the reaction of our artillery and counter attacks on his flanks by Italian and German mechanized divisions, the enemy was severely beaten. Fifty-eight English tanks as well as a number of armored cars and trucks were destroyed and some captured.

There is nothing important to report on the Bardia and Sollum fronts.

The German air force attacked the Island of Malta repeatedly and three enemy planes were shot down.

German fighter planes engaged and forced down between Noto and Rosolim an English tri-motored bomber which was attempting to fly over Catania. Its crew of six was captured.

In the eastern Mediterranean our torpedo planes attacked an enemy naval formation, hitting a heavy cruiser and two large steamships.

Two Curtiss planes escorting a convoy were shot down in an air fight. One of our planes failed to return. Three others seriously damaged were able to reach our bases.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Dec. 29 (AP).—A high command communique:

KARELIAN ISTHMUS: There was local artillery and trench mortar harassing fire and patrol activity.

SVIR RIVER FRONT: In the central sector after yesterday's battle 145 enemy dead were counted. Thirty-five fortified dugouts and twenty-five semi-fortified dugouts were captured. War booty included numerous machine firearms and rifles.

In the eastern sector the enemy launched an attack last night which was repulsed after a two-hour battle. There was mild harassing fire and patrol activity by both sides on all sectors of the eastern front.

During the last few days our air force continued to bomb the Murmansk rail line north of Manselka. Numerous direct hits were scored on tracks and railroad stock.

The other day a heavy bomb destroyed a transport train. In addition, a repair train coming to the aid of the transport sustained a direct hit.

STIMSON ASKS WOMEN'S UNIT IN U. S. ARMY

Volunteer Corps Would Be Used In Rear-Line War Services

Paid, Uniformed Organization Would Release Men To Fight

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 29—Creation of a volunteer women's auxiliary corps which would take over many rear-line duties now performed by army regulars was recommended today by Secretary of War Stimson.

In a letter to the House Military Affairs Committee, he indorsed a bill introduced by Representative Rogers (Rep., Mass.) for formation of a paid, uniformed feminine corps serving directly with the army.

"At the present time," Stimson wrote, "there is no shortage of man power in this country; nevertheless, there are a great many types of duty in the corps area service commands and the aircraft warning service for which women are better fitted than men, and the employment of women on such duty would increase efficiency and release men for more intensive work or combat service."

Would Get Army Pay

The Secretary of War said the size of the auxiliary would be dependent upon military requirements and "cannot be determined at the present time." He estimated its cost at $3,000,000 for 1942.

Chairman May (Dem., Ky.) previously had assured Mrs. Rogers that the Military Affairs Committee would begin hearings on her proposal after obtaining an opinion on its merits from the War Department.

Under Mrs. Rogers' bill, the pay for women who enlisted would start at $21 a month, just as in the regular army. Officers would be trained at special schools.

No Conflict With OCD

Stimson said the auxiliary would not replace or conflict with activities now under the supervision of the Office of Civilian Defense.

One or more companies would be stationed at each large army post or camp, he said, and its personnel would be given such assignments as clerks, machine operators, cooks and bakers, stewardesses, telephone and telegraph operators, pharmacists, dietitions, hygienists, hospital and laboratory technicians, hostesses, librarians, theater employes, welfare workers, post exchange employes and laundry workers.

Aircraft Warning Unit

Stimson said an aircraft warning section would be set up in the auxiliary, and indicated it would supersede the present volunteers procured by the Office of Civilian Defense.

He explained that the filter and information centers of the aircraft warning service called for use of highly specialized installations "which cannot function properly with part of the operating personnel absent."

The army at present cannot compel attendance of volunteers.

ARMS SPENDING IN DECEMBER TOPS '18 TOTAL

Washington, D. C., Dec. 29 (AP). The Treasury disclosed today that in the first 26 days of this month it spent $2,197,358,728, as compared with $2,061,000,000 in December, 1918, the most expensive month in the first World War.

Defense accounted for $1,585,968,821 of the 1941 spending. Official records did not show exactly how much of the 1918 expenditure went directly for war purposes, but a substantial part of it was money lent to the Allies.

Arms to the Last

In the 1941 counterpart of such loans, lend-lease expenditures in the first 26 days of December aggregated $227,264,706. The Army took more than half of the defense total, spending $839,724,360. The Navy spent $415,861,130.

On a fiscal year basis, World War totals were due for overshadowing. In the most expensive fiscal year of the World War, the Government spent $18,522,895,000. In the current fiscal year, with a little more than six months yet to go, spending already aggregates $11,193,115,238. Moreover, the rate of spending has been growing rapidly and the latest Budget Bureau estimate, made before the war, places the full year's spending at $24,500,000,000.

Bigger Spending Ahead.

Defense has cost $8,000,000,000 since the fiscal year began, and is slated to cost at least $10,000,000,000 more by July 1.

Even larger spending programs are in the making, possibly calling for a budget of $50,000,000,000 in the next fiscal year. A glimpse of these plans is due in about two weeks when President Roosevelt will send his budget message to Congress.

Sees 24-Billion War Industry by April, '42

American munition manufacture and defense construction will be moving at the rate of $24,000,000,000 a year by the end of March, 1942, according to official figures presented yesterday at the Allied Social Science Association conference in the Hotel Biltmore.

"And it will be closer to 30 billions, if military pay and subsistence are taken into account," said the paper presented at the conference in behalf of Dr. Morris A. Copeland, director of the Bureau of Research and Statistics of the OPM.

Says U. S. Rate Tops Nazis.

Lester Kellogg, another OPM official whose paper was read for him, said that the rate of rearmament in the United States was faster than in Germany or any other country. He said that by the end of this year Germany would have captured or built $100,000,000,000 worth of military materials.

Prof. A. Lincoln Lavine, of St. John's University, pleaded for some means of enforcing international law in his discussion of the world as it should be after this war.

Sees New Arms Conference.

"If we come through the Hitlerian menace with our basic ideals intact, we shall doubtless hold another disarmament conference very shortly after international affairs come back to some semblance of order," he said.

"It will be a meeting, perhaps, on which the entire future of civilized man will depend," he added. "And, if it is to be more than just another meeting, it will not be enough to check the guns outside. A trustworthy committee will have to keep the guns and use them, if necessary, on any varmint that threatens the public peace."

Nazi Plans For Bigger Grain Crop Hit Snags

DEC 30 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 29—Germany, the Agriculture Department reported today, has encountered trouble in her campaign for a bigger 1942 crop of the bread grains so important to Europe's food supply.

Unfavorable fall weather and an acute shortage of farm labor are said to have interfered with the Nazi effort to obtain a material increase in seedings of winter bread grains for harvest next summer.

Wintry weather set in early this year, especially in southern countries, and checked plantings. As a consequence, seeded acreages of winter wheat and rye generally have not come up to expectations. The department said it was possible that the total acreage would be under last season's.

Third Short Crop Possible

Unless spring sowings offset winter deficits, Europe may have a third consecutive short wheat crop. Production has been estimated at only about 1,320,000,000 bushels this year, compared with normal harvest of more than 1,700,000,000 bushels. The 1940 crop amounted to only 1,227,000,000 bushels.

The department said reports indicated that German plans to seed winter wheat in occupied areas of Russia had failed.

In Italy, where food is said to be running low, a shortage of labor made it impossible to increase wheat acreages, the department said.

Rumanian, Russ Situations

In the Danube basin, especially in Rumania, an unusually early and severe winter has been reported. Normally, this area produces surplus wheat for Germany. French farmers were directed by the Germans, the department said, to seed more winter wheat. No reports on acreage actually planted in France or Germany itself are avaliable here.

Officials said the Germans had hoped to obtain a large crop of wheat from occupied Russia. Farm machinery was said to have been moved into Russia behind the invading German army. However, the army's original advance was slower than had been expected, and it has been followed by a retreat. As a result, there was not sufficient time to carry out seeding operations before the severe Russian winter began.

The grain situation was said by the department to be brighter in North Africa, the greater part of which is nominally controlled by the French Vichy regime.

HARD BLOWS AT FOE URGED BY EINSTEIN

Predicts Success For Democracies, But Says We Must Sacrifice

DEC 30 1941

Physicist Has Changed Pacifist Views, Due To Dictatorships

[By the Associated Press]

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 29—Dr. Albert Einstein, renowned German Jewish refugee scientist and once a militant pacifist, said tonight the democracies eventually would win over the totalitarian powers, but that "we must strike hard and leave the breaking to the other sides."

"I believe it (the war) will come out well for the democracies, but it will be costly and we'll need big sacrifices," declared Einstein, now an American citizen, in an interview at his home before he addressed the forty-third annual meeting of the American Physical Society.

It was one of the few interviews he has granted since he came to this quiet university town in 1933 as a life member of the Institute for Advanced Study.

Finally Grants Interview

The 62-year-old mathematician and physicist, whose theory of relativity ranks with the major scientific contributions of all time, granted the interview when the reporter, who was at first declined an audience, submitted this question to Einstein in writing:

"You once were credited with saying: 'Militant pacifism is refusal to engage in war service of any kind, under any circumstances. I advise recruiting of people for this idea all over the world.' Since the world has changed very much since that time, have your ideas on the subject changed also?"

Explains Earlier Stand

Later, seated in the study of his modest, green-shuttered home and wearing a bright red oval-neck sweater, the thick-set scientist with the great shock of unruly white hair, puffed on his curved pipe and said, in his accented voice:

"In the twenties, when no dictatorships existed, I advocated that refusing (to war) would mean making war improper.

"As soon as conditions came about that in certain states there was so much coercion that this method could not be employed, I felt that it would weaken the less aggressive nations in the face of the more aggressive."

Einstein said with a smile that his altered views became known and that pacifists criticized his change of opinion.

Asked As To Disintegration

The scientist, whose books on theoretical physics now are banned in most of Nazi-occupied Europe, was then asked whether he, as one who had lived in a region that now is totalitarian, had any reason to believe there were signs of disintegration.

"I have no methods of observation," he said, "and reports are vague. The conditions in those countries are so rigid that a change can come only suddenly.

"It goes to the breaking point. I cannot judge how close they are to that point. But in 1918, it came suddenly, like the breaking of hard material, without any sign before."

German Ex-Chancellor, Now At Harvard, Says Nazi Production Drops

DEC 30 1941

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Heinrich Brüning, chancellor of the German Republic in 1930-32 and now professor of public administration at Harvard, said today he had received recent information from Germany indicating that "there had been a slow process of disintegration" in the Nazis' production program.

Brüning told a panel group of the American Political Science Association that he believed that "disintegration" was due to the fact that the entire economic life of Germany, especially the armament industry, had been taken over by the army's general staff officers.

"Everything is unfinished," he said. "The blue print plans have not been carried out. The life that formerly pulsed in the various organizations or production has largely vanished."

No Berlin Evidence For Nazi Agency Trial

Cleveland Patternmaker's Plea Ruled Out By Judge, Who Orders Prompt Proceedings

Cleveland, Dec. 29 (AP)—Charged with failure to register as a German agent, Karl Zanziger, 47, contended a committee should be appointed to go to Berlin for depositions in his case. "Impossible," Federal Judge Robert N. Wilkin ruled today in ordering a prompt trial.

Zanziger, a pattern maker at a Cleveland defense plant until his recent additional arrest as an "enemy alien," made the motion before the nited States and Germany declared war. He also asked delay of the trial until witnesses could be brought from Berlin. In opposing the motions, Francis B. Kavanagh, acting District Attorney, said sufficient witnesses were obtainable in the United States.

Wild Rubber In Amazon Valley Suggested For U. S. Supply

Harvey Firestone Says There Are 300,000,000 Trees There—Suggests Price Hike To Get It Out

DEC 30 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 29—Wild rubber trees in the Amazon Valley were suggested tonight by Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., as an emergency source of crude rubber for the United States.

The Firestone Tire and Rubber Company executive said in a radio broadcast that it has been estimated there are about 300,000,000 wild rubber trees deep in the Brazilian jungles, which might be utilized to replace the sources of supply in the Far East, now under attack by Japanese forces.

Rubber experts report that the Amazon Valley once was the sole source of crude rubber, the industry there reaching its peak in 1912 with shipments of 45,000 tons. The shipments dwindled to nothing with the development of cultivated rubber in Sumatra, Java and Malaya.

The Brazilian trees "have not been tapped because the price of rubber is lower than the price needed to provide an incentive to the natives to blaze the jungle trails to tap the wild rubber trees and bring the rubber to market," said Firestone.

Industry spokesmen say a price of about 35 cents a pound probably would provide sufficient incentive. Crude rubber has been pegged at 22½ cents. Synthetics generally range above 35 cents.

Firestone referred to Japanese attacks on the Far East as "an attempt to slow the wheels of American industry," called upon consumers to cooperate in the conservation of their tires, and to "accept rationing as necessary."

Barbaric Jap Practices Conform to Nazi Code

DEC 30 1941

By DeWITT MACKENZIE.

The position of the Philippines is increasingly grim and grave, but while we shouldn't seek refuge in dim hopes we are not yet forced to final conclusions regarding the outcome, especially since the United States Navy promises "positive assistance to the defense of the Philippine Islands."

Of course we can accept it as certain that unless "positive assistance" does arrive, the islands will be temporarily lost. The Japs are continuing to land troops in southern Luzon, the menace to Manila increases, and in due course the invading weight will become unbearable if it isn't halted.

Obviously much depends on the nature of the aid and how quickly it arrives. The immediate burden rests on Gen. MacArthur and his magnificent little army, that is, the problem of hanging on until help comes over the horizon of the vast Pacific. That burden is great, for the Japs are going all out in an effort to make a quick killing—and they are doing it without regard to the laws of humanity.

Example of Absent Sentiment.

The deliberate slaughter of civilians in the defenseless and open city of Manila by Japanese bombers gives fresh point to a threat made just before Christmas by Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels. He declared that Germany, Italy and Japan are "going all the way" in the war and, being forced to defend their lives, "they will do it in a manner which knows no sentimental considerations."

Now the Japs have interpreted his meaning in a bloody holocaust of innocents. They have staged a studied exhibition of frightfulness, after a careful survey of Manila from the air to make sure that it was indeed without defense. The purpose of this was to shatter the morale of the civilian population and thus cause a collapse of Filipino resistance.

What the ordinarily softly spoken Secretary Hull describes as the same practices of fiendishness have been employed against the Chinese, in defiance of numerous protests by our State Department.

However, it isn't surprising that this should be so, and it seems to me that we should adjust our outlook to a situation which is likely to intensify. In this connection we have the sensational statement made in Istanbul by George H. Earle, American Minister to Bulgaria, who was rushed out of Bulgaria because of rumors of a Nazi plot against him.

Prophecy of Vandalism.

Earle asserted that "German fortunes definitely are declining but the death throes may be unprecedentedly violent." He added that there is some evidence the Nazis are planning to destroy everything in any of the occupied countries which they are forced to leave—the "biggest vandalism in history."

So far as concerns the Japs, there have been constant reports of barbaric practices in China. For example, quite apart from charges of massacres and use of poison gas—which might conceivably be Chinese propaganda—on October 13 last we had a dreadful story from members of American missionary families at Changsha regarding the Japanese occupation of that city from September 27 to 30.

These Americans stated that the invaders carried out executions, looted and burned. They said the Yale-in-China Hospital treated Chinese with deep gashes in their necks, inflicted by Japs trying to behead them with long swords.

Well, that's the sort of people we are up against and we might as well steel ourselves for nasty developments. After all, we mustn't overlook that the Japanese have partaken only slightly of Western civilization. Their impulses are primitive—those of a thousand years ago.

They are pagans, and it's well not to forget that many of the fanatical Nazis also have embraced paganism. In other words, we are at grips with forces from out of the dark past—an almost unbelievable adventure in the world of centuries ago.

Thus we must prepare ourselves for the shock of further atrocities of all sorts.

Pair Are Exonerated In Alleged Conspiracy

Government Declared To Have No Case Against Shipping Agents

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Marcelino Garcia and Manuel Diaz, heads of the shipping agency bearing their names, were exonerated in Federal Court today of complicity in an alleged conspiracy to violate the Neutrality Act by seeking to ship abroad certain articles without the necessary export licenses.

The two agents, together with Capt. Jose Alberti and Radio Operator Eduardo Ferrando, of the Spanish steamship Isle de Tenerife, were arrested December 15 after Federal agents learned that radio equipment, lubricating oils and silk had been placed aboard the vessel as ship's stores.

Jerome Doran, assistant United States attorney, requested Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard to dismiss the complaint against Garcia and Diaz, saying that the Government had no case against them.

NEW YORK, DEC 29-(AP)-A UNITED STATES SHIP HAS ARRIVED HERE WITH 19 SURVIVORS OF THE AMERICAN FREIGHTER SAGADAHOC, WHICH WAS TORPEDOED BY AN AXIS SUBMARINE DEC. 3 ON HER WAY TO SOUTH AFRICA.

CHIEF OFFICER NORRIS CHADBOURNE SAID THE CREWMEN WERE RESCUED AFTER SEVEN AND A HALF DAYS IN A LIFEBOAT. HE SAID 16 MORE SAILORS IN ANOTHE LIFEBOAT, INCLUDING CAPT.FREDERICK EVANS, HAD REACHED SOUTH AFRICA SAFELY.

ONLY ONE CASUALTY WAS REPORTED BY THE SURVIVORS, WHO SAID ANTHONY CASTRO PROBABLY WAS KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION THAT FOLLOWED THE TORPEDOING. CASTRO WAS DESCRIBED AS A U.S.CITIZEN OF SPANISH BIRTH.

CHADBOURNE SAID THE FREIGHTER, HIT AT DUSK, SANK 20 MINUTES AFTER ROLLING OVER. HE DECLARED THE TWO LIFEBOATS STAYED TOGETHER FOR SEVERA DAYS AND THEN BECAME SEPARATED IN THE DARKNESS.

THE SAGADAHOC LEFT NEW YORK NOV. 7.

BOTH LIFEBOATS WERE PICKED UP BY AMERICAN SHIPS.

CHADBOURNE WOULD NOT IDENTIFY THE SUBMARINE WHICH FIRED THE TORPEDO, BUT SAID THE SUBMARINE COMMANDER OFFERED NO ASSISTANCE. HE ADDED THAT THE COMMANDER SAID HE WAS SORRY THE SURVIVORS COULD NOT BE TAKEN ON BOARD THE SUBMARINE.

THE FREIGHTER DID NOT HAVE TIME TO SEND A RADIO MESSAGE FOR ASSISTANCE, THE CHIEF OFFICER SAID.

JAMES MORGAN, 76, OF JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA, WAS THE ONLY PASSENGER ON THE FREIGHTER. HE HAD BEEN VISITING HIS SON, JAMES MORGAN, JR., OF (3529 W. 118 ST.) CLEVELAND, O.

That New Nazi Religion

(Editor's Note: In one of the final stories to be dispatched from Germany before complete censorship brought by the war, Edwin Shanke of the Berlin Associated Press bureau discusses significant features of a new book, "Gott Und Volk" (God and Nation) which outlines a religious new order for Germany.)

BERLIN—The contention that Germany is awakening to a new religious order is set forth in "Gott Und Volk," anonymously written book by a fiery young Nazi which, despite wartime paper limitations, already has 200,000 copies in circulation.

"The fact that many persons no longer call themselves Christians without reflecting, that religion is being discussed everywhere today, that in many churches there is gaping emptiness, that youth would rather draw its strength by the glow of fires on hilltops—that is a good sign, a sign that our nation is not sleeping," the book sets forth.

Elsewhere the book reports that "Germans at last want to be Germans and are seeking their way toward God. . . . We do not want to tear down cathedrals. We want to fill them with a new spirit, want to proclaim new faith in them."

SOME of the views contained in "Gott Und Volk" relative to the "new order" are:

PRAYER—"A person can pray. Only he doesn't stammer out cowardly requests. Nor does he implore for mercy or charity. . . . So many of the beautiful words that bible devotees feign do not belong in manly prayer. Sometimes (it may be) only a short inner pulling together, a solemn pledge, a glance toward the Fuehrer or flag, a friendly word or experience of nature."

BAPTISM AND CONFIRMATION—"We will take up new born in the community of the nation, not as Catholics, not as Protestants, but as Germans. . . . And we will not obtain salvation through holy water and prayer. We will earn the honor of being full Germans."

MARRIAGE—"In the future there will be only German consecration of marriage. Marriages will not be concluded in the name of the church."

BIBLE—"The history of our people is our holy scripture. It is written with blood. . . . Take this book (Old Testament) and burn it at consecrated places! Bear flames in your hearts! They are the light. And thank God that he sent the Fuehrer!"

APOSTLES—"We have enough devout Germans in our history. Hermann (a Germanic tribe chieftain), Ekkehard (German historian), Widukind (leader of the Saxons against Karl the Great in the 8th century), Fichte (late 18th and early 19th century German philosopher influenced by Kant) and Arndt (political writer and poet of the early 19th century) belong in the hearts of our youth, and not Jewish apostles."

GOOD AND BAD—"With recognition of the value of race and blood, a new appreciation of our entire life has begun. The race and nation have been raised by holy ideas. They are the sign of our time and law for the future. Whatever serves this law is good and shall remain. Whatever this law does not recognize is bad and must be changed."

CULTURE—"The church calls today for defense of Christian culture. The call is too late. The age of Christian culture is past. We have begun the German age, and only German culture has anything to say."

GERMANY—"Germany is eternal conception. When Christianity belongs to the past, Germany will be the first to begin to live. . . . Whoever believes in Germany also believes in good. . . . Christianity is international. We are German. Therefore, we cannot be Christians."

* * *

DUTY—"A German has two obligations, earthly and heavenly. As long as he has two masters, the fuehrer and the Savior, he will not find the way to eternity."

SIN—"Sin is what damages our nation. Sin is what adulterates our blood. The Ten Commandments are not enough for us. They sprang from cares about personal well being; not, however, from responsibility before the life of the nation which is our belief."

LOVE—"Love must be without limits. Half-love doesn't pay."

DEC 30 1941

WIFE—"We have our own idea of a wife. Amazons, painted dolls, so-called earthly visions leave us cold. They lack temperament. Also the chaste angel type isn't for us. We don't want a plaything who humbly drops her eyes. That would be too boring for us. Just as we try to be real he-men, we want real she-women. A soldier doesn't want a toy. He wants love hot as fire and without limits. . . . Only a few women can be sweethearts. They are the strong ones of the weaker sex. It pays to exchange hearts with them."

MISSION OF MAN AND WOMAN—"The mission of man is to conquer the world. The mission of woman is to be the sunshine in this world."

Budget Increased After Talk With Churchill; Peninsula North of Japan Hinted As Base for Future Operations

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—War expenditures at a rate of $50,000,000,000 annually by the middle of 1943 were advanced by President Roosevelt today as the goal of American industrial and military effort.

When it is reached the country will be devoting 50 per cent of its national income to the purpose of defeating the Axis. By comparison, the outlay is to be running about 27 per cent six months from now, and apparently is less than that now.

The Chief Executive revealed these figures at a press conference discussion of the budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943, which is to be sent to Congress next week. Some difficulty is being experienced, he said with the problem whether the budget figures should cover the total cost of projects begun during the year, or only actual Treasury expenditures.

Confirms Resources Pooling

He confirmed Canadian dispatches that American and Canadian military resources are being pooled. That has been going on for a month, he said, and is as old as Dec. 7 (the day the Japanese attacked Hawaii).

He would not say, however, that the money angle of the lease-lend program has been eliminated, although no thought had been given recently to the phase of the program under which military articles loaned to other nations are to be returned or replaced after the war.

While he emphasized that he is aiming at utmost utilization of the nation's productive capacity, the President said no human being could tell what would be done with the finished products — whether they might go to Russia, China, Britain, or the Kamchatka Peninsula. This peninsula, he said when reporters showed a sign of surprise, is the most practical and available piece of land west of the Aleutian Islands.

No Hint of Strategic Use

The peninsula, which is Russian territory, lies north of Japan and apparently within striking distance of that country, but the President gave no further indication how it might fit into the war strategy.

Expanding on the question of the production program, he said he had changed its name. Before the war started, he said the OPM had what was known as the all-out program or victory program. He preferred, he added, to use less dramatic terminology and call it the war program.

Before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, a budget program was drawn up which was presented to him on the day of that assault. Saying he had to be very careful these days, he applied to it the algebraic symbol X.

That evening, he continued, he looked it over and quickly came to the conclusion that it was insufficient. He sent it back with a request that Y be added to it. Then, in last week's discussions with the British, he decided, not reluctantly but gladly, that Z should be added to the combined X plus Y program.

He laughingly declined to answer a question whether "X plus Y plus Z equals 3X," but went on to say that by the end of the 1943 fiscal year, it involved devoting half of a national income of $100,000,000,000 to the war effort.

The objective was to turn America's full productive capacity into the battle against the Axis although, he said, necessary civilian production would go on. In some lines, he said, civilian production may have to be eliminated, and in others curtailed to varying extents.

With Congress knocking off work for 1941 today, Mr. Roosevelt said he would deliver his annual message on the state of the Union to a joint session on Jan. 6 or 7. The budget would, as usual, go to the Capitol on the following day.

Commenting on the President's expenditure forecast, Senator Taft (R.-O.) said he supposed it was a "reasonable expectation of what we will reach" although he was doubtful that the 50 per cent objective would be gained in the fiscal year ending in mid-1943. He thought $35,000,000,000 might be spent on the war effort in the next fiscal year against a national income of $105,000,000,000.

Senator Burton (R.-O.) said he was "just as well to have that figure (the President's) set for us and spend whatever is necessary to win the war."

Chairman Truman (D.-Mo.) of the Senate Defense Investigating Committee said the President's estimate was "conservative" and thought it might be necessary to spend more than 50 per cent of the national income.

Representative Snyder (D.-Pa.) hinted that a $40,000,000,000 appropriation might be requested for the Army alone. He had been in consultation with the White House as chairman of the appropriations sub-committee on military expenditures.

Must Assault Axis Citadels, Churchill Says

Tells Canadians That Three Phases Of War Are Ahead

Berates 'Men Of Vichy'

By LLOYD LEHRBAS

Ottawa, Dec. 30 (AP)—Bristling with confidence, Prime Minister Churchill declared to this dominion today that the conduct of this war must reach its climax in Allied assault "upon the citadel and homeland of the guilty powers, both in Europe and in Asia."

Speaking to an immediate informal joint session of the Canadian Parliament in the beautifully-appointed green room of the House of Commons and a vast radio audience beyond, Churchill declared the war's forthcoming three phases were:

1. Consolidation, of combination and of final preparation, a period "which will certainly be marked by much heavy fighting;"
2. The phase of liberation, during which "we must look to the recovery of the territories which have been lost or which may yet be lost;"
3. Assault upon the Axis' own strongholds.

Aim Of Washington Talks

Fresh from his meetings with President Roosevelt, Churchill declared the object of the Washington discussions was to insure "the total extirpation of Hitler tryanny, Japanese frenzy and the Mussolini flop."

"I have been all this week with the President of the United States, that great man whom destiny has marked for this climax of human fortunes," he said. "We have been concerting the united pacts and resolves of more than thirty states and nations to fight on in unity together. . . . There will be no halting or half measures."

"It is only when the vast shipbuilding program, on which the United States has already made so much progress and which you are powerfully aiding, comes into full flood that we shall be able to bring the whole force of our manhood and of our modern scientific equipment to bear upon the enemy. How long this period will take depends upon the vehemence of the effort put into production, in all our war industries and shipyards."

Lauds Canadian Efforts

Churchill told Canadians their contribution to the war effort had been "magnificent," and predicted that in a few months "when the invasion season returns, the Canadian army may be engaged in one of the most fateful battles the world has ever seen."

"On the other hand," he added, "their presence may help to deter the enemy from attempting to fight such a battle on British soil."

"And I think it extremely unlikely," he added, "that this war will end without the Canadian army coming to close quarters with the Germans, as their brothers did at Ypres, on the Somme, or on the Vimy Ridge."

"We Shall Conquer Together"

Of the war in the Pacific, Churchill declared:

"The British Empire and the United States are going to the aid of the Dutch. We are going to fight out this new war against Japan together; we have suffered together and we shall conquer together."

A high point of Churchill's speech—particularly for thousands of French Canadians—was his vigorous denunciation of "the men of Vichy" who deserted the common cause by not carrying on the war from Africa, and his praise of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French.

"The Vichy government has been content to live from day to day, but even this will not go on indefinitely," he asserted.

"At any moment, it may suit Hitler's plans to brush them away. Their only guarantee is Hitler's good faith which, as anyone knows by the ethics he already has displayed, bites like an adder and stings like an asp."

Vichy Envoy Hears Attack

Rene Ristelhurber, the Vichy minister to Canada, heard these blistering words from a seat among the diplomatic corps directly in front of the Prime Minister.

At one point Churchill spoke briefly in French, addressing himself to the French-speaking sector of the Dominion and pledging Britain's help for "the resurrection of the French nation." Roars of approval greeted these remarks.

The French people, were misled by their generals, he said and added: "When I warned them that Britain would fight on alone, whatever they did, their generals told their Prime Minister and his divided cabinet: 'In three weeks England will have her neck rung like a chicken.'"

He added: "Some chicken! Some neck!"

Premier Urges a Total War

(Text of Churchill's Speech on Page 7)

By The Associated Press

Ottawa, Dec. 30.—Prime Minister Churchill, in a speech filled with confidence, told the people of Canada today that the final phase of the war must be "an assault on the citadel and homeland of the guilty powers both in Europe and Asia."

Speaking by radio from the chamber of the House of Commons of Britain's senior dominion, the Prime Minister declared the final goal of the Allied democratic powers was the total extirpation of "Hitler tyranny, Japanese frenzy and the Mussolini flop."

"They have asked us for total war," he said. "Let us make sure they get it."

Fight will go on Despite all Odds

The fight will go on, whatever the odds, until the united efforts of the free peoples of the world are crowned with victory, he said.

Time and again, the crowded chamber burst into a storm of applause and cheering, especially as Churchill called a roll of the Allies, praising, one by one, the contributions to the common cause of the United States, the British Empire, Russia, The Netherlands, China and the Free French.

Britain, Canada, the United States, the furiously fighting Russians, the stout-hearted Dutch and all others fighting the Axis were applauded in turn as Churchill called the roll of the Allies.

"The invaders and tyrants," he said, will get what's coming to them, and "particular punishment will be reserved for the Quislings and traitors who make themselves the tools of the enemy."

Paying tribute to Canada's place as the hub of the Empire air training plan, Churchill said this scheme in 1942 and 1943 would provide thousands upon thousands of the highest class of trained pilots, observers and air gunners in numbers necessary to man the enormous flow of planes from American and Empire factories.

Canada's own contribution, Churchill called "magnificent."

He told the Dominion its troops stood in the key positions to defend Britain and said that enemy fear of engaging them might avert a frightful battle when the 'invasion season" comes again.

His speech was filled with jibes and taunts at the Axis partners which moved the crowded chamber to cheers and laughter, but most of it was a calm, confident review of the road already traveled and the road still left to travel.

Three Phases Remain

Three phases remain, he said: Consolidation, in which all the Allies might is marshalled; Liberation, when conquered territories are recovered and their people rise in revolt; and the assault on the Axis nations' own homelands.

Colorful Gathering

Crowded into the Commons chamber was a colorful gathering of Senators, members of Commons, high service officers and other dignitaries eager to see and hear in person the man who leads the Empire in war.

Hundreds more stood outside the Peace Tower on Parliament Hill in the crisp but sunshiny afternoon.

Canada's Prime Minister, W. L. Mackenzie King, introducing Churchill, called him "the personification of Britain's greatness."

"That greatness was never more apparent," King declared, "than in this time of gravest crisis in the history of the world."

Asserting he spoke for all Canada the Prime Minister declared Canadians "are unreservedly determined to maintain our stand at Britain's side and at the side of the other nations that fight for freedom . . . until the day of ultimate triumph over the evil forces that now seek to dominate the world."

Gets Tremendous Ovation

Churchill's entrance into the chamber was greeted with wild applause, and the applause was even louder when the Prime Minister arose to speak.

Churchill said Britons were "most grateful for all you have done in the common cause and know you are resolved" to do even more in the fight for freedom.

"Canada is a potent magnet, drawing together those in the new world and those in the old," he said.

Canada's contribution to the British war effort has been "magnificent," he asserted.

The Canadian army in Britain, he continued, is in a "key position" to strike at any invaders of Britain.

"Their presence may help to deter such a battle on British soil," he went on.

Cites Bravery At Hongkong

The Prime Minister said he thought it "unlikely" that the war would end without the Canadians coming to close quarters with the Germans "as their fathers did on the Somme and at Vimy Ridge."

He referred to Hongkong and the British work in making it a powerful port which has been "wrested from us for a time" by the overwnelming power of the home forces of Japan.

"At Hongkong, Canadian soldiers under a brave officer whose loss we mourn have played a valuable part in gaining precious days," he said.

Hails Training Of Flyers

"Another wonderful part of Canada's effort, the Prime Minister continued, is the part she is playing in having Australians and New Zealanders train in the Dominion."

"This scheme will provide us in 1942 and 1943 with the highest lot of trained observers and air gunners," he declared, adding there would be enough to man the highest production of planes.

He turned also to Canadian shipbuilding.

"I could speak on many other activities," he continued, pointing out the flow of raw materials and guns to Britain.

"Dangerous Corner Passed"

"But I must not allow my address to you to become a catalogue," he said.

"We did not make this war. We did not seek it. We did all we could to avoid it. We did too much to avoid it."

DEC 31 1941

Applause interrupted him.

Workmen swept several inches of snow off historic Parliament Hill so that the thousands unable to obtain seats or standing room in the House would have a clear space in which to stand and listen for the 30 minutes Mr. Churchill planned to talk.

The Toronto Globe and Mail meanwhile said Canada would announce cancellation of the $1,500,000,000 which Britain owes her for munitions, food and raw materials before the Prime Minister left the dominion to return to Washington.

This, the newspaper said, is intended to "convince skeptics and former isolationists in the United States that Canada is not now and never has been demanding 'cash on the barrel head.'"

Mr. Churchill pledged in a talk before Canada's war cabinet yesterday, a short time after he reached Ottawa aboard a special train from Washington, that men and nations fighting for a free world had reached "the crest of the road" to victory.

Comdr C. R. Thompson, one of his aides, said the prime minister expected that on his return to the United States capital "important detailed co-ordination work will be so well advanced that practical, far-reaching decisions can be taken."

Mr. Churchill told the war cabinet, headed by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, he believed the salvation of the world depended on an organization having English-speaking peoples as its core. He congratulated Canada on her "magnificent effort."

The Canadian prime minister introduced Mr. Churchill as "the embodiment of the determination and courage of the British people."

"Did Too Much" to Avoid War

"We did not make this war," Churchill went on. "We did not seek it. We did all we could to avoid it. We did too much to avoid it.

"We went so far in trying to avoid it as to be almost destroyed by it when it broke upon us.

"But that dangerous corner has been turned and with every month and every year that passes we shall confront the evil-doers with weapons as plentiful, as sharp, and as destructive as those with which they have sought to establish their hateful domination."

Churchill drew prolonged applause when he declared that "If anybody likes to play rough, we can play rough too."

"Hitler and his Nazi gang have sown the wind," he said—"let them reap the whirlwind.

"Neither the length of the struggle nor any form of severity which it may assume will make us weary or will make us quit.

Flays "Gang of Bandits"

"This gang of bandits have sought to darken the light of the world, have sought to stand between the common people of all the lands and their march forward into their inheritance; they shall themselves be cast into the pit of death and shame.

"And only when the Earth has been cleaned and purged of their crimes and their villainies will we turn from the task which they have forced upon us, a task which we were reluctant to undertake but which we shall now most faithfully and punctiliously discharge."

Churchill admonished his audience that this is not the time "to speak of hopes of the future or of the broader world which lies beyond our struggles and our victory."

It is the task of the Allies to win a world for their children by sacrifices.

"We Haven't Won Yet"

"We have not won it yet," he said. "The crisis is upon us. The power of the enemy is immense. If we were in any way to underrate the strength, the resources or the ruthless savagery of that enemy we should jeopardize not only our lives—for they will be offered freely—but the cause of human freedom and progress to which we have avowed ourselves and all we have."

Repeatedly Churchill was interrupted by thundering applause echoing through the normally sedate commons room.

More than 1,800 Canadian notables packed the Chamber; hundreds stood outside on snow-mantled Parliament Hill through the biting cold to listen to loud-speakers, thousands more sat at home by their radios.

DEC 31 1941

BUT WARNS HARD FIGHT WILL PRECEDE VICTORY

[By the Associated Press]

Ottawa, Dec. 30—Following is the text in full of Prime Minister Churchill's speech today before a joint session of the Canadian Parliament:

Mr. Speaker, members of the Senate and members of the House of Commons:

It gives me the feeling of pride and encouragement that I find myself here in the House of Commons of Canada invited to address the Parliament of the senior Dominion of the Crown.

I am very glad to see again my own friend, Mr. MacKenzie King, for fifteen out of twenty years your Prime Minister; and I thank him for the all too complimentary terms in which he has referred to myself.

Expresses Gratitude

I bring you, Mr. Speaker, the assurance of good will and affection from every one in the motherland. We are most grateful for all you have done in the common cause and we know that you are resolved to do whatever more is possible as the need arises and as opportunity serves.

Canada, sir, occupies a unique position in the British Empire because of its unbreakable ties with Britain and its ever growing friendship and intimate association with the United States.

Canada is a potent magnet drawing together those in the new world and in the old and fortunes are now united in a deadly struggle for life and honor against the common foe.

Canadians In Key Post

The contribution of Canada to the Imperial war effort in troops, in ships, in aircraft, in food and in finance has been magnificent. The Canadian army now stationed in England has chafed not to have been in contact with the enemy. But I am here to tell you that it has stood and still stands in the key position to strike at the invader should he land upon our shores.

In a few months, when the invasion season returns, the Canadian army may be engaged in one of the most frightful battles the world has ever seen. On the other hand, their presence may help to deter the enemy from attempting to fight such a battle on British soil.

Asks Patience

Although, sir, the long routine of training and preparation is undoubtedly trying to men who left prosperous farms and businesses or other responsible civil work inspired by an eager and ardent desire to fight the enemy, although this is trying to high-mettled temperaments, the value of the service rendered is unquestionable and the peculiar kind of self-sacrifice involved will, I am sure, be cheerfully or at best patiently endured.

Sir, the Canadian Government has imposed no limitations upon the use of the Canadian army, whether upon the Continent of Europe or elsewhere; and I think it extremely unlikely that this war will end without the Canadian army coming to close quarters with the Germans as their fathers did at Ypres, on the Somme, or on the Vimy Ridge.

Cites Heroism At Hongkong

Already at Hongkong, that beautiful colony which the industry and mercantile enterprise of Britain had raised from a desert isle and made the greatest port of shipping in the whole world; at Hongkong, that colony wrested from us for a time, until we reach the peace table by overwhelming the power of the home forces of Japan to which it lay in proximity; at Hongkong, Canadian soldiers of the Royal Rifles of Canada and the Winnipeg Grenadiers and those brave officers whose loss we mourn have played a valuable part in gaining precious days and have crowned with honor, with military honor, the reputation of their native land.

Another major contribution made by Canada to the imperial war effort is the wonderful and gigantic empire training scheme for pilots for the Royal and Imperial Air forces. This has now been, as you know well, in full career for nearly two years under conditions free from all interference by the enemy.

Cites U. S. Assistance

The daring youth of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, together with many thousands from the home land, are perfecting their training under the best conditions. And we have been assisted on a large scale by the United States, many of whose training facilities have been placed at our disposal.

This scheme will provide us in 1942 and 1943 with the highest class of trained pilots, observers and air gunners in the numbers necessary to man the enormous flow of aircraft which the factories of Britain, of the empire and of the United States are and will be producing.

DEC 31 1941

Mentions Shipbuilding

I could, sir, I could speak also on the naval production of corvettes and, above all, of merchant ships which is proceeding on a scale almost equal to the building of the United Kingdom, all of which Canada has set on foot.

I can speak of many other activities, of tanks, of the special forms of modern high-velocity cannon; of the great supplies of raw materials and many many other elements essential to our war effort on which your labors are ceaselessly and tirelessly engaged.

But I must not let my address to you become a catalogue. Now I turn to less technical fields of thought. Sir, we did not make this war, we did not seek it, we did all we could to avoid it, we did too much to avoid it.

Dangerous Corner Turned

We went so far in trying to avoid it as to be almost destroyed by it when it broke upon us. But that dangerous corner has been turned and in every month and every year that passes we shall confront the evildoers with weapons as plentiful, as sharp and as destructive as those with which they have sought to establish their hateful domination.

Now I should like to point out to you, Mr. Speaker, that we have not at any time asked for any mitigation in the fury or malice of the enemy. The peoples of the British Empire may love peace; they do not seek the lands or wealth of any country. But they are a tough and hardy lot who have not journeyed all this way across the centuries, across the oceans, across the mountains, across the prairie, because we are made of sugar candy.

"Look At The Cockneys"

Look at the Londoners, the cockneys; look how they stood up so grim and gay with their cry, "We can take it," and their wartime mood, "What's good enough for anybody is good enough for us."

We've not asked that the rules of the game should be modified. We shall never descend to the German and Japanese level, but if anybody likes to play rough we can play rough too.

Hitler and his Nazi gang have sown the wind—let them reap the whirlwind. Neither the length of the struggle, nor any form of severity which it may assume, will make us weary or will make us quit.

F.D.R. A "Man Of Destiny"

I've been all this week with the President of the United States, that great man whom destiny has marked for this climax of human fortune. We've been concerting the united pacts and resolves of more than thirty states and nations to fight on in unity together, and in fidelity, one with another without any thought except the total and final extirpation of the Hitler tyranny, of the Japanese frenzy and the Mussolini flop.

There will be no halting or half measures. There will be no compromise or parley. These gangs of bandits have sought to darken the light of the world, have sought to stand between the common people of all the lands, and thence march forward into their inheritance. They shall themselves be cast into the pits of death and shame and only when the earth has been cleansed and purged of their crime and of their villainy will we turn from the task which they have forced upon us—the task which we were reluctant to undertake, but which we shall now most faithfully and punctiliously discharge.

Silent On Future Hopes

Mr. Speaker, this is no time, according to my sense of proportion, this is no time to speak of the hopes of the future, or of the broader world which lies beyond our struggles and our victory. We have to win that world for our children. We have to win it by our sacrifices. We have not won it yet. The crisis is upon us. The power of the enemy is immense.

If we were in any way to underrate the strength, the resources, or the ruthlessness, the savagery of that enemy, we should jeopardize not only our lives, for they will be offered freely, but the cause of human freedom and progress to which we have vowed ourselves and all we have.

"We Cannot Relax"

We cannot, sir, for a moment afford to relax. On the contrary, we must drive ourselves forward with unrelenting zeal. In this strange, terrible world war there is a place for everyone—man and woman, old and young, hale and halt. Service in a thousand forms is open.

There is no room now for the dilettante, for the weakling, for the shirker or the sluggard. The mine, the factory, the dockyard, the salt-sea waves, the fields to till, the home, the hospital, the chair of the scientist, the pulpit of the preacher, from the highest to the humblest task—all are of equal honor, all have their part to play.

Calls For Total War

The enemies ranged against us, massed and combined against us, have asked for total war. Let us make sure they get it.

That grand old minstrel, Harry Lauder—Sir Harry Lauder, in fact—and no honor was better deserved—had a song in the last war which began:

"If we all look back to the history of the past, we can just tell where we are."

Let us then look back. Sir, we plunged into this war, all unprepared, because we had pledged our word to stand by the side of Poland, which Hitler had feloniously invaded and in spite of their gallant resistance had soon struck down.

Refers To "Phony War"

There followed that astonishing seven months which was called on this side of the Atlantic the "phony war."

Suddenly the explosion of pent-up German strength and preparation burst upon Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium. All these absolutely blameless neutrals, to most of whom Germany up to the last moment was giving every kind of guarantee and assurance, were overrun and trampled on. The hideous massacre of Rotterdam, where 30,000 people perished, showed the ferocious barbarism in which the German air force reveled when, entering Warsaw, and later in Belgrade, it was able to bomb practically undefended cities.

On top of all this came the great French catastrophe. The French army collapsed and the French nation was dashed into what events hence have proved so far irretrievable confusion.

Criticizes French Failure

The French Government had at their own suggestion solemnly bound themselves with us not to make a separate peace. It was their duty and it was also their interest to go to North Africa, where they would have been at the head of the French Empire. In Africa, with our aid, they would have had overwhelming sea power; they would have had the recognition of the United States and the use of all the gold they have lodged beyond the seas.

If they had done this, Italy might have been driven out of the war before the end of 1940 and France would have held her place as a nation in the councils of the Allies and at the conference table of the victors.

"Some Chicken! Some Neck!"

But their generals misled them. When I warned them that Britain would fight on alone—whatever they did—their generals told their Prime Minister and his divided Cabinet "in three weeks England will have her neck wrung like a chicken."

Some chicken!

Some neck!

What a contrast, sir, has been the behavior of the valiant, stout-hearted Dutch who still stand forth as a strong, living partner in the struggle. Their venerated Queen and Government are in England. Their Princess and her children have found asylum and protection here in your midst.

Lauds Dogged Dutch

But the Dutch nation are defending their empire with dogged courage and tenacity by land and sea and in the air. Their submarines are inflicting a heavy daily toll upon the Japanese robbers who have come across the seas to steal the wealth of the East Indies and ravage and exploit its fertility and its civilization.

The British Empire and the United States are going to the aid of the Dutch. We are going to fight out this new war against Japan together; we have suffered together and we shall conquer together.

Cites Misery In France

But the men of Bordeaux, the men of Vichy, they would do nothing like this. They lay prostrate at the foot of the conqueror. They fawned upon him. What have they got out of it? The fragment of France which was left to them is just as powerless, just as hungry as, and even more miserable, because more divided, than the occupied regions themselves.

Hitler plays from day to day a cat-and-mouse game with these tormented men. One day he will charge them a little less for holding their countrymen down. Another day he will let out a few thousand broken prisoners of war from the million and a half or million and three quarters he has collected. Or, again, he will shoot a hundred French hostages to give them a taste of the lash.

A Poor Guarantee

And on these blows and favors the Vichy Government has been content to live from day to day, but even this will not go on indefinitely. At any moment, it may suit Hitler's plans to brush them away. Their only guarantee is Hitler's good faith, which, as everyone knows, biteth like the adder and stingeth like the asp.

Some Frenchmen there were who would not bow their knees and who, like their General de Gaulle, have continued to fight at the side of the Allies. They have been condemned to death by the men of Vichy, but their names will be held and are being held in increasing respect by nine Frenchmen out of every ten throughout the once happy, smiling land of France.

"British Strength Grows"

But now, sir, strong forces are at hand; the tide has turned against the Hun. Britain, which the men of Bordeaux thought and then hoped would soon be finished; Britain, with her empire around her, carried the weight of the war alone for a whole year through the darkest part of the valley.

She is growing stronger every day. You can feel it. You can see it here in Canada. Anyone who has the slightest knowledge of our affairs is aware that very soon we shall be superior in every form of equipment to those who have taken us at the disadvantage of being but half armed. The Russian armies, under their warrior leader, Josef Stalin, are waging furious war with increasing success along a thousand-mile front of their invaded country.

"Great Numbers Drowned"

General Auchinleck, at the head of a British South African, New Zealand and Indian army, is striking down and mopping up the German and Italian forces who had attempted the invasion of Egypt. Not only, sir, are they being mopped up in the desert, but great numbers of them have been drowned on the way there by the British submarines and the Royal Air Force, in which Australian squadrons play their part.

As I speak this afternoon, an important battle is being fought around Agebadia. We must not attempt to prophesy its results, but I have good confidence. Sir, all this fighting in Libya proves that when our men have equal weapons in their hands and proper support from the air, they are more than a match for the Nazi hordes.

"Mighty Republic" Now Aiding

In Libya, as in Russia, events of great importance and most hopeful import have taken place, but, greatest of all, the mighty Republic of the United States has entered the conflict, and entered it in a manner which shows that for her there can be no withdrawal except by death or victory.

(At this point, Churchill lapsed briefly into French, addressing himself to the French-speaking sector of the dominion and pledging Britain's help for "the resurrection of the French nation.")

He Then Speaks French

Et partout dans la France occupée et inoccupée, car leur sort est égal, les honnêtes gens, le grand peuple, la nation française, se redressent. L'espoir se rallume dans les coeurs d'une race guerrière, même désarmée, berceau de la liberté revolutionnaire, et terrible aux vainqueurs.

Partout on voit le point du jour et la lumière grandit, rougeâtre mais claire.

Nous ne perdrons jamais la confiance que la France jouera le rôle des hommes libres et qu'elle reprendra, par des voies dures, sa place dans la grande compagnie des nations libératrices et victorieuses.

Ici, au Canada, où la langue française est honorée et parlée, nous nous tenons prêts et armés pour aider et pour saluer cette résurrection nationale.*

An official translation of the French passage follows:*

And everywhere in occupied or unoccupied France, their lot being the same, the decent portion of that great people, the French nation, are raising their heads again. Hope is revived in the hearts of a warlike but disarmed race, cradle of revolutionary liberties and scourge of conquerors.

Everywhere breaks the dawn and the light spreads, reddish but bright.

We shall ever be confident that France will play the part of free men and that she will regain, after many tribulations, a place among the great victorious and liberating nations.

Here in Canada, where the French language is cherished and spoken, we stand ready and armed to help and welcome this national resurrection.

Now, sir, that the whole of the North American continent is becoming one gigantic arsenal and armed camp; now that the immense reserve power of Russia is gradually becoming manifest; now that the long-suffering, unconquerable China sees help approaching; now that the outraged and subjugated nations can see daylight at the end of the tunnel, it is permissible to take a broad forward view of the war.

DEC 31 1941

Three Main Phases

Sir, we may observe three main periods or phases in the struggle that lies before us. First, there is the period of consolidation, of combination and of final preparation. In this period, which will certainly be marked by much heavy fighting, we shall still be gathering our strength, resisting the assaults of the enemy, and acquiring the necessary overwhelming air superiority, and shipping tonnage to give our armies the power to traverse, in whatever numbers may be necessary, the seas and oceans which, except in the case of Russia, separate us all from our foes.

It is only when the vast shipbuilding program, on which the United States has already made so much progress and which you are powerfully aiding, comes into full flood that we shall be able to bring the whole force of our manhood and of our modern scientific equipment to bear upon the enemy. How long this period will take depends upon the vehemence of the effort put into production in all our war industries and shipyards.

"Phase Of Liberation"

The second phase, sir, which will then open, may be called the phase of liberation. During this phase we must look to the recovery of the territories which have been lost or which may yet be lost, and also we must look to the revolt of the conquered peoples from the moment that the rescuing and liberating armies and air forces appear in strength within their bounds.

For this purpose, it is imperative that no nation or region overrun, that no government or state which has been conquered, should relax its moral and physical efforts and preparation for the day of deliverance. The invaders, be they Germans or Japanese, must everywhere be regarded as infected persons, to be shunned and isolated as far as possible.

Warns Traitors

Where active resistance is impossible, passive resistance must be maintained. The invaders and tyrants must be made to feel that their fleeting triumphs will have a terrible reckoning, and that they are hunted men, and that they are courting doom. Particular punishment will be reserved for the Quislings and traitors who make themselves the tools of the enemy. They will be handed over to the judgement of their fellow-countrymen.

Sir, there is a third phase which must also be contemplated, namely the assault upon the citadels and homelands of the guilty powers, both in Europe and in Asia.

Thus I endeavor in a few words to cast some forward light upon the dark, inscrutable mysteries of the future. But, in thus forecasting the course along which we should seek to advance, we must never forget that the power of the enemy and the action of the enemy may at every stage affect our fortunes.

Assigns No Time Limits

Moreover, sir, you will notice that I have not attempted to assign any time limit to the various stages; these time limits depend upon our exertions and upon our achievements and on the hazardous and uncertain course of the war. Nevertheless, I feel it is right at this moment to make it clear that while an ever-increasing bombing offensive against Germany will remain one of the principal methods by which we hope to bring the war to an end, it is by no means the only method which our growing strength now enables us to take into account.

30.24-13837 30.24-13837

Evidently the most strenuous exertions must be made by all. As to the form which these exertions take, that is for each partner in the grand alliance to judge for himself, in consultation with others and in harmony with the general scheme.

Let us then, sir, address ourselves to our task, not in any way underrating its tremendous difficulties and perils, but in good heart and sober confidence, resolve that whatever the cost, whatever the sufferings, we shall stand by one another, true and faithful comrades, and do our duty, God helping us to the end.

Japanese Submarines Are Reported By U.S. Off Alaskan Islands

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 30—The navy announced officially tonight that it suspected the presence of Japanese craft in Alaskan waters, uncomfortably close to Kodiak Island where a naval air station is under construction.

A navy communique tersely mentioned a suspicion that Japanese vessels were in the vicinity and said that merchant ships had been warned. The vessels presumably were submarines.

There was some speculation as to whether undersea craft might have transferred their operations from the California coast, scene of recent sinkings, to the great Alaskan peninsula that juts out far into the Pacific toward Japan.

The Army at the same time issued a communique chronicling the death of 27 men and the wounding of 80 in Japan's aerial assault yesterday against the island fortress of Corregidor at the entrance to Manila Bay.

Enemy air attacks, the Army added, were being conducted over a wide area in the Philippines while heavy enemy pressure was developing in the northeastern sector of the front. Fighting continued on the southern Philippine theater.

Japanese Reinforced

The northeastern sector, a great plain and swamp area north of Manila, apparently was becoming a more serious arena. It was there that embattled American and Filipino forces were consolidated yesterday on a shorter defense line in face of great odds and heavy reinforcements by the Japanese. The process of reinforcing the Japanese position apparently was being carried on steadily.

The appearance of Japanese vessels off Alaska raised the possibility that they might try to shell the Kodiak air station. North Pacific shipping lanes in the area have been closed for some time and there presumably are few cargo ships in the vicinity.

Similar air stations are being constructed at Sitka and Dutch Harbor to bolster Alaskan air defenses. Kodiak is on the western tip of Kodiak Island which lies south and east of the Alaskan peninsula.

The Navy said further that American submarines were pressing ahead with their operations in Far Eastern waters. Since Christmas Day, communiques have indicated American activity in waters near the Japanese islands. In them the Navy has announced the sinking of two Japanese transports, one mine sweeper and a supply vessel, and the probable sinking of another transport and a seaplane tender.

Reports Denied

The Navy labeled as "without foundation" reports that a United States destroyer and two American submarines were sunk over the week-end.

Midway Island was still in American hands and had suffered no further attacks, it added.

American War Materials May Go to Kamchatka, In Siberia, President Hints

DEC 31 1941

Mention of Peninsula About 1400 Miles From Tokyo May Be Blow in U. S. War on Japanese Nerves

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30 (AP)—President Roosevelt, possibly by way of striking a blow at Japan's nerves, today raised the possibility that American war materials might be sent to Kamchatka, Siberia.

Kamchatka is a peninsula which lies 800 miles west of the tip of the American-owned Aleutian Islands, and about 1400 miles north of Tokyo.

Can't Tell Where

In discussing the production of war materials in this country, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters at a press conference that no human being could tell where the finished products would be sent — whether they might go to Russia, China, Britain or the Kamchatka Peninsula.

At the mention of the last-named place, the reporters showed some surprise, and Mr. Roosevelt calmly went on to explain that it was the most practical and available piece of land west of the Aleutian Islands.

He did not amplify the words practical or available, and did not explain to what use the materials might be put if sent to Kamchatka. That left open the question whether they might be shipped across Siberia to be used against Hitler, or might provide the sinews for a Russo-American onslaught upon Japan by way of her vulnerable back door.

Strain on Japan's Nerves

At any rate, Mr. Roosevelt's cryptic remark was considered calculated to put an additional strain on Japan's nerves at a time when so many of her forces are deployed far to the south, in the battle against the Philippines, Singapore and near-by areas.

A definite strain already exists because of the presence of a formidable Russian army in Siberia.

M'ARTHUR BIDS U.S. TAKE RAID REVENGE

Air Blows at Japanese Cities at 'Proper Time' Suggested to Retaliate for Manila

WASHINGTON BACKS HIM

DEC 31 1941

The commander of the defending forces in the Philippines reported to the War Department that the Japanese had struck at the island capital despite the fact that it had been made an open city, and that churches, schools, hospitals and convents had been indiscriminately damaged.

Japan's "present actions can only be deemed completely violative of all the civilized processes of international law," he said. "At the proper time I bespeak due retaliatory measures."

To General MacArthur's report the War Department added a statement that a survey indicated that churches "and other centers of Christian worship and culture were deliberately selected as special targets for enemy attacks."

May Be Months Away

It seemed probable, however, that the "proper time" for retaliation might be many months away. It is believed that retaliation could be undertaken only as the climactic blow of the general Allied offensive, which has been scheduled for 1943.

That was the year mentioned by Prime Minister Winston Churchill for an all-out assault. The intervening period is to be one of mustering the Allied resources and building the great industrial machine that will produce the weapons, planes and other equipment necessary for such an attack.

The War Department condemned the bombing of Manila as "senseless and savage." Discussing the destruction of churches, schools and like establishments, the department asserted:

"These edifices were of a distinctive type of architecture and their character could not have been mistaken. Before the brutal assaults were begun, Japanese bombing planes flew low over the city, obviously selecting the buildings which were subsequently bombed.

"In many of the churches attacked devout residents of Manila had gathered for sanctuary and solace within the hallowed cloisters.

"Among the buildings destroyed were churches and shrines where many generations had worshiped for centuries. The beautiful old church of Santo Domingo, with its priceless art treasures and venerated relics, is now a heap of smoking ruins, before which relays of black-robed priests are continually praying for their people.

Cathedral Was Bombed

"The great Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception was a special target for Japanese bombs. It was sought out and attacked on three successive days. The College of San Juan Lateran, with its irreplaceable library of original manuscripts, was likewise attacked.

"Repeated assaults on successive days were made on Santa Rosa Convent and Santa Catalina Convent. The San Juan de Dios Hospital was also the object of vicious attacks, and three colleges supported by religious institutions were either destroyed or damaged in the air raids."

General MacArthur's message to the War Department said that the "enemy mercilessly bombed the open city of Manila, using sixty-three bombers."

"Damage has been severe and includes all types of civilian installations such as churches, the cathedral, hospitals, convents, business and private dwellings," he added.

"It is notable that before Manila was declared an open city and before our anti-aircraft defense evacuated therefrom, he [the enemy] had abstained from attempted bombing of anything in Manila except military installations."

War Department Says Enemy Picked Centers of Christian Culture as Objectives

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30 (AP)—Washington enthusiastically received a suggestion from General Douglas MacArthur today that, when the proper time comes, Japanese cities be devastated from the air in retaliation for the ruthlessly cruel bombing of Manila.

M'ARTHUR NOTES CHIEF'S BIRTHDAY

Washington, Dec. 30 (A. P.). Even though his troops are hard pressed in defending the Philippines, Gen. Douglas MacArthur took time to send birthday greetings to the Chief of Staff, Gen. George C. Marshall, who will be 61 years old tomorrow.

The message:

"Gen. George C. Marshall

"War Department, Washington, D. C.

"We have not forgotten your birthday. I send heartiest felicitations and reiterate the complete confidence I feel in your professional leadership of the army. (Signed) MacArthur."

Japanese Bombers Blasting Roads As American Troops Are Pushed Back Toward the Capital

Enemy Now Only 30 Minute Auto Ride From City; Laguna Province Reported Lost to Nipponese

MANILA, Wednesday, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Japanese invaders are driving in great force on Manila from both north and south with their dive-bombers in almost complete command of the roads from the air, and with great quantities of tanks and armored units pressing relentlessly on the capital.

This was announced in an ominously terse communique by Gen. Douglas MacArthur at 11 a. m. (9 p. m. Tuesday, Eastern Standard Time).

"Our forces are being pushed back," the four-sentence announcement said.

(Japanese military spokesmen, who had stated their goal was capture of Manila by Jan. 1, only Tuesday had revised that prediction to Jan. 10.)

Terse Communique

The text of MacArthur's communique:

"The enemy is driving in great force from both north and south.

"His dive bombers practically control the roads from the air.

"The Japanese are using great quantities of tanks and armored units.

"Our lines are being pushed back."

DEC 31 1941

Lines Close to Capital

This terse and ominous announcement followed disclosure that the southern defensive front was only a half-hour's automobile drive from Manila.

Clark Lee, Associated Press war correspondent, left here by automobile at 7:30 a. m., visited the front line vicinity and was back in Manila at 8:30 a. m.—only an hour for the round trip.

This marked an unspecified but considerable advance for the Japanese invaders, who last night were reported to be within 45 miles of Manila and apparently bent on skirting both sides of the great Laguna De Bay on the first-class roads leading around that lake to this closely imperilled capital.

Two Columns in Drive

The Japanese thrust was in two columns, one of which yesterday reached some 35 miles beyond the Atimonan beachhead and the other driving to Luisiana, about 15 miles west from the original Mauban landing.

The immediate objective appeared to be a junction at San Pablo, just above Dolores and southwest of Luisiana, a point commanding highways running along both sides of the lake.

On the northern front, it was stated unofficially yesterday that General MacArthur's new and shortened line defending the central Luzon plain running down to Manila at that time extended east and west through the town of Zaragoza, a point about 65 miles above the capital.

The main Japanese forces were then believed to stand a few miles to the north of this line.

(Such a withdrawal by General MacArthur's main bodies had been indicated by the War Department in a communique on Monday.)

General MacArthur's communique yesterday afternoon—reporting succinctly: "Everything is quiet"—indicated that there was only local action on the two main fronts during the day.

Presumably, however, the Japanese were resting, nursing their wounds and bringing up supplies, gasoline, ammunition and reinforcements for new efforts to break the American-Philippine positions.

The possibility that some of the veteran Japanese troops used in the siege of Hong Kong were now joining the Philippine invading forces was seen in some quarters. Previous reports from all fronts had agreed that the invaders were young and ill-trained.

An Associated Press correspondent was informed by officers in the field in central Luzon yesterday that up to Monday there had been no major test of the strength of the contending forces.

Action, it was added, had up to then been confined principally to artillery fire. There had been some tank and infantry engagements, but not upon a large scale.

Casualties had been heavy in proportion to the numbers engaged, these informants said, but not heavy numerically.

No Air Raids on City

Manila itself, having been declared an open city, has lost any military significance, although the Japanese have bombed it since it was stripped of defenses.

There were no fresh air attacks on the city yesterday. Whether the Japanese had finally decided to recognize the capital as an open city or were merely occupied elsewhere was not known.

There were rumors that Japanese warships had sought to slip up on the fortress of Corregidor at the entrance to Manila Bay, but U. S. headquarters had no confirmation and pointed out that such an attempt would give Corregidor's big guns some excellent targets.

(In Washington, the Army announced yesterday that 27 men were killed and 80 wounded in the Japanese bombing of the Corregidor fortress monday.)

Quezon Inaugurated

(In Washington the War Department, denouncing the previous "senseless and savage" bombing of undefended Manila and saying that churches apparently were deliberately singled out for assault, announced that General

MacArthur had asked for "due retaliatory measures" at the proper time.

("His (the enemy's) actions can only be deemed completely violative of all the civilized processes of international law," the General stated).

Against the background of war beating on all sides, President Manuel Quezon was inaugurated for a second time at a ceremony attended by General MacArthur and High Commissioner Francis B. Sayre.

"At present we have but one task — to fight with America for America and the Philippines," Quezon said in his inaugural address. "To this task we shall devote all our resources."

General MacArthur declared that "never before in all history has there been a more solemn or more significant inauguration."

"An act symbolical of democratic processes is placed against the background of sudden, merciless war."

Sayre declared the American and Filipino peoples are being linked by the present struggle "in a comradeship which can never die."

Two Columns Seek to Unite in South for Advance on the City.

DEC 31 1941

NO HEAVY ACTION REPORTED

Americans Apparently Have Left Invasion Landing Area on Lingayen Gulf.

By CLARK LEE

Manila, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Japanese forces which landed last week southeast of Manila have fought their way to Luisiana and Dolores, each about forty-five airline miles from this city, and apparently are attempting to effect a junction for a further advance, reliable dispatches from the front said today.

In the north, the new American line, shortened and consolidated by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, was said to run east and west through Zaragoza, some sixty-five miles above Manila.

The exact positions of the Japanese in this theater were not known, but were believed to be a few miles north of the American line, with patrols active between.

Lingayen Area Given Up.

American forces apparently had withdrawn completely from the Lingayen Gulf area.

The two Japanese columns in the south evidently aimed to join at San Pablo.

This town is thirty-five air-line miles southeast of Manila, but the Laguna de Bay, a lake about twenty-five miles long and fifteen miles wide, lies between that position and the Philippine capital.

If the Japanese reached San Pablo it was probable one column would circle southward and westward to Batangas province on the west coash south of Manila.

Relative inactivity at the fronts, reported in this morning's communique, was taken to mean that the Japanese were resting their troops and bringing up fresh supplies of ammunition and gasoline and re-enforcements for new assaults.

Yesterday's announcement from Washington that the Japanese were landing veterans troops was believed here to mean that possibly the troops used in attacking Hongkong were being transferred to the Philippines.

No Major Engagements.

So far, all reports from the fronts have agreed that the Japanese troops here were young and ill-trained.

Officers in the field in central Luzon said that up to yesterday there had been no major test of Japanese-American strength. Activity thus far had been mostly confined to artillery and some tank engagements, they said, with a few infantry battles.

Losses so far have been small numerically, but relatively heavy in proportion to numbers engaged, it was said.

Manila, the military significance of which has been lost by the declaration that it is an open city, was kept on edge by continued Japanese air activity in the vicinity.

United States Army Headquarters, which declared yesterday that the Japanese were continuing to land re-enforcements in southern Luzon and were exerting steady pressure, made no reference to the situation there or in the north in its communique at 11:45 A. M. (9:45 P. M., Eastern standard time, Monday).

Approximately two hours before this communique was issued Manila had a seventeen-minute air raid alarm, but no planes appeared over the city.

There had been no air attack, however, in forty-eight hours up to 1 P. M. (11 P. M., Eastern standard time, Monday, and Manilans waited anxiously to find out whether the enemy had decided to recognize Manila as an open city or just were preoccupied with air assaults elsewhere.

A haze over Manila Bay at the time of the alert made it impossible for observers to determine whether the Japanese had again attacked Corregidor, island fortress at the mouth of the harbor, which was assaulted from the air for two hours yesterday. That raid, the first officially reported sustained attack on Corregidor, apparently cost the Japanese heavily.

Jap Planes Shot Down.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced tersely a number of Japanese planes were shot down, and observers reported that one wave of twenty-seven attacking bombers made off with four gaps in the original formation.

There was no immediate announcement concerning the damage—if any—caused by the raid, which was generally regarded as the opening salvo in a Japanese attempt to wreck the fortress.

It was persistently reported that Japanese warships attempted to approach the rocky fortress under cover of Monday's aerial bombardment.

However, United States Army Headquarters said it had no confirmation of the reports and did not believe them because Japanese ships would only give the big Corregidor guns fine targets.

After the attack the Japanese dropped leaflets bearing the Japanese and Philippine flags and the words: "We join you in honoring the memory of Jose Rizal."

Rizal, a Filipino patriot, was shot by the Spanish forty-five years ago today.

Reports filtering in from the southern front indicated that the Japanese had effected their original landings in the Mauban area Christmas morning at heavy cost. Filipino soldiers back from the front said the first Japanese to come ashore were killed to the last man.

"The invaders landed first in waves of thirty to fifty men," said one soldier. "We mowed down the first series, but as succeeding ones came thicker and stretched the battle line wider around the bay we finally had to retreat."

Four times in two days, he said, the Japanese were fought to a standstill, but each time threw re-enforcements into the fray and moved forward again by sheer weight of numbers.

U. S. and Philippines Ties Strengthened By War, Sayre Says

Quezon Is Inaugurated For Second Term as Islands' President

By the Associated Press.

DEC 31 1941

MANILA, Dec. 30.—Philippine High Commissioner Francis B. Sayre, speaking today at the second-term inauguration of Manuel Quezon as President of the Commonwealth, declared that the American and Filipino peoples were being linked by the present struggle in "a comradeship which can never die."

"Because the events of the last three weeks have been hard," he said, "we will not be discouraged. The real struggle is only beginning, but there can be no question whatsoever of its final outcome.

Faith and Determination.

"Death is preferable to slavery. As long as humanity believes that, no Germany and no Japan can ever conquer the world. That faith and that determination welds all free peoples together into a mighty throng which is invincible and inevitably will be triumphant."

Mr. Sayre read a special message from President Roosevelt extending congratulations and best wishes to President Quezon and Sergio Osmena, who was sworn in for another term as Vice President.

The message also expressed to the people of the Philippines the President's "appreciation for the loyalty and effective co-operation * * * which they have extended to the United States Government."

The inauguration was held at the wartime seat of the government in an undisclosed place outside Manila.

Because of wartime conditions the inauguration was conducted with extreme simplicity. The oaths of office were administered to President Quezon and Mr. Osmena by Chief Justice Jose Abad Santos of the Philippine Supreme Court.

New members of the Philippine Congress, meanwhile, were sworn in by previously qualified officials in their home provinces or wherever they happened to be.

Mr. Quezon was elected for a four-year term under the amended constitution of the Commonwealth, but he said before the election that he would resign after two years and turn the office of chief executive over to Mr. Osmena. He already has served six years and believes that no President of the Commonwealth should remain in office more than eight years.

United Manilans Given Real Lift By Roosevelt's Assurances

By RUSSELL BRINES

Associated Press War Correspondent.

MANILA, Dec. 30.—This is the notebook of a reporter's observations on a bombed city:

In the two raids since Manila was declared an open city Manilans felt a wave of impotence, then they go mad . . . and madder . . . and now they are more firmly united than every before. They are on their own now and are rolling up their sleeves with grim realism, ready for hard times still to come . . . President Roosevelt's assurances gave them a real lift. . . .

The city's morale can't be broken and air raids only strengthen it.

To sense this you only have to hear Filipinos express anger when they see the Santo Domingo Church in ruins . . . or watch energetic labor gangs constructing shelters . . . But some protection has been provided and Manilans are preparing . . . the Bravado which caused downtown crowds to match raiding planes at first is gone . . . now they run like the devil, unashamed, for shelter . . . they find it in doorways, behind walls, in gutters.

Except for raids, though, the city is getting back to normal . . . streetcars and buses are running . . . taxi drivers are getting back their old habit of reckless driving . . . movies are playing (behind sandbags) in the daytime . . . lights are gradually getting brighter at night now that the blackout is over . . . the people are getting over the psychological comfort of darkness.

A new restaurant has opened up . . . its proprietors call it "Nichevo," say that is Russian for "never mind" . . . night clubs are reopening . . . the people are getting the idea that worry only complicates matters.

Law and order are well regulated.

The city shows its scars only in spots and in its sweeping panorama Manila is untouched . . . only more solemn . . . landmarks best known to tourists are much the same except for wartime tape and sandbags . . . nevertheless, bomb craters pit waterfront streets . . . broken windows, bomb splinter holes . . . blocks of houses along the highway fronting Nichols Field smashed as if by tornado and fire . . . including many American homes . . . elsewhere burned gasoline tanks and other evidence of destruction.

Rich American Reported Dead in Japs' Luzon Camp

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Dec. 30.—The Manila Bulletin said today it had received from usually reliable sources a report that Robert E. Manly, one of the wealthiest Americans in the Philippines, had died recently in a Japanese concentration camp at Naga in Southern Luzon Island.

Mr. Manly, about 75 and long an invalid, was born in Rushford, Minn., and came to the Philippines during the Spanish-American War as a member of the First North Dakota Volunteers. He later settled down at Naga, began the practice of law there and ultimately acquired large interests in rice lands and transportation companies.

For more than 30 years he served as national democratic committeeman for the Philippines.

Fierce Tribesmen Aid Philippine Refugees

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Dec. 30.—Refugees reaching here from the Baguio mining districts in Northern Luzon said today they had been aided by fierce mountain tribesmen who appeared to have abandoned their hostile attitude toward Christians since the outbreak of war with Japan.

The refugees, who traveled over little-frequented mountain trails to avoid hampering operations of American and Filipino troops, said Igorot tribesmen had guided them on their way and had supplied them with salted deer meat and other food.

The Igorots, they said, knew war was under way and were prepared to deal with any Japanese troops reaching their territory.

Tokio Spokesman Warns Of Bombing of Any City Used as Chinese Base

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 30 (Official Broadcast).—A Japanese military spokesman declared today that operations in the Philippines were moving according to schedule and predicted the fall of Manila before January 10.

At the same time the spokesman warned that Calcutta or any other Far Eastern city would be bombed by the Japanese Air Force if it were converted into a supply base for the Chinese government at Chungking.

He issued the warning, he said, because of reports that plans were afoot to transfer Burma Road transportation facilities and personnel from Rangoon to Calcutta.

Destroyer Declared Sunk.

The Japanese Navy, meanwhile, issued a communique declaring that between December 22-28 Japanese naval aircraft operating in the waters around Luzon had sunk one destroyer and two submarines and had damaged 76 merchant vessels, of which 7 were left in sinking condition.

Japanese naval aircraft also were credited during the same period with destroying 56 planes in and around the Sulu and Celebes Seas and with destroying many hangars and airport facilities in British Borneo.

During these operations, the communique said, Japanese naval aircraft losses were only two planes.

Another bulletin said 16 submarines had been sunk prior to December 20 by Japanese naval vessels and aircraft patrolling the Southwestern Pacific.

List of Jap Claims.

The official report broke down the claimed damage inflicted on enemy air forces by naval airmen as follows:

Philippines: Nine airplanes, including four flying boats, shot down; 27 airplanes, including four flying boats, destroyed on the ground.

British Borneo: Eleven airplanes, including a flying boat, shot down; two destroyed on the ground.

South China, Celebes and Sulu Seas: Two flying boats shot down and five flying boats destroyed on the water.

Numerous air bases and hangars have been damaged and destroyed in the Philippines and British Borneo, the report added.

Daily air attacks were made on Manila shipping to prevent escapes by sea, the announcement said.

An Army bulletin said Japanese planes subjected the Singapore area to a severe attack Monday night for the second time in the war.

Chinese forces lost 329,927 killed and 94,826 men taken prisoner in fighting from January to October, inclusive, Col. Hideo Ohira, chief of the army press section of imperial headquarters, announced.

In an average of 2,000 engagements a month with the Chinese, Japan lost 9,527 killed, he said.

Kuala Lumpur Attack Reported.

Berlin, Dec. 30 (Official broadcast recorded by A. P.).—Dispatches from Tokio today reported that the Japanese Air Force had attacked the railway station at Kuala Lumpur, 225 miles northwest of Singapore, in Malaya and also had bombed 100 railroad cars filled with British troops.

These dispatches claimed the British Air Force in Malaya was so hard hit, both in loss of planes and bases, that provisional bases now are being established on the north coast of the Dutch Island of Sumatra.

Medan, on Sumatra's northeast coast, was heavily bombed by the Japanese Air Force Sunday.

Japs Report on Week's Sinkings.

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—The Japanese Navy, in a communique broadcast from Tokio and heard here by Reuters, claimed today it had sunk sixteen enemy submarines and damaged a large number of others in the western Pacific between December 22 and 28.

During the same period, said the communique, Japanese naval aircraft shot down fifty-six enemy planes over Borneo, the South China Sea and the Sulu and Celebres seas.

MARTIAL LAW IS PROCLAIMED IN SINGAPORE

Army Courts Set Up After Japanese Start Major Air Raids

Will Deal With Any Fifth Columnists Or Looting In Proscribed Areas

By C. Yates McDaniel

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 30—Martial law was proclaimed throughout the Singapore settlement tonight after four heavy Japanese air assaults last night were beaten off with only eleven casualties and negligible damage to this big British base.

A spokesman who announced the casualties, seven more than were mentioned in an early communique, said that military courts would deal with any cases of fifth-column activity, looting or movement in proscribed districts now that Japan had begun large-scale raids.

Afield the invader still was centering his pressure on the Perak state front below Ipoh, which itself is 290 miles north of Singapore, but his strong attacks cost him heavy casualties for gains which at best were minor.

"No Change" Elsewhere

In the whole of the remainder of the Malayan peninsula, the afternoon British communique reported, there had been "no change in the situation."

Singapore's defense against the aerial invader was such that from six flights of Japanese bombers rooftop observers counted only two sticks of bombs let loose, one on Singapore Island and the other across the channel on the Johore mainland just to the north.

Japanese bombers sailed over in formations of four to nine craft each, were caught and held unfailingly in Singapore's searchlight beams, then were prodded across the sky by hot, unbroken anti-aircraft fire.

Defense Described

With its customary brevity the British command thus described the spectacular defense:

"Enemy aircraft made four raids on Singapore last night. Some damage was done to thatched buildings, which set a small petrol store on fire. So far only four casualties have been reported."

The British positions of Kuantan, on the eastern side of the Malayan peninsula where the invader apparently had made no progress, also were bombed. In this case there was neither damage nor a single casualty.

An instance of high native morale was singled out by headquarters which reported that a large labor force present at a railway station put under attack by Japanese planes "behaved with great calmness."

RAF Kept Busy

British aircraft meantime were busy, but the details of action were not disclosed.

Japanese ground gains about Ipoh apparently were made possible principally by infiltration and clearly at the cost of enormous losses, a report of a British correspondent at the front showed. He said that the a[illegible] some instances lost forty men to one.

New support for the British defenders came during the day from a quarter which until recently had been proscribed throughout Malaya: The Chinese Communist party called upon its members to "turn each street, lane, mine, village and rubber estate into a bulwark for the defense of our land."

At the other end of the ideological scale, the sultan of the great rubber-producing state of Negri Sembilan summoned his people to the struggle "to destroy the common enemy."

Blazing anti-aircraft batteries and searchlights which kept the Japanese planes high were credited today with holding the effect of overnight enemy air raids on this stronghold to a minimum.

A communique said that four raids were made, damaging some thatched houses whose flames ignited a small gasoline dump and caused four casualties.

Civilians Saw Six.

Rooftop observers, however, counted six separate flights over the moonlit city, but said only two sticks of bombs were dropped—one on Singapore Island, the site of Britain's chief defense citadel in the Far East, and the other across the narrow channel on the Johore Mainland to the north.

(A Tokio broadcast said Japanese Army planes made the raid, the second since the start of the war in the Pacific. It said the Singapore area was "severely raided" and that targets were military objectives on the city's outskirts.)

Night Beams Catch Planes.

On every other appearance last night the Japanese bombers sailed across the Singapore sky in formations of four and nine planes each, clearly highlighted by the searchlight beams and sped on their way by bursts of anti-aircraft batteries, which kept up an incessant barrage as long as the enemy planes were within range.

On the land front, a communique acknowledged that the invaders had made a strong attack against British lines in the Perak area but declared they suffered heavy losses.

Only in the Perak fighting did the British report any notable land activity. Elsewhere the situation was described as unchanged.

British forces were reported to be inflicting casualties at rates as high as 40 for 1, even while yielding fresh ground about Ipoh, a tin mining center 290 miles northwest of Singapore.

"Enemy aircraft made a further raid on Kuantan yesterday, causing no damage or casualties," the communique also said.

A railway station occupied by a large labor force, in an area not officially identified, also was attacked by Japanese airmen, it was said, the laborers behaving "with great calmness."

Allied aircraft were reported to have carried out a number of reconnaissances yesterday.

(London dispatches said the British had withdrawn from Ipoh itself after demolishing strategic properties, manning new defense lines to the south between the mountains and the sea to escape a threatening pincer movement from the north and southwest.

(The withdrawal was described by an informed British source as necessary because of the "limited resources in men and material at present at our disposal.")

Communists Rally to Defense.

Although the Japanese masses gained ground, largely by infiltration tactics, a Reuters correspondent at the front said as many as 40 were falling dead or wounded for every British casualty in hand-to-hand fighting.

A manifesto of the Chinese Communist party, until recently proscribed throughout Malaya, was reported by Reuters to have called on adherents to "turn each street, lane, mine, village and rubber estate into a bulwark for the defense of our land."

In the same vein, the Sultan of the rich rubber-producing state of Negri Sembilan called on all his people to fight "to destroy the common enemy." The battle zone still is 100 miles above Negi Sembilan's northern frontier.

The Straits Times reported two high officers of the Chinese Army were in Singapore for talks with British officers on Allied strategy and that other military leaders from the forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek were expected shortly.

Strategic Advantages Conceded.

Japanese activity both east and west caused concern.

Britons conceded potential strategic advantages to the Japanese in their occupation of Kuching, capital of white Rajah Sir Charles Vyner Brooke's kingdom of Sarawak. Lying 475 miles east of Singapore, it is at a sea and air crossroads in the battle for American, British and Dutch territories bordering the China Sea.

The economic and political importance of the stroke was minimized. The Sarawak coast offers no ports of naval value except at Kuching and even there sandbanks bar all except the smallest ships.

Oil wells and landing fields were reported thoroughly "mucked up" before the Japanese arrived.

No effort was made here to discount a threat to Sumatra, Netherlands Indies, contained in a Batavia report Sunday that Japanese had bombed Medan, the principal city, and attempted parachute landings.

For the Japanese who won Penang, off Malaya's west coast, Medan is only 150 miles by air across the Strait of Malacca.

The fertile plateaus around Medan contain some of the world's largest British and Dutch rubber plantations and vast holdings of the Goodyear, [illegible] and United States Rubber Co.'s. The 1940 production totalled 600,000 tons.

South Central Sumatra is a great oil producing region.

INDIES PAPERS ASK PUBLIC TO BE PATIENT

DEC 31 1941

Warn, However, Of Difficulties In Way Of Opening Offensive

Army Commander Calls For More Bombers And Anti-Aircraft Guns

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, Dec. 30—Allied reinforcements were reported by Dutch newspapers tonight to be en route to the Pacific war theater even as Lieut. Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, the Indies commander in chief, urgently called for more bombers, fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns to ward off expected Japanese invasion thrusts at Dutch soil.

[At the same time there were press reports from Sydney that British Prime Minister Churchill had advised Australian Prime Minister John Curtin that Britain and her allies had decided upon a definite plan of action in the Pacific which would enormously improve Allied striking power against Japan. As a result an Australian Government spokesman said the Pacific position, in so far as it affects Australia, "has improved immeasurably."]

Public's Patience Asked

The Indies newspapers asked the public to be patient. They said help was on the way, but stressed that "enormous difficulties" remained before a general Allied offensive could be started.

The general told the official news agency, Aneta, that prompt material support was needed to hold these strategic colonies "which will be defended to the last man."

He said Japanese fleets roaming the South Pacific were "easy targets for bombers operating from Netherland Indies bases"—a fact already proved by the hard-hitting Dutch airmen and submarine crews who have so many extended and vulnerable areas to defend.

Could Hold Off Attack

"Such material support," the general said, "if given with the least possible delay, could even hold off a large-scale Japanese landing attempt."

It was stated officially that no Japanese troops thus far have landed on Dutch territory. There thus still was no official confirmation that Japanese parachutists had landed in the Medan area of Sumatra Sunday.

The death toll in Medan from a Japanese raid there Sunday rose to thirty-six, with sixty-six injured. Today's communique said one Dutch plane was destroyed by the Japanese the same day at Tarakan, an airdrome in Dutch East Borneo.

Dutch Tanker Fired

In the latter attack a Dutch tanker also was set afire, but the crew managed to put out the blaze and save the ship, the communique said. Nineteen raiders attacked the Tarakan area.

General Ter Poorter conceded that the Japanese temporarily had air superiority over the Pacific area, and that their planes were able to attack at random.

"Japanese accuracy also is not to be underrated," he said, "although damage so far done to objectives in these islands is comparatively negligible.

Might Bring Turn

"If needed material should reach us in great quantities soon it might bring about a turn in present events in the Philippines, Malaya and this area."

The Japanese already are draining small quantities of oil from damaged wells in occupied British North Borneo areas, the commander said.

"But the Japanese will not be allowed to get away with the oil because the Netherlands Indies air force will bomb the daylights out of them.

"The oil situation in this territory is completely satisfactory, and that certainly is not the point that worries the general staff."

Jap Casualties High in Fighting on Upper Malay Peninsula—Chinese Generals Confer.

A curfew may be set by the army, the movement of all persons restricted, and highways closed.

Help On Way, N. E. I. Says

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, N. E. I., Dec. 30—Netherlands Indies newspapers assured the public today that Allied reinforcements are on the way to the Pacific and that a general offensive against Japan can be expected soon.

But the papers warned against impatience, said the drive could be launched only after thorough preparation and stressed the "enormous difficulties" involved in having the Allies take the initiative.

At the same time Lieut. Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, the army's commander in chief, stressed the need for "immediate material support" of the Indies defenses, especially bombers, fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns.

Could Balk Landing Parties

"Such material support, if given with the least possible delay," said Gen. Ter Poorten, "could hold off even a large-scale Japanese landing attempt. . . . But pursuit ships are necessary for the protection of the bombers sent out to aid enemy objectives, as well as for the protection of the numerous air fields in the Indies, which now are being bombed at random by the Japanese air force, which temporarily appears to have air superiority.

"More anti-aircraft guns are needed for the protection of vital Netherlands Indies objects. If possible, this material should reach us in great quantities and as soon as possible, because it might bring about a turn in the present events."

19 Jap Planes Attack

The exact positions of the Japanese east and west through Zaragoza, some sixty-five miles above Manila.

The N. E. I. armed forces today acknowledged the loss of a single fighter plane in a nineteen-plane Japanese attack on a Dutch airdrome and reported that Japanese bombing and machine-gunning raids on outlying coastal points in the widespread Indies archipelago were continuing.

The attack on the airdrome, said today's communique, occurred on Sunday, and was carried out by two waves—eight fighters in the first group and seven bombers and four fighters in the second.

In addition to the destruction of one Dutch plane, a Dutch pilot was killed.

The raid occurred at Tarakan, on the northeast coast of Dutch Borneo. At the same time it was learned that the number of known dead in Sunday's Japanese assault on Medan, Sumatra, has risen to thirty-six.

Fierce Tribes Offer Aid

An Admiralty spokesman told today of tribes of fierce native jungle fighters who "only a few decades ago" still were battling the Dutch Government, but who now have offered that same Government the aid of their guerrilla bands to halt any Japnese invasion attempts.

A native newspaper published an appeal to its readers to "reinforce the civilian frontier" and "to sharpen your knives for the defense of your country."

Fears Of Jap Attack Allayed In Australia

Sydney, Dec. 30 (AP)—Australian fears of an impending Japanese attack were tempered today by reports of an Allied decision to sharpen enormously their striking power in the Pacific.

Sydney newspapers said this assurance had been made to the Government directly by British Prime Minister Churchill, bringing the declaration from an official spokesman that "in so far as it affects Australia, the Pacific position has improved immeasurably."

Prime Minister Curtin did not go so far, but he did say a cable from Churchill had enabled him to submit to the Australian Cabinet a more reassuring view of the situation than had seemed possible earlier in the day.

It was pointed out that United States assistance to Australia beyond what was anticipated would be a powerful factor in putting a damper on any possible large-scale operations planned by Japan against Australia or the Netherlands Indies.

Japs Intensify Hunan Drive

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, Dec. 30—Chinese dispatches said the battle of Northern Hunan province developed in intensity today as the Japanese put more troops across the Milo river and attempted to hammer the Chinese back toward Changsha, the provincial capital.

Previous reports, describing the Japanese offensive as the main spearhead of a broad campaign in Central China, said it had driven to within forty miles north of Changsha after forcing a crossing of the Milo.

As a constant stream of Japanese reinforcements flowed to the front from the north, Japanese warplanes attacked Chinese troop concentrations and communications lines.

In his capacity as Acting Foreign Minister, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek made his first appointment to the Foreign Office, naming Dr. Liwei-Kuo, who earned his Ph.D. at Columbia, as acting chief of the General Affairs Department.

Allied Officers Flee Hong Kong In Motorboats

By the Associated Press.

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 29 (Delayed).—A party of British and Chinese officers led by the famous one-legged Contonese admiral, Chan Chak, escaped from Hong Kong Christmas Day in motor torpedo boats, fighting their way through the Japanese blockade, it was disclosed today.

One of the five motor torpedo boats was sunk and 16 persons were lost.

Admiral Chan Chak suffered an arm wound and fell into the sea but swam to safety ashore. Other survivors included D. M. MacDougal, Hong Kong chief of the British Ministry of Information; two British lieutenant commanders and two Royal Air Force wing commanders.

Australia Gets Assurance

[By the Associated Press]

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 30—British Prime Minister Winston Churchill has advised Australian Prime Minister John Curtin that Britain and her Allies have decided upon a definite plan of action in the Pacific that will improve enormously their striking power against Japan, Sydney newspapers said today.

While there was no immediate confirmation from official quarters, a Government spokesman was quoted as saying:

"In so far as it affects Australia, the Pacific position has improved immeasurably."

Madrid Declares It Has The Word Of Japan That This Is True

Madrid, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Spanish Foreign Ministry, in a communique which it said was issued "to calm Spaniards with relatives and interests in the Philippines," declared it had the word of Japan that Japanese planes were bombing "exclusively and very rigorously military objectives."

It said "only one chance person among the Spanish colony," a nun, was wounded by the Japanese bombings.

ADMIRAL E. J. KING TAKES OVER FLEET

Four-Starred Flag Hoisted Aboard Navy Gunboat Constructed In Germany

But Central Figure Is Absent "Due To Pressure Of Wartime Work"

DEC 31 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 30—The four-star admiral's flag of Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, fluttered today from a navy gunboat built in Germany.

The flag-hoisting ceremony which signaled the office-taking of the "Cincus" was performed with the central figure absent. Admiral King, occupied in conferences with allied naval chiefs here for the last week, was too busy to be aboard the gunboat Vixen when his personal flag was raised.

Chosen For Convenience

The 330-foot gunboat, formerly the private yacht Orion, apparently was chosen for the ceremony because it lay conveniently near by, in the Washington Navy Yard. Navy officials said the 3,000-ton, Diesel-powered yacht was purchased for $240,000 from the estate of the late Julius Forstmann, prominent New Jersey textile manufacturer, in November, 1940. Her conversion to a fighting ship was completed last April. The yacht was built in 1929, in Kiel, Germany.

No advance notice was given of the flag-hoisting ceremony, which the navy said was marked by "the utmost simplicity."

Half Of Sub Is Jap's Coffin

[By the Associated Press]

Honolulu, Dec. 30—The United States Navy buried half of a submarine at Pearl Harbor at dusk yesterday in order to carry out final rites for an enemy whose body could not be removed.

The undersea craft was one of the two-man vessels used by the Japanese in their surprise attack of December 7. The body had been wedged amid the battered engines and instruments when the conning tower was ripped by a shell and the craft cut almost in two by a destroyer.

The wreckage was dropped into a forty-foot trench.

The submarine was one of three of this type sunk or beached in this area during the attack.

Burma Road Supplies Increase 400 Per Cent.

Chinese Government Asked American Management To Increase Efficiency Of Route

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Chinese Embassy reported tonight that the quantity of military supplies moved over the Burma road to the interior of China had been increased in recent months by more than 400 per cent.

The Chinese Government previously has made two official requests that administration and operation of the road be placed under a joint United States, British and Chinese military commission with an American as chairman, an Embassy statement said.

"Now that the United States and Great Britain are also at war with Japan," it continued, "this is a matter for inter-Allied reconsideration."

Chiang's Pilot Says China Has Air Fields.

Hollywood, Dec. 30 (A. P.)—Royal Leonard, 36 years old former personal pilot for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, declares Japan can be bombed effectively with American long range bombers from bases in unoccupied China.

"The air fields are there and more can be built," he said.

"Had the British co-operated with the Chinese and prepared air fields back of their lines, Hongkong would not be in Japanese hands today.

"Japanese pilots are better than the Americans gave them credit for prior to the war, but they're not as good as a lot of people now think merely because of their early successes."

FEEL CHROMITE IN PHILIPPINES JAP OBJECTIVE

DEC 31 1941

Geologists Express Opinion That It Was Factor in Far East Attacks

BOSTON, Dec. 30 (AP)—Rich deposits of chromite in embattled Luzon and other sections of the Philippines may have been one of the factors that induced the Japanese to launch their desperate attack on the islands, several eminent American geologists indicated today.

Needed for Armaments

W. D. Johnson of the United States Geological Survey and Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, Harvard geologist, said in an interview that Japan apparently is in dire need of metallurgical chromite to alloy with iron in the manufacture of high grade steel to build battleships, bombers, tanks and other materials of warfare.

They commented on a paper submitted to the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America in which Dean F. Frasche, former chief of the Philippines Geological Society and now with the Office of Production Management, said that chromite occurs in commercial quantities on several of the islands, the largest in the Zambales Province, Luzon.

Johnson said that although large amounts of chromite had been imported from the Philippines the principal reserves of the United States are in Montana, where a bed crops out for a distance of 30 miles. Some also is obtained from Cuba.

Have Rich Deposits

The individual deposits in the Philippines, Frasche informed the society, vary greatly in size, ranging from a few hundred to 10,000,000 metric tons.

The grades of chromite now being produced in the Zambales section, he added, are classified according to their industrial uses—namely, metallurgical ores, chemical ores and refractory ores.

All grades are important in the prosecution of modern warfare—the metallurgical in making alloys for the manufacture of hard and corrosive resistant steel, the chemical in the production of various chemicals and the refractory in making bricks for lining various types of furnaces.

Frasche said that the Philippines reserves of chromite of all grades is estimated at 10,890,500 tons. The deposits occur in isolated masses of ultrabasic rocks along the eastern and western borders of the island group.

CHEER FILIPINOS

Students in Boston Radio Greetings to Islands.

Boston, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—On the forty-fifth anniversary of the execution of Dr. Jose Rizal, famous Filipino patriot, the powerful shortwave station WRUL today addressed a program of cheer and encouragement to the embattled islands on the other side of the globe.

Participating in the broadcast were young Filipinos receiving their education at Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and other young natives of the far-away islands who are engaged as entertainers in Boston restaurants and hotels.

The greetings went out as Manuel Quezon began his second term as President of the commonwealth.

Part of the broadcast was in English and the remainder in Tagalog, a Filipino tongue. All participants addressed messages of hope and encouragement to relatives in their besieged homeland.

Dr. Rizal was generally credited with keeping alive a spirit of nationalism among his countrymen and was the author of two books which historians believe did much to bring about opposition to Spanish misrule in the islands.

Alaska Fishermen Want Navy Protection For 1942 Season

Union Also Demands Individual War Risk Insurance for Members

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Dec. 30.—A war and the operation of enemy craft off the West Coast have brought to the Alaskan fishing industry the greatest uncertainty in its history,

Packers and labor representatives have reported conferences with Northwest naval authorities over the possibilities of protection for the ships which must take fishing and canning supplies northward early in 1942, as well as for protection during the fishing season in distant and dangerous waters.

30.24-1381

Important Military Food.

The product of the fishing industry is an important food to the Nation's armed forces. More than 1,500,000 cases were taken by the Army, Navy and lease-lend agencies during 1941. In 1918, the Government established a prior claim to the whole Alaskan cannery output.

J. F. Jurich, president of the International Union of Fishermen and Allied Workers (C. I. O.), said union officials were working in cooperation with the packers in efforts to obtain protection for 1942 operations. The union also is demanding individual war risk insurance for its members.

Expects to Give Protection.

"The Navy fully appreciates the situation with which the salmon packing industry is confronted," a 13th Naval District source said, "and is in full sympathy with its desires. It will do everything in its power to provide the protection required, but it must be understood that the contingencies of war are not predictable."

Mr. Jurich said another problem would be in getting fishermen and cannery workers from defense plants in the State. He expressed the belief that many with "fishing in their blood" will want to go north, if given reasonable protection.

"Fifth brought down came down on starboard side, nosed directly into air and spun into crash loosing its torpedo.

"Sixth plane brought down was a dive bomber during second phase of attack and after torpedo attack. This plane was shot down by anti-aircraft gun and those from other ships."

Leader Resigns After Group Shifts To Cooperation With Britain

[By the Associated Press]

Bardoli, India, Dec. 30—Mohandas K. Gandhi, uncompromising proponent of civil disobedience to British rule, stepped down as leader of the All-India Party Congress today because of differences over a party shift toward war cooperation with Britain.

The resignation of the little leader of India's independence movement was presented and accepted at a session of the party's executive committee which adopted a resolution throwing its sympathies to 'peoples who are subjects of aggression and who are fighting for their freedom."

War At Borders

The war at India's very borders, the committee emphasized, was its sole motive, and not devotion to Britain.

". . . Only a free and independent India can be in a position to undertake the defense of the country on a national basis and be of help in furtherance of the larger causes that are emerging from the storm of war," its resolution said.

"The whole background in India is one of hostility and distrust of the British Government and not even the most far-reaching promises can alter this background; nor can a subject India offer voluntary or willing help to arrogant imperialism, which is undistinguishable from Fascist authoritarianism."

Second Disagreement

Hewing unswervingly to his principles, Gandhi said in his letter of resignation:

"I must continue the civil disobedience movement for freedom of speech against all wars with such congressmen and others whom I select."

It was the second time that Gandhi had disagreed over wartime policies.

He dissented when the executive committee voted at Bombay last year to withdraw a previous conditional offer to cooperate with Britain in the war effort, but accepted an offer to resume his party leadership with power "to guide it in any action that should be taken."

Gandhi, Opposing War Backing, Resigns as India Party Leader

Decides to Retain His Freedom to Fight All Violence

By the Associated Press.

BARDOLI, India, Dec. 30.—Mohandas K. Gandhi, long the leader of India's independence movement, was relieved today of his leadership of the All-India Congress Party at his own request.

Gandhi decided to retain his freedom to oppose all violence and could not go along with the majority of the party's Executive Committee in a step toward co-operation in Britain's war effort.

Gandhi had written asking, "Please relieve me of the responsibility laid upon me by the Bombay resolution of September 16, 1940."

Previous Offer Withdrawn.

The party committee voted at Bombay last year to withdraw a previous conditional offer to cooperate with Britain in the war effort and invited Gandhi—who disagreed with the offer in the first place—to resume his party leadership with power "to guide it in any action that should be taken."

Now the party and Gandhi have differed again, and the little leader in whom millions of Indians placed their hopes for independence has stepped aside, unswervingly true to his principles of non-violent civil disobedience.

"I must continue the civil disobedience movement for freedom of speech against all wars with such Congressmen and others whom I select," Gandhi's letter said.

The committee's resolution made clear that the shift toward collaboration was dictated not by devotion to Britain but, rather by sympathy with "peoples who are subjects of aggression and who are fighting for their freedom."

New World Situation.

Its resolution said in part:

While there has been no change in British policy toward India, the Working Committee must nevertheless take into consideration the new world situation that has arisen by developments of the war in the world and its approach to India.

"The sympathies of the Congress must inevitably lie with peoples who are subjects of aggression and who are fighting for their freedom. But only a free and independent India can be in a position to undertake the defense of the country on a national basis and be of help in furtherance of the larger causes that are emerging from the storm of war.

"The whole background in India is one of hostility and distrust of the British government, and not even the most far-reaching promises can alter this background nor can a subject India offer voluntary or willing help to arrogant imperialism which is undistinguishable from Fascist authoritarianism."

Gandhi Astonished

In his letter to the President of the Congress Gandhi said he had interpreted the Bombay resolution of September 16, 1940, to mean that Congress was refusing participation in the present war or all wars on the grounds principally of non-violence.

"I found to my astonishment," he wrote, "that most members differed from my interpretation and held that opposition need not be on the grounds of non-violence. . . ."

No Discord Noted

Gandhi attended the committee sessions, and the decision relieving him of leadership was believed to have been reached without discord, Gandhi offering his counsel but standing apart from collaboration.

If terms are arranged with the Government, therefore, the powerful Indian faction would align itself with Britain now that war has come to India's borders.

There were indications it would offer to form a coalition national government for the duration, probably after trying to get a new London declaration on India's post-war status.

REDS STORM INTO CRIMEA, RETAKE KERCH

Army, Aided By Black Sea Fleet, Also Recaptures Feodosiya

DEC 31 1941

Whole Nazi Peninsular Force Seen In Peril. Stalin Jubilant

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Wednesday, Dec. 31—Red troops of the Caucasus and the Black Sea fleet have stormed and recaptured the Crimean towns of Kerch and Feodosiya in smashing new successes which imperil the entire Nazi army on that Black Sea peninsula, it was officially announced today.

Premier Stalin immediately sent a message of congratulation to General Kozlov, commander in chief on the Caucasian front, and to Rear Admiral Oktyabrsky, commander of the Black Sea fleet which participated in the reoccupation of those cities which the Russians were forced to abandon in mid-November.

At Gate To Caucasus

Kerch is on the eastern tip of the Crimean peninsula about two miles across the straits from the Caucasus and its oil wealth. Feodosiya, however, is at least fifty-five miles to the west on the coast.

"Retreating in both these sectors, the enemy is being pursued by our units," the communique said.

German armies besieging the big Crimean naval base of Sevastopol on the southwestern coast now are menaced from the rear by the advancing Soviet eastern armies.

Stalin's Victory Message

Stalin in his victory message told his army and naval leaders that "the Crimea must be freed from the German invaders and their Rumanian and Italian lackeys."

The seizure of Kerch and Feodosiya occurred after a stubborn two-day fight which began Monday. Russian troops aided by the Red fleet stormed across the Straits of Kerch from the east and fell on Feodosiya from the south.

The Germans announced their capture of Kerch by Nazi and Rumanian troops on November 16 after a two-week race across the flat hinterland of the peninsula from Perekop Isthmus.

Nazi Hopes Dashed

By the Crimean drive and another along the southern Russian mainland toward Rostov the Germans had hoped to crack the gateway to Russian oil in the Caucasus.

But Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's mainland troops later threw the Germans out of Rostov as far back as Taganrog, which is believed to be surrounded.

Now the Russians have announced the retaking of the eastern Crimean strongholds in the huge winter drive to oust the Germans from occupied Russia.

Generals Peryushin and Lyov, of the army, and Captain Bosistin's naval forces were cited for distinguished service in today's communique.

Successes Elsewhere

The Russians also reported successes on other sectors of the long front, especially a thirty-mile drive across the Oka river above Orel. The communique named Kozelsk as one of the towns recaptured.

Kozelsk is fifty miles southwest of Kaluga en route to Bryansk and some 150 miles from Moscow.

The communique said ten other localities were retaken after the Germans suffered heavy losses.

"Near the village of B alone," the communique said, "our men killed 550 German officers and [illegible] tured large booty."

The Russians earlier had announced breaking through four strongly fortified areas beyond the Oka river in the central sector drive.

This offensive is being pressed forward in the area of the break-through, official dispatches said, increasing the threat to the German rear between Kaluga and Orel, southwest of Moscow.

Germans "Panicky"

"The Germans exert great efforts to check their panicky flight," said a Tass dispatch. "On the Oka river they had prepared a fortified zone with trenches, dugouts, barbed-wire entanglements and blockhouses. On December 28 our units broke through these defenses in several sectors simultaneously. Forcing the Oka, Red army men dislodged the Fascists from four populated places where the Germans had created fortified areas."

[Germany army sources admitted the Russians, using horse-drawn sleds, were attacking in blinding snowstorms, but the Nazis contended these attacks were disconnected and were stopped by German fire.]

Air Battles Intensified

A return to large-scale aerial combat was reported from the southern front, where December 27 was likened to one of the tensest days of fighting since the Red army's recapture of Rostov.

In two sectors, it was stated, 19 German planes were brought down as compared with one Russian plane damaged. Russian flyers also were credited with destroying 40 enemy tanks, 300 trucks, 13 guns, 1,400 men and with silencing several artillery batteries, mine-throwers and machine guns.

On one unidentified sector, the day communique reported, 700 Germans were killed, 9 artillery pieces destroyed and 24 others captured, along with other equipment.

Troops Break Through One Zone in Oka Fortified by Nazis for Long Occupation.

Moscow, Wednesday, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The Russians announced today the recapture of Kerch on the eastern end of the Crimean peninsula.

Feodosiya, fifty-five miles west of Kerch, also was re-occupied in a great general Russian offensive.

Both towns apparently were taken by naval storm troops.

Kerch is separated from the Caucasus only by a narrow strait.

Sevastopol Attack Pushed

(In London a British military source said today that German forces in the Crimean peninsula are continuing their attacks on Sevastopol, but the Russian garrison there is showing no signs of weakening.)

(Elsewhere on the Eastern front, the source declared, the Russian offensive is making favorable progress, but he gave no specific details.)

Oka River Line Blasted

The Russians have blasted German troops from defenses on the Oka River, including one elaborately fortified zone, dispatches from the front to the newspaper Pravda said today.

The correspondent said that the Germans had prepared trenches, dugouts, barbed wire entanglements and blockhouses in one sector, but that the Russians broke through on December 28 in several places simultaneously after crossing the river.

[The dispatch probably referred to the river front south of Moscow between Orel and Kaluga.]

In four other places where the Germans had erected fortifications Soviet troops broke through, the correspondent said, and the offensive is still under way.

"Our units keep steadfastly advancing," the newspaper said, despite "great efforts exerted by the Germans to check the panicky flight of their troops."

Southern Air Battle.

It called December 27 one of the tensest days of fighting on the southern front since the recapture of Rostov, with a battle for air supremacy continuing all day. Especially heavy air combats took place, and the newspaper said that Soviet flyers destroyed forty enemy tanks, about 300 trucks, thirteen guns, 1,400 men and officers and silenced several artillery batteries.

The Soviet communique reported 700 Germans killed in one day's fighting on an unnamed sector and said that guerrillas operating behind German lines in the Leningrad region blew up a staff trolley, killed eight German officers and wrecked railroad tracks resulting in an accident to a sixty-car train carrying tanks and trucks. Roads were mined to catch unwary trucks and the detachment claimed that it had killed eleven officers, twenty soldiers and fourteen spies in the past few days.

Heavy Nazi Losses Reported.

The information bureau gave no geographical details on the fighting in its early morning communique, but declared "the enemy is suffering heavy losses."

Red Army airmen downed 26 German planes yesterday, it said, against a loss of six Russian craft.

Soviet parachutists were reported by the army newspaper Red Star to have landed heavy blows behind the German lines.

Specially trained troops blew up 29 bridges on routes of the retreat, killed 400 Germans, burned quantities of war equipment and then rejoined their detachments, Red Star said.

To Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, the Soviet armed forces are "truly magnificent." Mr. Eden returned to London today from Moscow conferences—described as "full, frank and sincere"—which led to a complete agreement between Britain and Russia on the conduct of the war.

Nazis Fight Off Horse Sleighs

Berlin, Dec. 30 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A.P.)—Russians attacked in horse-drawn sleds through blinding snowstorms which raged over vast sections of the eastern front yesterday, but their disconnected offensives collapsed under the weight of German fire, German military sources reported today.

After one such attack by a battalion on the southern front the ground was strewn with 400 dead, wrecked sleighs, mortars and machine guns, these sources said.

The German high command announced today Nazi bombers had sunk a Russian destroyer in the Black Sea and said that strong Soviet land attacks had been smashed at various sectors of the Eastern front.

A Red navy cruiser was declared to have been damaged during the Black Sea aerial attacks.

German troops successfuly smashed stubborn Soviet attacks in bitter frost and snowstorms on the Arctic Murmansk front in the week from December 21 to 28, the high command said.

The enemy suffered heavy and bloody losses," it said.

Germans also described a Red Army attack on the southern sector of the front, launched by horse-drawn sledges under cover of a heavy blizzard, which was frustrated by concentrated defense fire and a counterassault.

A Russian battalion was said to have been wiped out.

New Attack on Sevastopol.

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—German forces in the Crimean peninsula are continuing their attacks on Sevastopol, but the Russian garrison there is showing no sign of weakening, a British military source said today.

Elsewhere on the Eastern front, the spokesman declared, the Russian offensive is making favorable progress, but he gave no specific details.

U. S. ENVOY HAS TALK WITH EDEN

DEC 31 1941

Winant Receives Report on Russian Conference.

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—United States Ambassador John G. Winant called tonight on Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden to hear about his trip to Moscow, the results of which some sources regarded as so important that a secret session of Parliament might be called to hear them.

Some even hinted that the Foreign Secretary's observations in Russia had led him to the conviction—which may be imparted to Parliament—that the German war machine is in acute difficulties while still facing the three severest months of the Russian winter.

Mr. Eden was expected to disclose some of his conclusions in a broadcast next Sunday night (3:15 P. M., Eastern standard time).

In informed quarters the conviction was strong that Mr. Eden had brought home good news from his conferences with Joseph Stalin and observations behind Russia's lines on the Eastern front. These informants said that the two leaders' talks were of the frankest possible nature concerning the production of munitions and equipping of Russia's reserve manpower from a potential big Allied pool.

On leaving Moscow, Mr. Eden sent the Russian leader a message expressing his conviction that the conversations were "of so far-reaching character that they will strengthen our common war effort and so bring nearer the day of final victory."

The British radio today quoted the Moscow newspaper Pravda as describing the talks between Anthony Eden and Joseph Stalin as an event of great political significance, and saying that "a new and important step forward has been taken toward a further rapprochement between Soviet Russia and Great Britain."

The British broadcast, picked up here by CBS, then quoted Pravda as stating that "this strengthens still further the confidence of the people of both countries in the fruitful development of operations and the certitude that the hour of decisive victory over Hitler is approaching."

British Play Back Nazis' Gloatings Over Kerch Fall

New York, Dec. 30 (AP) — The British radio played back to the Germans tonight some of the gloatings aired upon their capture of Kerch, the Crimean port now regained by the Russians.

Here is a typical boast, broadcast by Berlin on Nov. 18, and resurrected by the B.B.C.:

"If the British wireless and press now regard Kerch as without importance, this is only to cover up a serious Bolshevik defeat. With the defeat of Kerch, Germans have closed the entrance to the Sea of Azov and thereby gained 45 per cent of the Black Sea coast.

"Kerch also forms the bridgehead to the Caucasus, and the rich oil fields of Krasnadara are within gun range. And the last and most significant thing: England knows well that the occupation of Kerch will have far-reaching effect on the positions in the Caucasus!"

"The Germans," B.B.C. observed, "will have to find a new explanation or excuse for their crushing defeat at Kerch."

The broadcast was heard by N.B.C.

Drunken Nazi Helped Russians

New York, Dec. 30 (AP)—The British radio relayed a Russian broadcast tonight saying a German officer who got drunk celebrating Christmas provided information which led to the Soviet recapture last week of Narofominsk, 35 miles southwest of Moscow.

"Advancing on the main road, the Russians captured a German officer who had been celebrating Christmas and was completely drunk," said the account heard here by CBS.

"The officer sent them to the German headquarters, and the staff officers' celebration there was interrupted by the conquering Red Army forces."

Nazi Soldiers Complain Of Hardships in Russia

Find War There No 'Strength Through Joy Excursion'

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 30 (AP).—The war up to June 22, when Germany invaded Russia, was just a "Strength Through Joy excursion" compared to what has happened since, a soldier wrote in Heinrich Himmler's S. S. (Nazi Elite Guard) organ, "Das Schwarze Korps."

"We do not wish to underestimate the hardships of the previous campaigns in France and the Balkans, but compared with whta we endue in Russia they were child's play," he wrote.

The reference to "Strength Through Joy," the recreation activity of the German Labor Front, was contained in a collection of letters of soldiers published to show that, even though the people are asked to surrender their clothing for the front, they are suering no hardships compared with the men on the Eastern battle lines.

Another soldier wrote: "We have no beds, not even straw, only a pine bough. We have no dry place, no warm corner, and cannot wash and shave for days. We wear our boots and uniforms for months. On battle days our food is mostly twenty-four hours late. We are all fed up with this Russia, dirt, knee-deep clay. We have suffered enough moisture, cold, dirt."

Another wrote: "This God-forsaken country weighs us down. The people stare at us without fear, joy or hate. Dante did not know Soviet Russia, because hell must be like that—gray mud, dreariness, constant putrefaction."

Big French provincial newspapers arriving in Switzerland carry scarcely a line on the war in Russia, leading the Swiss paper "Berner Tagwacht" to comment, "this unanimous action of the French papers clearly indicates it was ordered so the French people will not be informed of Russian successes."

ARMORED TRAIN BUILT

Russian Workers Produce It in Spare Time

By Edward Kennedy

Somewhere in Russia, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—A group of Russian workers in a railway repair shop, bent on doing something extra for the war effort in their spare time, have built the army an armored train.

They made many of its parts from pieces of scrapped locomotives, such as the gun turret bases, which were converted from the huge wheels featured on Russian railroad engines.

But it goes forty-five miles an hour and is a beauty.

Besides the 100-ton locomotive with its three-inch steel protection there are four huge, armored cars, each having two thicknesses of steel and a revolving gun turret. Each car carries machine guns, anti-aircraft weapons and mortars.

The train commander directs it from a super turret which boasts four means of communication with the engineer.

Army officers, pleased with the gift, told the workers that one of their number could be the engineer.

They named one, but found he had a blind spot—he says he can't run it in reverse.

Smiling broadly, he said:

"I guess I'll have to keep it going forward until I get to Berlin. Perhaps I can find some one there who is an authority on reverse."

BLIZZARDS IN THE BALKANS

22 Below is Recorded in Eastern Bulgaria and Western Macedonia

Berlin, Dec. 30—(Official broadcast recorded by AP)—The blizzards and severe cold which are hampering the armies on the Russian front also are being felt in the Balkans and in Turkey, according to despatches received here today.

Reports from Sofia, Bulgaria, said the temperature there had dropped to four degrees below zero (Fahrenheit), while 22 below was recorded in eastern Bulgaria and western Macedonia. Snowstorms also swept through this area.

From Ankara, Turkey, came news of blizzards in eastern and central Anatolia which left six-foot snowbanks, disrupted communications and cut off many towns and villages.

BRITISH SMASH 42 MORE AXIS TANKS IN LIBYA

DEC 31 1941

Cornered Germans Defeated In Attempt To Make Last Stand

English Hussars Sweep In To Round Up Enemy's Infantry

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Correspondent

Cairo, Dec. 30—The cornered Axis army in Libya has lost forty-two of its remaining tanks in a rash and costly effort to lash out at the growing British pressure in the western sands of Cirenaica, British Middle Eastern headquarters announced today.

Attempting a last stand south of Agedabia, on the eastern shore of the Gulf of Sirte, an enemy column spearheaded with tanks "made yet a further attack to interfere with our operations"—operations bent on complete destruction of Nazi General Erwin Rommel's fighting strength, the British said.

"In the ensuing engagement," a communique added, "twenty-two enemy tanks were destroyed and twenty others received serious damage."

DEC 31 1941

Hussars Round Up Nazis

Then, with the Axis column scattered and retreating, a regiment of British Hussars swept in and rounded up five truck-loads of German infantry.

Whether Rommel's stand and counter-attack means that he is hoping for reinforcement from the west or is trying to fight a rear-guard action to facilitate further flight toward Tripoli remained in doubt.

Belief that the Axis is trying to bring up men and supplies eastward was strengthened by RAF reports of heavy raids on oil transport and troop-trucks on the Tripolitanian coastal road east of Homs, some sixty miles from Tripoli.

Welcome Tank Fighting

Nevertheless, the British welcomed the resumption of heavy tank fighting because they believed it meant the final battle to annihilate the German armored force is either beginning or imminent.

British pressure at all points of the Axis position was renewed after the attack.

[Axis communiques said the German and Italian forces had made a determined stand around Agedabia, in two days destroying seventy-four British tanks and armored cars, but British sources said this was completely unconfirmed. The enemy did not claim to have stopped the British progress.]

Far behind the lines the British were systematically mopping up the isolated outposts which the Axis left near the Egyptian frontier. One out-position and an ammunition dump were destroyed yesterday by artillery fire, today's communique said.

RAF and Free French flyers smashed at a concentration of Axis motor transport south of Agedabia, and reported direct hits and fires among buildings and huts in the area.

Axis Tank Toll Of 42 Claimed

DEC 31 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 30—Forty-two Axis tanks were knocked out of the Battle of Libya in an unsuccessful attempt to stall Britain's westward drive, the British Middle East command announced today.

It said the clash of armored forces occurred south of Agedabia, indicating that Britain's vanguards had passed that Axis hurdle and were somewhere along the road to El Agheila, high water mark of the first British campaign and about eighty miles beyond Agedabia on the coastal highway skirting the Gulf of Sirte.

Axis Claims Unconfirmed.

(British military commentators in London said that while the engagement was "of some magnitude" it was "obviously only part of the operation which is still going on," and the main battle remains to be fought. They said they had "no confirmation whatever" of the claims in German and Italian communiques that seventy-four British tanks had been destroyed in the fight.

(It was acknowedged that unusually heavy rains had impeded the progress of both light British tanks and the air force.)

Axis forces apparently attempted a stand in the Agedabia area, the communique saying the tank battle was the result of "yet a further" Axis effort "to interfere with our operations."

Five Trucks Of Prisoners

However, it said, twenty-two Axis tanks were destroyed, twenty more suffered "serious damage" and "our pressure on the enemy is being maintained."

(Both the German and Italian communiques indicated that Axis forces had made a determined stand in the Agedabia sector, although neither claimed to have stopped the British progress.)

The British said that five more truckloads of German infantrymen were captured near Agedabia and that air operations were particularly successful there.

To the East, far behind the shifting desert front, the communique said an enemy outpost and ammunition dump near the Egyptian frontier were demolished by artillery fire.

British planes ranged as far west as Homs, sixty miles east of Tripoli, where direct hits were scored on trucks and a gasoline tanker, an R. A. F. communique said.

Some Axis troops were still dug in at Bardia on the Egyptian frontier, but British and Free French planes attacked them frequently.

Big Battle Yet to Come.

London, Dec 30 (A. P.).—British military commentators here said today that while the engagement just fought in Labya was of some magnitude it was obviously only part of the operation which is still going on and the main battle remains to be fought. They said they had no confirmation whatever of the claims in German and Italian communiques that seventy-four British tanks had been destroyed in the fight.

"The weather in Libya has been very bad, with a pouring rain slowing up all movement," he said.

The commentator reported that such weather would handicap the British more than the Germans.

Rome Admits Raid on Greece

ROME, Dec. 30 (official broadcast recorded by (AP)).—The Italian high command reported today a British air raid on Greece in which a number of high explosive bombs were dropped near Athens. It claimed the raid was "without success."

Axis Claims Mount.

Rome, Dec. 30 (Official broadcast recorded by A. P.).—The Italian High Command said today fighting continued around Agedabia, eighty miles south of Bengasi, and a total of seventy-four British armored units had been destroyed by Axis forces there.

This represented an increase of a dozen or so over the number reported in yesterday's communique as having been destroyed.

The number of prisoners, it was announced today, has risen to several hundred.

Action Near Agedabia.

Far to the east of Agedabia, near the Egyptian-Libyan border, intensive artillery exchanges were reported on the Salum front, while at Bardia, the High Command said, an attack of armored units has been repulsed.

Italian and German bombers carried out low-level attacks "and bombed with good results enemy supply columns and concentrations of the enemy's armored columns," the High Command added.

The communique said German and Italian planes attacked a naval convoy off northern Cirenaica and scored several hits on a destroyer and another ship.

The communique also reported British air attacks on Tripoli and Zuara, in Libya. It said there were several casualties but damage was unimportant.

Report From Berlin.

Berlin, Dec. 30 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—Several hundred British soldiers were declared by the High Command today to have been taken prisoner in fighting around Agedabia, the current focal point in the battle of Libya, and further local successes were officially claimed.

"The number of enemy tanks and armored cars wrecked in counter-attacks has increased to seventy-four," the High Command said.

German bombers sank a large sailing ship off Valletta, Malta, a British Mediterranean base, and attacked airdromes on the island day and night, its communique reported.

German fighters were reported to have destroyed six British planes, five of them in aerial combat.

GAYDA OFFERS ALIBI

Blames Italy's Reverses on Failure to Bomb Egypt

Rome, Dec. 30—(Andi agency to AP)—Virginio Gayda, Fascist editorial spokesman, today blamed what he called Italy's respect for the Egyptian population and failure to bomb Egyptian territory for her reverses in Libya.

"It is certain that if Italy had from the first day of the war full liberty of action against Egyptian territory she could more easily have struck at the centers vital to the British offensive, and have stifled at their birth the various moves attempted against Libya," he wrote.

Italians in Libyan Town Begin Giving Up First Day of Attack

One Artillery Unit Waits a While, Then Offers Apologies to British for Delay

DEC 31 1941

By PRESTON GROVER,
Associated Press War Correspondent.

CAIRO, Dec. 30.—I returned to Cairo today from three weeks in the Libyan desert with advancing British forces.

From a lively villa 600 yards away, I watched the British, moving east of besieged Tobruk toward Bengasi, storm and capture the town of Giovanni Berta, southwest of the old pirate city of Derna.

Resistance from the Italians was the same old story. Mussolini's forces defending Giovanni Berta began surrendering the evening of the first day of the attack. One artillery battery unit didn't give up until the following morning. Then its English-speaking captain apologized to a British colonel for the delay:

"I didn't know surrendering had begun," he explained.

Mussolini's forts pockmark the Libyan desert. Some were built amid sandy desert wastes. Others dot farm areas. They all looked like something from Hollywood, with turrets at their corners and notches for guns at wall tops.

Gun Portholes Are Filled.

The Italians seemed far more interested in keeping bullets from reaching them than in shooting them out. They had filled their gun portholes with rock.

Through field glasses I watched a British detachment move down a street on a mopping-up operation. Because of a slight rise in the ground the Tommies and a group of Italian soldiers did not see each other immediately. When they met unexpectedly not a shot was fired.

Tobruk's gallant defenders recounted this experience with what they termed a "laughing bomb!"

At dusk one evening, they related, a horrible, unearthly guffawing was heard high overhead. Closer and closer came the weird sound. It stopped abruptly with a terrific explosion at the harbor's edge.

Officers argued there was a simple explanation for the sound—a defective bomb. But the men contended the noise was some devilish new sound device cooked up by the Nazis—like Stuka dive bomber sirens—to terrorize them.

Corned Beef Chief Dish.

British Tommies could compile a new cookbook of ways to prepare corned beef, their chief dish on desert campaigns. But it seems a waste of time. No matter what the process, it always comes out the same—tasting like corned beef.

What this so-called desert needs is less rain. That's right. It rained at least every other day during my three weeks with the British 8th Army, sometimes heavily. Of course, rain is rare as one goes deeper into the interior.

There are no hotels left along the line of battle. We slept in holes we dug in the ground or in old forts or abandoned offices of Mussolini's colonial organization. The latter quarters have been used as hospitals from time to time. One usually finds them cleaner than the old forts—and there are not so many bugs.

Some Fire Ignored

Under artillery fire, air bombing and sometimes even machine-gun fire, British soldiers sit calmly in the desert sand, munching hard biscuits. But when rifle bullets start singing close by they scamper for shelter.

"Shell and bomb fragments just smack around here and there and you are likely to be as lucky in one place as another," one soldier said. "But if a rifle bullet hits into the sand beside you, you'd better take cover. That one was meant for you personally by somebody on the other end of that rifle."

The soldiers use rocks to build walls around their tents in the desert as protection against bomb fragments and the wind. Another advantage is that less sand seeps out of rocks into food and beds.

After each rain, swarms of ducks fly in from the Mediterranean and splash around in puddles formed by low spots in the desert. The soldiers bang away at them, but the fowls are hard to hit with rifle shots.

In the desert the British Tommy often turned businessman. His tea and sugar rations were traded to the natives for eggs and chickens.

ew Mediterranean Developments Likely

Italian Papers Reported Full Of References To Axis Readiness For "Enterprises"

Bern, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Rome correspondent of the Zurich newspaper Die Tat said today there was increasing evidence of "imminent new developments in the Mediterranean."

He said the Italian press was full of references connecting the Mediterranean and Pacific fighting, especially asserting that "the Axis powers in the Mediterrean are ready for new enterprises."

Italian press reports also said Premier Mussolini, in talks with Gen. Ambrosio, Commander of the Second Army near Agedabia, had given "directions for quick and prompt solution of some of the problems of a military character."

British bombers shot down an eighth German fighter plane, the Air Ministry said. It said a heavy weight of bombs was dropped but the results could not be observed.

Four-motored [illegible]nped their loads on [illegible]ench naval base, whe[illegible]battle cruisers Scharnh[illegible]senau and the cruiser Pri[illegible]ve been reported berthed.

The assault led to the suggestion in informed quarters that at least one of the three Nazi warships might be getting ready to leave for the Atlantic hunting grounds after completion of repairs to damage previously inflicted by the RAF.

It was the eleventh raid this month and the second by daylight in the past fortnight upon Brest.

The Poles, flying Spitfires, dived on the Nazi intercepters from 13,000 feet to cover the bomber withdrawal.

In five minutes they had accounted for seven planes.

Two bombers and three fighters were lost out of the British formations.

Meanwhile, the British navy during 1941 intercepted forty-six vessels attempting to run the blockade of unoccupied France, an official of the Ministry of Economic Warfare disclosed.

He added that shipments which reached France through the Mediterranean port of Marseille were "responsible for almost the only leak in our blockade."

"France is a great sausage machine, grinding out Nazi war essentials," he said. "Four planes out of every five, and eighty-five trucks out of every one hundred went to Germany, for which the French aluminum and chemical industries are working almost exclusively. Those were the reasons for which both occupied and unoccupied France had to be treated as enemy territory."

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Britain's giant Halifax bombers made a heavy daylight attack today on the German naval base in the French port of Brest.

An authoritative announcement said that details were not yet available on the outcome of the raid, which previously was directed against Nazi warships in the harbor.

Seven German fighter planes were reported destroyed by Spitfires escorting the British bombers, while the attackers lost two bombers and three Spitfires.

[The battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst and the cruiser Prince Eugen all have been reported at Brest recently.]

London Raid Anniversary Sees Heavy Nazi Attack

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—German bombers launched their heaviest assault in many weeks on Britain last night on the first anniversary of the great London fire bomb raid, but the government said today the attacks, aimed mainly at the northeast coast, had caused only a few casualties and no serious damage.

Five persons were reported killed, several seriously injured and others slightly hurt in a raid on one northeast town.

In one district several people were trapped by a landslide, presumably caused by the bomb repercussions. In another area a bomb fell near a surface shelter, leaving it tilting on the edge of a crater, but no one was hurt. Some residential districts suffered considerably.

Three of the raiders were shot down, the Air Ministry said.

Some German planes flew over the industrial Midlands, but there were no immediate reports of damage there.

The Air Ministry said British bombers attacked shipping at the German-occupied French port of La Pallice during the night and that all the raiders returned safely to base.

It acknowledged loss of one fighter plane on patrol yesterday.

British Raid on Convoy Thwarted Nazis Claim

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 30 (Official broadcast).—The German high command said today naval gunners had frustrated a British bombing attack on an Axis convoy, shooting down three out of six raiding planes.

German flyers sent a British merchant ship to the bottom in a daylight raid west of the Faeroe Islands, it also reported.

Submarine chasers were credited with successful protection of the Axis convoy, all ships of which were declared to have "reached their destination safely."

"Strong bomber formations last night attacked an important military supply harbor on the British east coast, where accurate hits were obtained," the high command said.

The dispatch said toilet soap, completely lacking for six months, is to be reintroduced, but that all such soap will be of uniform manufacture and that all sales will be limited to single cakes.

Other rations—one pound of sugar, two pounds of macroni, 150 grams (a shade over four ounces) of ordinary soap per month, and 200 grams (seven ounces) of bread per day—have not been changed, according to the dispatch.

War Meal Two Days A Week In Reich—Butter Supply Cut In Il Duce's Land

[By the Associated Press]

GERMANY

Berlin, Dec. 30 (Official broadcast)—Beginning January 1, German restaurants on two days a week will serve one "field kitchen" dish—a pot or a plate of the simplest fare.

Apart from this, restaurants may serve on these days only the usual "basic dish" for which no ration coupons are required.

The Institute of Cooking Science at Frankfort-on-Main will issue recipes for the field kitchen dish, for which not more than 50 grams (1.765 ounces) of meat coupons and not more than 10 grams (.353 of an ounce) of general food or bread coupons will be required.

Two meatless days a week—Tuesday and Friday—will continue in effect.

ITALY

Berlin, Dec. 30 (Official broadcast)—Reduction of Italy's butter ration from one hundred to seventy grams (from three and a half to two and a half ounces) per month, to go into effect January 1, was announced today in a dispatch from Rome. At the same time the oil ration will be increased to slightly more than a quarter of a liter each month per person.

"Famine is reaching animals as well as humans," he said, and the need for food is "pressing."

SWEDEN

Stockholm, Dec. 30 (AP)—War-pinched but neutral Sweden today ordered the rationing of clothes, beginning January 6.

To prevent a last-minute buying spree, the Government banned the sale of any kind of wearing apparel before that date.

Ration cards will be issued, carrying 120 points for men and 110 for women to be used over an eighteen-month period.

A woolen dress will require 6 to 15 points, but silk garments and stockings are excluded.

A man's suit will take 45 points, a shirt 4 to 7 points. By careful figuring, a man can replenish his wardrobe during the eighteen-month period with one suit, a pair of summer trousers, two shirts, one pair of pajamas, one undershirt and two pair of shorts, two collars, one pair of mittens, three pair of heavy stockings, one pair of socks, a bathing suit and five handkerchiefs.

Bread Rationing Slated In Rumania and Hungary

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 30 (Official Broadcast).—Bread rationing will begin in Rumania January 8 and on January 15 it will be extended throughout Hungary, according to advices from Bucharest and Budapest.

The Rumanian rations are to be 300 grams daily per person, or about 10½ ounces, with manual laborers receiving double that amount.

Budapest and its environs have been on rations for some time. These have allowed each person 250 grams of bread daily, less than 9 ounces, and workers about 14 ounces plus a little less than 2 ounces of wheat flour. Similar amounts are expected to be alloted the rest of the country.

Four Children Urged By Group For Every Family In Finland

Helsinki, Dec. 30 (AP)—Every family in Finland must produce at least four children to maintain the country's present population level because of the serious loss of life in two wars, the National Population League reported today.

Six children per family would be necessary to guarantee a growth in the population, added the league, which is preparing a program aimed at increasing the birth rate.

The report, declaring that forty per cent. of all Finns of marriage age are single, proposed a bachelor tax, an increase in Government bounties to large families and loans to newlyweds.

100 Germans Reported Executed for Mutiny

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The British radio today said 100 German soldiers have been executed for mutiny in Paris since December 1 and 50 have committed suicide.

The broadcast, heard here by C. B. S., said two German colonels, a major and a junior officer of the Paris garrison were shot at Vincennes a week ago.

The bodies of suicides, the radio said, are "now rotting in the open in No. 12 ditch of the Cemetery Ivry-sur-Seine."

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Fifteen persons were killed and about 100 injured today in the collision of two trains at Eccles, Lancashire.

Collaborationist Shot.

Vichy, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Fernand Soupe, the former "Red Mayor" of the Parisian suburb of Montreuil who turned collaborationist, was shot by a cyclist last night.

The Paris press reported the incident as another terrorist attempt on turncoat communists.

Soupe's condition today was reported as improving.

Morning papers announced that another Frenchman was shot by a German firing squad December 27 for illegal possession of arms.

VICHY ARRESTS EX-LEADER OF FRENCH LABOR

DEC 31 1941

Leon Jouhaux, Veteran Official, Said To Have Been Imprisoned

John L. Lewis Of France Once Controlled Five Million Workers

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Dec. 29 (Delayed)—It was reported today that Leon Jouhaux, veteran president of the French General Confederation of Labor in the days of he French Republic, had been arrested at a chateau in Dordogne department.

Lewis Of French Labor

Prior to the German invasion of France, Leon Jouhaux for thirty years had been the John L. Lewis of the French labor movement. As head of the General Federation of Labor, he ruled as undisputed czar of 5,000,000 French trade unionists, approximately one half of all French workers.

Jouhaux has veered increasingly to the left since 1936 when his confederation absorbed the dissident faction of the Communist which had split from the French labor movement a decade before.

Foe Of Appeasement

A vigorous foe of appeasement and a consistent champion of national defense, Jouhaux called a nation-wide general strike in protest against the Daladier Government in the fall of 1938.

The Premier brcke the strike with the use of troops after twenty-four hours and had Jouhaux dismissed from the council of regents of the Bank of France, a governmental position.

With the coming to power of the Vichy Government, Jouhaux, who was a descendant of a liberal who helped drive Louis XVI from the throne and a son of a member of the Paris Commune who helped pull down Napoleon III, rapidly lost his former influence and passed quietly into the background.

11 Norwegians Executed.

London, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Execution of eleven Norwegians at Stavanger and a fine of $448,000 levied on the city for civil disorders which followed were reported by the Norweigian Telegraph Radio from the Oslo radio today.

Ten of the victims were charged by German occupation authorities with espionage and the other with possessing firearms, it said.

65 KILLED IN CRASHES

50 Die in French, 15 in English Trains.

Lille, German-Occupied France, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Fifty persons were reported killed and many injured today in a train crash near Hazenbrouck in the prohibited frontier zone.

Details were lacking, but the accident was believed to have been a collision.

Vichy, Dec. 30 (AP)—Six thousand of France's African Colonial soldiers who had been held as prisoners of war in German camps, mostly along the French Atlantic coast, have been freed, the French Information Office announced today.

French Move Ex-Premiers

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Dec. 30—In preparation for their "war-guilt" trial scheduled to begin January 15, former Premiers Edouard Daladier and Leon Blum were taken from Portalet fortress today to Bourassol Chateau, near Riom, where the trial will be held.

The transfer, it was stated, was decided upon to facilitate their consultations with lawyers and other preparations.

(There was no mention in this dispatch of former Generalissimo Gamelin, another of the prisoners being held for the Riom trial, but a London dispatch said he also was in the party being moved to Bourassol Chateau.)

Morning papers also announced that another Frenchman was shot by a German firing squad December 27 for illegal possession of arms.

Confiscation In Croatia

Bern, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Italian Stefani agency reported in a Zagreb dispatch today that a decree has been issued authorizing confiscation of property belonging to any persons disturbing public order in Croatia.

London Reports Indicate Liaison Post For Dill

General May Be Detailed To Washington Or Become Member Of Supreme Command

London, Dec. 30 (AP)—An announcement in the London Gazette tonight that Field Marshal General Sir John Greer Dill is to be specially employed led to predictions in informed quarters that he will be given some special liaison post, perhaps in Washington, or will become a member of the staff of the eventual supreme allied command.

General Dill, who went to Washington with Prime Minister Churchill, relinquished his post as chief of the imperial general staff on Christmas Day. His appointment as governor-designate of Bombay was announced in November.

Eiffel Tower May Be Razed

DEC 31 1941

Vichy Metal Collection Group Considers Condemning Landmark for Scrap.

Berlin, Dec. 30 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—Paris's 984-foot Eiffel Tower, known to millions since it was built fifty-two years ago, may be scrapped by a national metal collection committee working under Marshal Petain, a Vichy dispatch said today.

The committee is charged with destroying "certain edifices presenting no artistic or historic interest."

Novelist Henry Bordeaux, French Academy member, was quoted as saying the tower was "an insult to æsthetic taste."

Sighted by Nazi Troops.

German troops sighted the Eiffel Tower when they were forty or fifty miles away in their march on Paris in June, 1940, and one of the Nazis' first acts when they entered Paris was to seize the French tricolor on the tower and to substitute the swastika.

One of Hitler's first acts, too, when he strode into Paris was to visit Napoleon's tomb near by, then ascend the great tower to gaze over his new prize, the conquered city.

The tower would yield quantities of munitions since 7,000 tons of steel are in the $1,000,000 structure which the French engineer, Alexandre Gustave Eiffel, built in 1889.

Would Embitter Millions.

But its demolition in the interests of French-German collaboration would further embitter countless millions of Frenchmen and those throughout the anti-Axis world. Although it was built as a display for the world exhibition, the tower became to thousands what Niagara Falls is to American newly weds. Poor and wealthy alike delighted to ascend its multiple elevators to dizzy heights where they dined well and inexpensively, and where they had their photographs snapped.

Since the fall of France those Frenchmen still praying and working for the delivery of their country also have used the tower to advantage. Eluding German sentries in the night they often have climbed the tower to hang the Allied "V-for-Victory" sign on its girders.

Mail Sent to King In Roosevelt's Care Nets $630 for Charity

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—An envelope contributed by King George VI to a stamp sale for charity brought $630 today. It was of 1939 vintage and was addressed:

"His Majesty King George VI,

"Care of President Franklin D. Roosevelt,

Ulster Commons Votes 'Utmost Support' of U. S.

M. P. Assails De Valera for Opposing Eire's War Entry

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Dec. 30 (AP).—The House of Commons adopted today a resolution of sympathy with the United States for the Japanese attack and pledged "utmost support" in the war effort of Britain and the United States. The resolution thanked the United States for assistance in the past and voiced pride that American citizenry includes a million Ulster kinsmen. American Consul John Randolph attended the session.

The resolution was offered by W. J. Nixon, Independent, who said, "I am surprised to hear Mr. De Valera (Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Eire) say that if Eire went into this war it would cause disunity. I do not think any Irishman worthy of the name would take exception to Ireland joining with America in defense of liberty and justice."

Australia Adopts Daylight Time

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 30 (AP)—At 2 A. M. on New Year's morning Australia will push its clocks ahead one hour, going on daylight saving time for the first time since the World War. This will place eastern Australia, with the major cities of Sydney, Melbourne and Canberra, sixteen hours ahead of Eastern Standard Time.

Gibraltar, Dec. 30 (AP)—Sir Samuel Hoare, British Ambassador to Spain, arrived today from Madrid. He was accompanied by his wife.

BRITISH SHUN TALK OF FRENCH ISLES

Bishop at St. Pierre and Miquelon takes Stand Against de Gaulle

By The Associated Press

London, Dec. 30. — The Free French occupation of St. Pierre and Miquelon, French islands off Newfoundland, "is obviously a matter of discussion among parties most interested" in the United States and Canada and therefore London authorities are withholding further expressions, a Foreign Office commentator said today.

He pointed out that President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Canada's Prime Minister Mackenzie King have been in various conferences and said any developments were likely to come from them.

Free French Mean To Hold Islands, Admiral Wires

Calls St. Pierre Symbol For All Democracies In World

New York, Dec. 30 (AP)—Editors of The Nation, weekly magazine, announced tonight that Vice-Adm. Emile Muselier, who commanded the Free French forces that seized the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, had wired them:

"Whatever happens we will hold on until the end."

Muselier's message, dated today and sent from St. Pierre-Miquelon, was in reply to one from The Nation, which said the Free French and the people of the islands had the unqualified support "of all patriotic Americans who feel nothing but shame at the government's betrayal of our common cause."

Muselier's reply expressed thanks for the message and then said:

"I knew it was not possible that the noble American nation would not be heartily with us in the cause of liberty and in the sacred right of peoples to self-determination. Whatever happens, we will hold on until the end. For all the democracies of the world St. Pierre, like your Statue of Liberty, is a symbol."

ST. PIERRE PARLEY RESUMED BY HULL

DEC 31 1941

Secretary and Henri-Haye Are Non-committal.

Washington, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Hull resumed today conversations with the French Ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, on the status of St. Pierre and Miquelon, the islands off the Newfoundland coast seized by Free French forces last Wednesday.

The Ambassador was non-committal after the talk. At a press conference Secretary Hull said only that the St. Pierre-Miquelon question continued to receive attention.

Asked if an early settlement was in sight, he said he could not go into that without presuming to speak for all parties concerned.

Mr. Hull said he had no news to communicate on reports of a British-American-Russian agreement negotiated in Moscow. He and Soviet Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff conferred forty minutes yesterday. Neither disclosed the subject of their conversation.

Another visitor at the State Department today was Chinese Ambassador Hu Shih, said to have made a general exchange of views and information on the Far Eastern situation.

NAZIS AND POLICE BATTLE IN BRAZIL

DEC 31 1941

Several Killed As Booted Storm Troopers Are Caught In Fifth-Column Raid

Clash Takes Place In Section Where Over Half A Million Germans Live

[By the Associated Press]

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 30—Brazilian state police and organized Nazis have clashed "with some dead" in the state of Rio Grande Do Sul, where more than half a million Germans live, and many fifth columnists have been arrested, dispatches from Porto Alegre said today.

Sixteen booted storm troopers were among those rounded up in widespread police raids.

German Societies Banned

They are members of German societies which have gone underground since the Brazilian Government banned political parties in 1937 and have persisted despite strict police surveillance.

The raids, which resulted in the discovery of armed Nazi elements, were made in numerous towns under the direction of Dr. Plinio Brasil Milano, subchief of police. They were carried out at Nova Hamburgo, Sao Leopoldo, Santa Cruz, Estrella, La Geado, Santa Rosa, Angelo and elsewhere. Where the deaths occurred was not stated.

Proof Uncovered

Definite proof of Nazi activity in Rio Grande Do Sul have been uncovered since Brazil declared her solidarity with the United States following the United States entry into the war. Dr. Coelho de Souza, secretary of education in the state, declared.

Intercept Propaganda.

Three days ago 100,000 volumes of Nazi propaganda, intended for Brazilian schools, were intercepted, he said. A month ago Dr. de Souza told high Brazilian officials that part of the state's German colony was thoroughly Nazi.

A dispatch from Montevideo, meanwhile, said the Uruguayan congressional committee probing anti-Uruguayan activities had reported the discovery of documents, seized in a raid on headquarters of a Fascist organization yesterday, which showed evidence of a Fascist group along military lines in Uruguay. This group, it was reported, took its orders from Rome.

The dispatch did not specify where the clash occurred, but said that the police had found weapons on several groups of the German sympathizers. Among the many arrested were sixteen "Storm Troopers," the report added. All were members of the German societies which, in spite of a 1937 Federal ban on political parties, have continued undercover activity.

Definite Proof in Hand.

Dr. Coelho de Souza, Secretary of Education for the province, told newspaper men that there had been definite proof of Nazi activities in Rio Grande do Sul since Brazil's declaration of solidarity with the United States following the United States' entry into the war.

He said that only three days ago 100,000 volumes of Nazi propaganda, intended for distribution in Brazilian schools, were seized in the province, where some 520,000 Germans and persons of German descent make their homes.

Only last month Dr. De Souza told a group of high Brazilian officials that part of the German colony in his State is a Nazi group in its ideology, its links with European chieftains and its activities.

Nazi Ambassador Leaving Argentina

Buenos Aires, Dec. 30 (AP)—Baron Edmund Von Thermann German ambassador to Argentina is being called home for consultation, the Berlin radio announced late today, and informed persons expressed belief that Argentine and Germany had agreed to get the oft-criticized envoy out of the country prior to the Pan-American conference in Rio de Janeiro next month.

The Argentine ambassador to Germany, Ricardo Olivera, already has been recalled to Buenos Aires to report.

Von Thermann, who has been in Buenos Aires five years, has been under repeated attack by the congressional committee investigating anti-Argentine activities. The lower house has overwhelmingly upheld its accusation that he has abused diplomatic privileges.

Von Thermann refused to reply to a duel challenge by the committee chairman, Raul Damonte Taborda. His residence has been defaced by tar bombs and he has been threatened with prosecution on charges of insulting Congress, but at the height of his difficulties last September he declared he would leave Argentina of his own accord.

Now his first chance to leave will be on the Spanish liner Cabo De Buena Esperanza, which sails Jan. 4.

Acting President Ramon Castillo announced following a Cabinet meeting tonight the Argentine delegation to the Rio De Janeiro conference has been instructed to place the joint interests of all American nations "above regional considerations."

"You may be sure Argentina is going to follow her traditional policy and not go to the conference with the idea of forming purely regional blocs," he said.

Rio Discloses Only That Clash Took Place in Rio Grande do Sul—Sixteen 'Storm Troopers' Arrested.

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Police raids on Nazi centers in the Brazilian province of Rio Grande do Sul resulted in one clash in which there were some killed, according to a dispatch today from Porto Alegre.

Envoy Called Home, Argentina May Clarify Stand Toward Reich

Meeting of Cabinet Is Expected to Decide On Nation's Position

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 30.—Clarification of Argentina's somewhat strained relations with Germany may follow a summons from the Foreign Office here to Ambassador Ricardo Olivera in Berlin to return to Buenos Aires, Argentines said today.

Mr. Olivera was suddenly called home last night on the eve of a cabinet session which is expected to fix the position Argentina will take at a Pan-American meeting in Rio de Janeiro next month.

The Argentine government has sought to maintain a neutral status in the war, but was accorded the United States the rights of a non-belligerent, involving especially permission to refuge warships and planes in Argentina without a time limit.

Baron Edmund von Thermann, German Ambassador to Argentina, has been the target of congressional condemnation for alleged pro-Nazi subversive activities, but a government spokesman declined to say whether he, too, might be withdrawn.

It was not stated whether Mr. Olivera, who, the spokesman said was called "to give an account of some phases of his mission," was being called home permanently.

Reich Calls Thermann Home From Argentina

Action Follows Buenos Aires' Recall of Its Ambassador

LONDON, Dec. 30 (AP).—A German broadcast heard by the Reuters news agency tonight announced that the German Ambassador to Argentina had been summoned home from Buenos Aires to report. He is Baron Edmund von Thermann, whose ouster from Argentina had been recommended by a Congressional committee for connection with Nazi undercover plots in Argentina.

Uruguay Officials Raid Fascist Headquarters

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 30 (AP)—The congressional committee investigating anti-Uruguayan activities reported today that documents seized in yesterday's raid on a Fascist headquarters disclosed existence of a Fascist organization in Uruguay formed along military lines.

Evidence showed, committee members said, that this organization took its orders from Rome. Informed sources said one component organization was the "Tenth Alpine Regiment." This group's insignia was described as consisting of European and South American maps with a design showing the Axis expanding from Italy through the River Plate to Chile. An accompanying legend read: "From the Alps to the Andes."

Committee members said the seized documents were being studied to determine whether there was basis for further action.

Nazi Put Out

Quito, Ecuador, Dec. 30 (AP)—Government authorities today ordered Walter Guisse, German citizen and accused Nazi propaganda agent, to leave the country within 48 hours.

Ex-Nazi Envoy To Mexico Called Fifth Columnist

Mexico City, Dec. 30 (AP)—Five members of the Chamber of Deputies offered today in a formal declaration to "settle accounts" personally with fifth columnists in Mexico and charged that Axis undercover operatives here are headed by Rudt von Collenberg, the German Minister to Mexico until this country broke relations with the Axis.

Without saying how they would settle accounts, they charged that an assault Sunday night on the Chilean consul-general was conducted by fifth columnists.

The Chilean was beaten about the head in a restaurant when set upon by a dozen men who interrupted his party's utterance of vivas for Presidents Avila Camacho and Roosevelt.

The deputies declared the attack initiated the Axis fifth column activities planned for Mexico.

Agenda Announced For Ministers' Meeting

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 30 (AP).—Mauricio Nabuco, Brazilian Foreign Office spokesman, said today that American foreign ministers, who will meet January 15, will consider first how to preserve the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the American republics.

The agenda, he said, will include the following topics:

Examination of measures against activities of foreigners which endangered peace and security; exchange of information on undesirable foreigners; study of measures which can be taken now by the American republics and which envisage attainment of common objectives in reconstructing the world order.

The second part of the agenda, which concerns measures to strengthen the economic solidarity of the American republics, includes the following subjects:

Control of exports of basic and strategic materials; agreements to increase the production of strategic materials; agreements to supply each country with the imports essential to the maintenance of its domestic economy; maintenance of adequate maritime transportation; control of the commercial activities of foreigners.

Puerto Rico Tests Air Alarm

SAN JUAN, P. R., Dec. 30 (AP).—Bull horns and conch shells, normally used to warn of rising rivers, bleated weirdly as Puerto Rico's first test air-raid alarm spread to the remotest hills today. Radio telephone, sirens, whistles, bells and even horsemen, dashing like Paul Reveres from hamlet to hamlet, spread the alarm. Officials said it was most successful.

Crash Of U. S. Plane In Mexico Reported

Two-Motored Army Craft Said To Have Fallen And Burned On Island

DEC 31 1941

Mexico City, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Defense Ministry reported tonight a two-motored United States Army plane had crashed and burned on Tiburon Island, in the Gulf of California. The military commandant of the zone, who received reports of the crash from five or six persons, sent out a search and rescue party.

Montreal, Dec. 30 (AP)—Trans-Canada airlines will extend its services to Newfoundland and Alaska as soon as aircraft of the proper type can be obtained, President H. J. Symington announced today in a review of the company's activities this year.

4 Killed In Plane Crash

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 30 (AP)—Four crewmen died in the flaming wreckage of a big Royal Canadian Air Force flying boat and four others escaped with slight injuries today when the craft crashed a moment after taking off from its Vancouver Island base.

The Western Air Command announced tonight the wreckage still was burning and that positive identification of the dead would not be possible until the flames subsided.

Quebec Archbishop Asks Prayers Jan. 1

Quebec, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Jean Marie Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve, Archbishop of Quebec, today asked Roman Catholics in his archdiocese to observe January 1 as a national day of prayer.

In a message from the archbishop's palace the Cardinal urged the public to comply with the request of Dominion Government authorities that New Year's Day be marked by special prayers for a victorious peace.

The Cardinal urged that prayers of reparation and thanksgiving be recited New Year's Eve and that the hymn "Veni Creator" be sung after the masses on New Year's Day.

United States

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MANILA, Wednesday, Dec. 31 (AP)—The following communiqué was issued early today by the United States Army Headquarters:

The enemy is driving in great force from both north and south. His dive-bombers practically control the roads from the air. The Japanese are using great quantities of tanks and armored units. Our lines are being pushed back.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—On the basis of reports received before 9:30 A. M., the War Department issued this communiqué today:

1. Philippine Theatre: A survey of the damage done to undefended Manila by the repeated senseless and savage bombing by Japanese aircraft after it had been declared an open city has been practically completed. This survey indicated that churches and other centers of Christian worship and culture were deliberately selected as special targets for enemy attacks.

These edifices were of a distinctive type of architecture and their character could not have been mistaken. Before the brutal assaults were begun, Japanese bombing planes flew over the city, obviously selecting the buildings which were subsequently bombed. In many of the churches attacked devout residents of Manila had gathered for sanctuary and solace within the hallowed structures.

Among the buildings destroyed were churches and shrines where many generations had worshiped for centuries. The beautiful old Church of Santo Domingo, with its priceless art treasures and venerated relics, is now a heap of smoking ruins, before which relays of black-robed priests are continually praying for their people.

The great Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception was a special target for Japanese bombs. It was sought out and attacked on three successive days. The College of San Juan Lateran, with its irreplacable library of original manuscripts, was likewise attacked. Repeated attacks on successive days were made on Santa Rosa Convent and Santa Catalina Convent. The San Juan de Dios Hospital was also the object of vicious attacks. In addition, at least five other churches and three colleges supported by religious institutions were either destroyed or damaged in the air raids.

In this connection the War Department is in receipt of the following radiogram from General Douglas MacArthur, commanding the United States Army forces in the Far East, commenting on these recent bombings:

"Enemy mercilessly bombed the open city of Manila, using sixty-three bombers. Damage has been severe and includes all types of [illegible] installations, such as churches, the cathedral, hospitals, convents, business and private dwellings. It is notable that before Manila was declared an open city and before our anti-aircraft defense evacuated therefrom, he had abstained from attempted bombing of anything in Manila except military installations. His present actions can only be deemed completely violative of all the civilized processes of international law. At the proper time I bespeak due retaliatory measures."

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

A Navy Department communiqué, outlining the situation as of noon:

Far East: Submarine operations against enemy surface craft are continuing. Reports that a United States destroyer and two of our submarines were sunk in the period Dec. 26-28 are without foundation.

Central Pacific: The situation in respect to Midway Island remains unchanged. There have been no further attacks since last reported.

Eastern Pacific: Japanese vessels are suspected of being in the vicinity of Kodiak. All merchant vessels have been warned.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

Later the War Department issued this communiqué, covering the situation as of 5 P. M.:

1. Philippine Theatre: Heavy enemy pressure is developing in the northeast sector of the front.

Combat operations on the Southern Front are continuing.

Enemy air attacks are being conducted over a wide area.

Casualties among our troops as a result of yesterday's bombing of Corregidore are approximately twenty-seven killed and eighty wounded.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

DEC 31 1941

British

SINGAPORE, Dec. 30 (AP)—A British Headquarters communique said today:

On the Perak front the enemy put in a strong attack yesterday evening, but suffered heavy casualties. Elsewhere in Malaya there was no change in the situation.

Enemy aircraft made a further raid on Kuantan yesterday, causing no damage or casualties. Reports now received show that the enemy raid on Kluang yesterday caused only slight casualties. No damage was done to the airdrome.

In an enemy air attack on a railway station yesterday a large labor force which happened to be there behaved with great calmness.

Enemy aircraft made four raids on Singapore last night. Some damage was done to thatched buildings, which set a small petrol store on fire. So far only four casualties have been reported.

Allied aircraft carried out a number of reconnaissances during yesterday.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 30 (AP)—The British Middle East General Headquarters communiqué said today:

In the area south of Agedabia, an enemy column including tanks made yet a further attack to interfere with our operations. In the ensuing engagement, twenty-two enemy tanks were destroyed and twenty others received serious damage.

Later a regiment of Hussars captured five lorry loads of German infantry. Our pressure on the enemy is being maintained.

In the frontier area, an enemy outposition and ammunition dump were destroyed by our artillery fire.

Throughout the whole area of operations our Air Force yesterday continued their bombing and low-flying attacks on the enemy with successful results, particularly south of Agedabia.

The Royal Air Force Middle East Command issued the following:

R. A. F. and Free French bombers attacked various objectives in the Agedabia region yesterday, obtaining direct hits on buildings and huts and starting numbers of fires. A concentration of enemy motorized transport was bombed and at least two enemy aircraft were hit in a raid on a landing ground.

Further bombing raids on enemy motorized forces were carried out south of Agedabia. Other bombers of the R. A. F. and Free French air force continued attacks on positions within the Bardia perimeter. On Dec. 26 fighters of the R. A. F. and R. A. A. F. intercepted one JU-88, which was shot down in flames south of Agedabia.

On the same day bomber aircraft raided an enemy motor transport east of Homs, scoring direct hits on lorries and a petrol tanker. Other lorries packed with German troops were effectively machine-gunned. Further attacks on petrol tankers, motor transport and troop-carrying lorries were made in the Mallaha region.

During the night of Dec. 28-29 bomber aircraft again successfully attacked the main quay at Tripoli. Fighter aircraft bombed and machine-gunned enemy motor transport and gun positions in Halfaya Pass.

Despite bad weather and poor visibility, objectives in Crete and Greece were also raided on the night of Dec. 28-29. Bombs were seen to burst near the munitions factory at Salamis and on a runway at Herakleion [Candia]. Other targets at Sandia, Suda Bay and Piraeus were also bombed, but the results could not be observed.

Enemy aircraft were active over Malta yesterday and Sunday night. In daylight enemy formations were intercepted by our fighters, which shot down one ME-109 and damaged other enemy aircraft. In a night raid a JU-88 was shot down by anti-aircraft gunfire.

From these and other operations four of our aircraft are missing, but one pilot is known to be safe.

LONDON, Dec. 30 (AP)—An Air Ministry communiqué said today:

Beaufort aircraft of the Coastal Command attacked enemy shipping at La Pallice last night. No aircraft are missing from these operations. One of our fighters is missing from patrol yesterday.

The Ministries of Air and Home Security issued this communiqué today:

During the early part of last night there was some enemy activity, mainly over Northeast England. Bombs dropped at a number of points, but damage nowhere was serious and the number of casualties was small. Three enemy bombers were destroyed.

DEC 31 1941

Netherland

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 30 (AP)—Today's communiqué from the Netherlands Indies armed forces follows:

Reports are coming in that the enemy still is bombing and machine-gunning small coastal places in the outer provinces and has machine-gunned and bombed fishing boats.

As a result of an air raid on Tarakan airdrome Dec. 28, first by eight Japanese fighters and then by seven bombers and four fighters, one fighter of the N. E. I. Air Force was destroyed. Pilot Officer Ousten was killed. There were no wounded.

A Netherland tanker was bombed by Japanese aircraft, which caused a fire to break out on board. The crew managed to extinguish the fire and the ship returned to port.

DEC 31 1941

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 30 (AP)—A special Soviet communiqué issued today said:

On Dec. 29 and 30 Soviet troops on the Caucasian front, in conjunction with the forces of the Black Sea Fleet, made a landing upon the Crimean peninsula and after stubborn battles occupied the town and fortress of Kerch and the town of Theodosia.

In the occupation of these towns the troops of General Pervushin and General Lvov and a group of naval forces headed by Captain Bolstin especially distinguished themselves.

Retreating in both these sectors, the enemy is being pursued by our units.

The regular communiqué follows:

During the night of Dec. 29-30 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

50.24 - 13847

30.24 - 1384 7

In one day's fighting they killed 70 German soldiers and destroyed 6 anti-tank and 2 heavy guns and captured 24 guns, 10 mine-throwers, 7 machine guns and 15 trucks.

MOSCOW, Wednesday, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau's midnight communiqué follows:

During Dec. 30 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

In a number of sectors our troops, overcoming the enemy's resistance, advanced and occupied a number of localities, among which were the towns of Kozelsk and Ugorky-Zavod.

In stubborn fighting in one sector of the western front our units in one day dislodged the Germans from ten inhabited localities. The enemy suffered heavy losses.

Near the village of "B" alone our men killed 550 German officers and men and captured large booty.

Japanese

TOKYO, Dec. 30 (From Japanese broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The following official report was issued today by Imperial Headquarters:

During the past few days the naval air force unceasingly attacked enemy air bases in the Philippines and British Borneo, as well as in the South China, Celebes and Sulu Seas.

Between Dec. 22 and 28 a total of fifty-six enemy airplanes were either shot down or destroyed on the ground. The following details are given concerning these operations:

1. Philippines: Nine airplanes, including four flying boats, were shot down and twenty-seven airplanes, including four flying boats, were destroyed on the ground.

2. British Borneo: Eleven airplanes, including one flying boat, shot down, and two destroyed on the ground.

3. South China, Celebes and Sulu Seas: Two flying boats shot down and five flying boats destroyed on the water.

4. In the Philippines and British Borneo, Japanese naval airplanes attacked numerous air bases and destroyed hangars and other military establishments. Seaplanes and land planes were employed in all these operations.

In the course of the attacks on Luzon Japanese planes daily bombed enemy ships in the Bay of Manila in order to prevent the enemy from escaping by air or over the sea. The following results were achieved:

1. On Dec. 25 and 26 one enemy destroyer and two submarines were sunk and fifty-six merchant vessels severely damaged.

2. On Dec. 27 fourteen merchant ships were severely damaged and the total loss of seven of them must be reckoned with.

3. On Dec. 28 six merchant ships were severely damaged.

During the same period, namely between Dec. 22 and 28, the Japanese naval air force lost one single airplane, while another is missing.

DEC 31 1941

German

BERLIN, Dec. 30 (From German broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The German High Command communiqué said today:

On various sectors of the Eastern Front strong enemy attacks were smashed by close cooperation of the army and air force. In the Black Sea bomber planes sank a Soviet destroyer and damaged a cruiser.

On the Murmansk front German troops in the period from Dec. 21 to 28 successfully smashed stubborn Soviet attacks in bitter frost and snowstorms. The enemy suffered heavy and bloody losses.

Strong bomber formations last night attacked an important military supply harbor on the British east coast, where accurate hits were obtained.

A merchant ship was sunk in daylight west of the Faeroe Islands by bomb hits.

Submarine chasers escorting a convoy shot down three out of six attacking British bombers. All ships in the convoy reached their destinations safely.

In North Africa German and Italian troops scored further local successes in the area around Agedabia. The number of enemy tanks and armored cars wrecked in counter-attacks has increased to seventy-four. Several hundred British were taken prisoner.

Enemy airdromes on the island of Malta were attacked day and night. German bombers sank a large sailing ship off Valletta. German fighters shot down five British planes in aerial combat and another plane was destroyed on the ground.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 30 (from Italian broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The Italian High Command communiqué said today:

In the district of Agedabia fighting continues. The number of destroyed enemy vehicles mentioned in yesterday's communiqué has risen to seventy-four. The number of prisoners taken has risen to several hundred.

On the Solum front there were intensive artillery duels. An attack of enemy armored units against the fortress of Bardia has been repulsed. Italian and German bombers have carried out low-level attacks and bombed with good results enemy supply columns and concentrations of the enemy's armored columns.

The enemy has carried out air attacks against Tripoli and Zuara. There were several casualties and unimportant damage.

British planes dropped several high-explosive bombs near Athens without success.

An enemy naval convoy was attacked off Cyrenaica by German and Italian planes, which scored several hits on a destroyer and another ship.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 30 (AP)—A Finnish communiqué said today:

Karelian Isthmus: There was mild artillery and infantry harassing fire by both sides. Our fire silenced some enemy firearms, harassed work gangs and scored hits on enemy positions. Enemy patrols were beaten off.

Svir River Front: Enemy patrols attempting to cross the Svir were repulsed. In the central sector an enemy armored car was destroyed and two anti-tank guns and eight bunkers were captured. The enemy lost 127 men killed. In the eastern sector a small enemy unit that penetrated our positions was thrown back by counter-attacks.

East Front: Mild infantry and artillery fire by both sides and patrol activity. An attempted advance by a small enemy unit was repulsed. In the northern sector a battle is under way to beat back attacking enemy forces.

CONGRESS ENDS ITS HISTORIC 1941 SESSION

DEC 31 1941

Awaits From President Huge Wartime Budget Next Week

Number Of Things Left Undone Despite Many Accomplishments

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 30—Congress ended its 1941 labors today and in so doing left indelibly on the pages of its record acts forever to be remembered including tremendous preparations for defense and the actual declaration of war.

That done, Congress awaited from the hands of President Roosevelt next week a huge wartime budget for the next fiscal year, its size without precedent.

Action Taken

Among other things, Congress:

Declared war against the Axis powers, Germany, Japan and Italy.

Expanded the selective service law to require registration of all men between 18 and 64 inclusive, make those of 20 to 44 subject to military service, permit drafted troops to be sent anywhere in the world and keep them in service for the duration.

Gave the President broad wartime powers such as control of communications and alien financial transactions.

Revised the Neutrality Act to permit American merchant vessels to carry arms and call at ports of belligerent nations.

Voted a record-shattering total of $61.500,000,000 in appropriations and contract authorizations of which $49.000,000,000, including $13.000,000,000 for lease-lend activities, was for preparations for war. However, only a portion of the total is actually being spent in this fiscal year.

Passed an unprecedented three-and-a-half-billion-dollar tax bill.

Passed the basic Lease-Lend Act permitting American aid to the nations battling the Axis.

Unfinished Business

But despite its accomplishments a number of things were left unfinished.

There was, for instance, the much-publicized and highly controversial investigation by a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee to determine whether an investigation should be made of war propaganda in the movies.

The committee headed by Senator Clark (Dem., Idaho), held sessions for two weeks, attracted such national figures as Wendell L. Willkie, as counsel for the movies, and wound up in mid-air without completing its hearings.

Clark, conceding that the question ... now was "moot," said the subcommittee's record would be submitted to the full committee without recommendations.

Anti-Lynching Bill

A long time ago, it seems now, Congress was greatly concerned about efforts to pass a Federal anti-lynching bill. Balked by a filibuster in the Senate, proponents announced determinedly at the start of 1941 that this was the year the legislation finally would be passed, but it wasn't.

President Roosevelt wanted the St. Lawrence waterway to the sea started. He sent up messages asserting that it was imperative for defense that construction begin at once. As the Congressional year ended, a billion-dollar omnibus flood-control bill containing this and a half-dozen other projects, slumbered quietly on the House calendar.

The President told Congress five months ago that prices were getting out of hand and something should be done. Best estimates were that Congress would finally approve price-control legislation sometime late in January.

Social Security Act changes were sought by the President. There was much talk of broadening the field of those covered by benefits, an action now projected far into the future.

To End First Session

The House and Senate will assemble Friday to end the legislative year and the first session of this Congress, then adjourn to await the new opening.

Nearly all the principal acts of the history-making session were intertwined with efforts incidental to a world-wide war, although actual, formal warfare did not come to the United States until the last month of the session.

DISPUTE NEAR END ON GEN. MITCHELL

Settlement Expected On Status Of Late Fiery Chief Of The Air Corps

Congress May Restore His Rank Of Brigadier General In Army

DEC 31 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 30—The 15-year-old Congressional controversy over the late Brig Gen. William (Billy) Mitchell, former chief of the Army Air Corps who resigned after a court-martial, appeared near a settlement today.

Senator Wiley (Rep., Wis.) informed the Senate that Secretary Stimson had written that the War Department would not object to legislation restoring General Mitchell's name and rank to official rolls.

Previously the War Department had resisted numerous Congressional attempts to honor the fiery pioneer of military aviation who resigned February 1, 1926, rather than accept a five-year suspension from his rank.

Veteran Of 2 Wars

General Mitchell, veteran of the Spanish-American and World War I, was brought to trial on charges of insubordination after hotly criticizing the War and Navy departments' attitude toward the airplane as a military force.

Wiley has been pressing for passage of a resolution directing the War Department to restore General Mitchell's name and rank as brigadier general to its official rolls.

Wiley Castigates Critics

Wiley said General Mitchell was forced out of the army because he had "blasted the army and navy moss-backs with scorching broadsides for 'their criminal negligence and their bungling incompetency.'"

The Senator recalled that back in 1918 General Mitchell had urged troop movements by airplane and use of parachute troops. He noted that in 1920 the general stated he could sink a battleship with airplane bombs, to the discomfort of "rocking-chair admirals and swivel-chair generals."

SENATORS HOPE FOR NAZI CRASH

DEC 31 1941

Wheeler and Capper Want to See Japs Crushed.

Washington, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Two Senators who formerly opposed administration foreign policy—Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, and Capper, Republican, of Kansas—expressed hope today that an internal collapse in Germany would make it possible for the Allies to concentrate their forces against Japan.

"The most hopeful sign at present is the fight the Russians are putting up, and the indications that are coming out of Germany that the people there are beginning to get restless," said Senator Wheeler continuing:

"If Germany should crack up—and I hope it will—then in my judgment England, Russia, China and the United States could bring Japan to her knees. In that event we could make it so that we would never have to fear the Japanese menace in the Pacific again."

Senator Capper said: "If Germany should crumble from within it would make our task in the Pacific much shorter and easier. We and our allies then could

WASHINGTON HOLDS PARTIAL BLACKOUT

Results Are Excellent, Example For New York, LaGuardia Asserts

12,000 Air-Raid Wardens Patrol Residential Areas. White House Dark

DEC 31 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 30—Washington practised at blacking itself out tonight, with resluts that officials in charge, including Mayor LaGuardia of New York, the national director of civilian defense, considered "excellent."

By intent, it was only a partial blackout. Street lights were extinguished only in the downtown section, and even there, lights continued to glow from windows behind which work was being done, for the orders in such cases were simply to use as little light as possible.

Outside the business area, although the street lights continued to beam, householders were under instructions to extinguish all illumination, and some 12,000 air-raid wardens were on the job to see that the orders were complied with.

White House Dark

At the White House, the blackout was quick and complete.

Downtown, the response was equally prompt. Hardly had the sirens sounded, than the street lamps went out. Stores, restaurants and other business establishments followed.

A bus came to a standstill while halfway around the corner at Eleventh and Pennsyivania avenue, and doused its lights. Automobiles quickly swung to the curbs, or parked double, while the occupants turned off the switches, and in accordance with instructions sought the nearest indoor shelter.

At street corners, however, the red and green traffic lights continued to blink. Atop the building on which is perched the downtown air raid siren, they were using flashlights which could be seen for a considerable distance.

U. S. Offices Lighted

Lights ringed the top floor of the Justice Department, which houses part of the FBI and which was presumably exempted because work was in progress.

Overhead, searchlights from various spotting posts continued to play their beams upon passing airplanes. The Capitol dome could be seen vaguely against a hazy moonlit sky.

LaGuardia toured the city in an automobile with local officials and was quick to express his pleasure at the effectiveness of the blackout, It was, he said, an example to New York city.

Service Offered To Army By Lindbergh

DEC 31 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 30—The Army Air Corps said today Charles A. Lindbergh had volunteered his services.

Lieut.-Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the air forces and deputy chief of staff of the army, said "Lindbergh's act indicates a definite change from his isolationist stand and expresses a deep desire to help the country along the lines he trained himself for many years."

There was no indication on how soon there might be action on Lindbergh's offer.

Last summer Lindbergh, at that time engaged in making many speeches for the America First Committee in oppositoin to President Roosevelt's foreign policies, submitted his resignation as a colonel in the reserves to President Roosevelt by letter. The resignation was accepted.

"Capacity Best Suited"

Lindbergh made his offer for a return to active service "in the capacity for which his training best suited him" in a personal letter to Arnold.

The Air Corps said nothing further would be made public on Lindbergh's letter and that his application would be considered in the same category with numerous others seeking to return to active duty. There was no indication whether he might be considered for his former rank or for flying duty.

Lindbergh is 39, and would have to pass the Air Corps' rigorous physical examination for flying service.

No Comment by Lindbergh.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Charles A. Lindbergh declined to comment today on an Army Air Corps announcement that he had volunteered for war service.

Since he first took up residence at the Seven-Gates Farm on this southern New England island he has refused to see newspaper men, answer the telephone or reply to telegrams concerning his position or activities. Continued efforts today met the same response.

U.S. To Purchase Sugar Crop Of Cuba To Prevent Shortage In America

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)—Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, announced today that the United States has concluded arrangements to buy the whole 1942 Cuban sugar cane crop.

He announced that the Government-owned Defense Supplies Corporation has contracted for all the Cuban sugar and molasses not needed by Cuba for her own consumption or for sale to other Pan-American countries.

While Jones made no comment about the purpose of the contract, it was understood to have the dual purpose of insuring against a sugar shortage in this country and of bolstering the Cuban economic situation.

7,773-Ton Transport Of Army Is Launched

Destroyer Named After Navy Secretary Who Ordered U. S. N. A. Establishment Joins Fleet Today

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 30 (AP)—Another huge army transport of 7773 gross tons was launched today at the Seattle-Tacoma Shipbuilding Company yards and a keel for another ship of the same size. The new transport was named the James O'Hara, for a Revolutionary War soldier-sailor who came to America from Ireland.

Military Attache To Venezuela Named

Washington, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—Col. Franklin Langley Whitley of St. Louis, Mo., was designated today by the War Department to be military attache at Caracas, Venezuela.

Col. Whitley, now on duty at the New York Port of Embarkation, was ordered to Washington for temporary duty in the military intelligence division of the General Staff before going to Venezuela.

Mined Area Extended For New York Harbor

Navy Says It May Be Necessary To Close Channels Temporarily Left Open

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)—The navy gave notice today that it had extended the mined area at the entrance to New York Harbor and warned mariners that "it might be necessary at any time to close without previous warnings the channels temporarily left open."

The mined area has been broadened, the navy said, to take in the area north of a line between Hoffman Island and Norton Point, and within lines drawn between Hoffman Island, Fort Wadsworth Light, Fort Lafayette Light and Norton Point Light.

Ships traversing the area were instructed to use only the lane between buoys to be placed indicating the shore continuation of Ambrose Channel. No vessel will be permitted to anchor in the area except by special permission of the port captain. Ships approaching New York should arrange to enter during daylight hours as far as practicable, the navy said.

SHIP RADIO CONTROL

Communications Board Gives Authority to Navy.

Washington, Dec. 30 (A. P.).—The Defense Communications Board authorized the Navy Department today to use, control, supervise, inspect, or close all ship radio stations and facilities.

The board granted the authority to the navy under a recent presidential executive order.

"Under this order," the board said, "the Secretary of the Navy will issue regulations to carry out this authority as he may deem necessary for the national security and defense of the successful conduct of the war."

The board said rules and regulations of the Federal Communications Commission covering ship radio service would continue in effect "except in those cases where such rules may be in conflict with the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy."

Missoula, Mont., Dec. 30 (AP)—Population of the internment camp at Fort Missoula stands at 1,656, including 1,023 Italians and 633 Japanese, Superintendent N. D. Collaer said today. Capacity of the camp is about 2,000.

RETAIL PRICES OF NEW TIRES, TUBES, FROZEN

OPA Acts in Retail Field for First Time; Mass. Quota Is Set

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Government froze retail prices of new tires and tubes today at levels of the standard list prices issued by the manufacturers Nov. 25.

Acting to prevent profiteering under the tire rationing plan, which goes into operation next Monday, the Office of Price administration moved into the retail field for the first time by issuing a formal price ceiling on tires, effective the same day.

Wholesale tire prices, now stabilized under informal agreements with manufactures, may be fixed under another ceiling if circumstances require.

U. S. Ship Fireman Relates 'Miracle' Torpedoing Escape

DEC 31 1941

Blast From Enemy Submarine Threw Him Into Air And Knocked Him Down, He Says

By John A. Morocco

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 30—A ship's fireman who was tending his gauges when a German torpedo smashed into the boiler room of his ship, the 6,275-ton American freighter Sagadahoc, told today of his miraculous escape.

"The damned thing struck the starboard side only thirty feet from where I was standing," Frank Bowles, 22, Suffolk, Va., told United States naval officers. "The concussion drove me two feet into the air and then knocked me down.

"Before I got to my feet water was all around me and I escaped by running into the engine room above and using their ladder to get out.

"Just as I started out, steam lines all around me began to explode and the fire doors were blown open by the explosion."

As Loud As Torpedoes

The steam line explosions were almost as loud as the torpedo blast. Shipmates were amazed when Bowles rushed topside.

Antonio Castro, an oiler of Spanish birth, was killed in the blast.

Bowles arrived aboard an American ship with eighteen other Sagadahoc survivors who were rescued after seven days and eight nights in an open boat.

Survivors said their ship was torpedoed on December 3 at night by a U-boat which made no attempt to ascertain the ship's identity, and before the United States entered the war.

Chief Mate Norris Chadbourne, 33, South Portland, Maine, said the sub came to the surface after the crew took off in two lifeboats and the U-boat skipper asked the name of their ship.

Matter Of Nationality

"He was unable to understand the name Sagadahoc so he asked if we were British," Chadbourne said.

"When we told him we were American he said that he had not been able to distinguish our flag."

The concussion stove in two lifeboats on the boat deck. The crew, using the port side boats, abandoned ship in three minutes.

Twenty minutes later the ship sank.

The boats set a course for Pernambuco, Brazil, 1,600 miles away, with only a lug sail and forty-five gallons of water in each boat.

Rudder Is Lost

On the fifth day Chadbourne's boat lost contact with the other boat (it was saved later) and at the same time the boat lost its rudder. While crewmen were shipping an oar into the rudder slot, a twenty-foot shark came to the surface and followed the ship for two hours.

James Morgan, 78-year-old retired businessman, of Johannesburg, South Africa, the only passenger, was on his way home after visiting his son, James, Jr., at Cleveland.

Morgan ran into further bad luck when immigration officials detained him at Ellis Island today. He was listed as a "shipwrecked mariner" and is subject to deportation, unless he produces proper papers—which he doesn't have.

Situation in Far East Indicates Allies Must Give More Ground Before Countering

By DeWITT MACKENZIE.

The Japanese are reported to be dying forty to one for their British enemy on the edge of the steaming jungle country of the Malay Peninsula, and are being slaughtered by the Filipinos southeast of Manila—but still they continue to come in ever-growing numbers to increase the pressure in both these strategic centers.

As the Nipponese soldiers fling themselves into the flames of death with fanatical abandon, the Japanese nation watches for Premier-General Tojo to journey to the Shrine of Ise to offer his prayer for victory to the Sun Goddess, Amaterasu o Mi Kami. The whole drama of this war with its Oriental outlook and practices is fantastic—like a yellowed page of history from the days of the shoguns.

Situation Is Grave.

Still, fantastic though it is, there is no gainsaying that it is so very real that the position of the Allies in the Far East grows more grave hourly as they await re-enforcements. The Japanese, operating close to their island empire and having plenty of bases, possess an advantage.

There is no telling how much ground the Allies may have to give in these early days. Certainly the temporary sacrifices may be great, and we should be prepared for the possibility. As remarked before, it depends on the nature of the re-enforcements and how soon they arrive.

One hears many expressions of concern that American re-enforcements haven't reached Manila before this, but there is no occasion for such surprise. Even if help started immediately after the attack on Pearl Harbor, it would scarcely have reached the battlefield by this time, assuming that a convoy was involved. It's a long haul across the Pacific.

Then, too, one would scarcely expect a naval contingent to try to proceed direct to the Philippines, running the Japanese blockade across the accustomed route. Other possibilities involve a longer voyage.

Australian Bases Good.

Australia provides excellent naval bases. Sydney, with its new graving dock, which is big enough for a battleship, is one of them. Brisbane is another. And then we have the northern port of Darwin, which is strategically situated in relation to the entire war zone. It is close to the Dutch East Indies, and only about 2,300 miles from either Singapore or Manila. Numerous Allied island bases lie much closer.

Since the European war started and the Japanese threat developed, Darwin has been greatly developed. Not only has the docking accommodation been extended, but a modern military airdrome has been built and the port has been connected with southern Australia by a military highway which connects with railways.

It may be recalled that Australia has insisted that the Far East shouldn't be regarded as a secondary theater of activity, and President Roosevelt in broadcasting his greetings to Australia on Christmas Day declared:

"Mr. Churchill, who is staying with me, joins in these greetings and we give you our assurances that we consider the safety of your great Commonwealth as a definite essential in every plan of defense and in every plan of offensive action against our common foes."

Kuibyshev, Russia, Dec. 30-(AP)-The Russian radiox declared today that instead of the promised German victory in 1941, Adolf Hitler had given his people two Christmas presents--war ~~ik~~ with the United States and dismissal of the Nazi army commander-in-chief, Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch.

"All of you who remember the last war," the broadcast added, "know what war with America means."

"Today Germany's position is worse than it was in 1918...then the Germans had far more clothing, the German soldiers' fat ration was almost four times that of today and the food ration was more than twice as large."

Berlin, Dec..30-(Official Broadcast recorded by AP)--German and Italian flags flying over the Axis consulates at Smyrna, Turkey, were cut down Christmas night and British and United States flags were substituted, an Ankara dispatch reported today.

It said one of the "various members of the British Intelligence service" lodged in a house near the two consulates, was believed to have made the change as a prank after a Christmas dinner.

Turkish officers promptly caused replacement of the original flags, the dispatch said.

London, Dec. 30-(AP)-Formation of an Empire War Cabinet was advocated by the Daily Express today with a declaration that the British cabinet, which makes decisions involving the use of empire troops, "is taking an undue ~~risk~~ risk of blame if its plans miscarry of involve exceptional losses."

"Until we have made one united fighting machine out of the British empire," said the Express, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, "we can't expect to make one out of Britain and the United States."

Bern, Dec. 30-(AP)-Germans who sent hundreds of Christmas cards despite an official request not to do so have been warned by the Propaganda Ministry that anybody printing or selling New Year's Cards would be punished. A communique to this effect was carried in German newspapers reaching here today. It said all transportation facilities were needed for war purposes.

NAZIS SLOWED BOLIVIAN TIN

U. S. Defense Sabotaging Long Under Way.

By JOHN LEAR

Washington, Dec. 30 (Wide World).—German agents, working in the thin cool air of Cloud-land Islands, 5,000 miles away and three miles up in the sky, have been sabotaging the United States fighting machine for the last six months in Bolivia. They have been slowing up, bit by bit, the output of tin, without which there can be no bearing to swing guns, move tanks, propel battleships.

The story of their treachery can be told now that their boldest move, attempted rupture of the railroad on which the tin travels from Bolivian interior mines to seaports in Chile and Peru, has been foiled and their plotting revealed and nullified.

The general methods of the saboteurs have been known to the State Department and the army for months. Late last spring the United States legation in Lapaz confirmed from other sources information given to me on a tour of the Bolivian mining regions.

At that time, German mine foremen outspokenly sympathetic to the Nazi cause were discovered to be slowing down tin production through their influence on Indian miners.

Unexplained Slowdowns.

There was no apparent explanation for these slowdowns. No reason for them which engineers responsible for mine production could discover. But the mine books showed tin output fell between 20 and 50 per cent after President Roosevelt proclaimed all-out help to England.

The books, which were opened to me, showed that the slowdowns were occurring only in mine shafts under German technical supervision.

The situation then was considered sufficiently serious that young United States engineers were planted among the Germans to get evidence of the sabotage and to prevent any calamitous shortage.

These counter-espionage agents reported that the Germans were not only talking discouragement to the Indians but were actively fomenting strikes and organizing Nazi cells within the mining camps.

One young engineer took me into the mines on the chilly sides of Bolivia's 14,000 to 15,000-foot plateaus—so high up it is difficult for strangers to breathe and over-exertion becomes dangerous—and introduced me to some of the men he said were causing the trouble.

They spoke German among themselves, Spanish to the Indians.

My escort told me the persons suspected of sabotage had come to Bolivia years ago and worked themselves up to responsible positions where they were in charge of vital mine machinery which could stop production dead within a few minutes if something "went wrong."

If something did go wrong it would take at least three or four months to get going again.

Nazis' Contracts Crafty.

But the Germans were in highly paid jobs, under long-term contract with heavy penalties for the employer in event of dismissal.

Often proof of sabotage would have nullified the penalty clauses but that was hard to get. The Nazis did their work in subtle psychological ways, emphasizing ancient grievances of the Indian workers against North American and British pioneers who had opened up the modern mines a generation ago.

The United States' declaration of war against the Axis Powers gives the Bolivian Government grounds for rounding up the Germans as a wartime precaution, thus removing mine owners from the threat of dismissal penalties.

The United States has a full year's supply of tin on hand. England, which shares the Bolivian output, is also in good shape. A low grade tin smelter is being built in Texas to speed tin's travel from mine ore to finished bearings or tin plate.

The railroad which the saboteurs attempted to wreck, however, involves more than a problem of tin. It is the only railroad crossing the South American Continent, as such, it could be used to ship arms and men from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast (the road's eastern terminus is Buenos Aires), in case anything should happen to the Panama Canal.

Discovery of the sabotage plot shows that Bolivia, which has already ejected Germany's Minister, Ernest Wendler for fifth column activity, is on the alert. That will mean short shrift for Axis agents, in or out of working clothes.

Japs Must Win Now Or Never, Experts Say

New York, Dec. 29—Japan, choosing her own time, launched her war on the United States and Britain at the moment she had brought most of the factors that favor her to their highest degrees of effectiveness.

Just now she is enjoying to the full the advantages these factors give her. But she is operating on a time schedule that will not permit of many delays or deviations. Occidental economists agree that unless they have misread all the data available Japan must win quickly or suffer defeat and economic collapse.

Nothing Held In Reserve

To an overwhelming, appalling degree Japan is shooting the works on her lightning war in the Pacific. Economically she was one hundred per cent. mobilized when she struck at Pearl Harbor. Just about all she had was ready. But the fact remains it was about all she had. Unless she has won a new empire long before that is gone, she probably will find herself unable to continue at all.

Japan's elements of strength are these: Complete preparation, the result of at least five years of unstinting, unflagging effort on the part of a regimented people; an army tempered by more than four years of actual campaigning and a navy and air force secretly armed on a scale unsuspected by her enemies, all fully mobilized; all the best of the geographical situation, shorter lines of communication and an interior position in the vast battlefield of the western Pacific; some measure of guidance from her ally—Germany—up to this point the most advanced military power in the world; a united people and leadership; a morale which combines a fatalistic readiness to win or die, bitter racial hatred of the enemy, desperation and a dream of world dominion.

Short On Resources

But she has far less of all the material resources needed for war than the United States, one of the powers she nad challenged. She has far less industrial capacity. Her output of steel, for example, at 7,000,000 tons a year, is about one thirteenth of the American capacity. She must go abroad for nearly all her oil, most of the metals vital to modern war—iron, copper, tin, nickel, aluminum, tungsten and others—and for her rubber.

She has spent five years and a sizable portion of her national income in accumulating vast stores of these materials. She raided the junk piles of the United States from coast to coast for scrap iron and steel until this trade was stopped. She bought huge amounts of pig iron from British India and Malaya. She drew on the mines of all the world for other metals. And she bought oil up to the capacity of her wealth and all the tanker tonnage she could mobilize.

Oil is the crux of her problem. Hugh Dalton, Britain's Minister of Economic Warfare and probably the best authority on this point, estimated that she jumped into the world war with enough oil to fight it all out for fourteen months. It seems a fair assumption that that is indicative of her reserves in other essentials.

Time Is Limited

Much, of course, can be done in fourteen months. But actually Japan has no such term at her disposal. She must win a new, rich empire before her present supplies are gone. That means the oil, rubber, tin and iron producing lands of British Malaya and the Dutch East Indies.

But she must also count on the readiness of her foes to apply the "scorched earth" policy. She must be prepared to find the oil wells blasted, the refineries wrecked, rubber plantations laid waste. It will be months after occupation, perhaps years, before she can count on a steady flow of wealth from any conquests.

Thus her timetable calls for a desperately close connection with destiny. If her schedule is thrown out of kilter by a handful of United States marines at Wake or similar American-British feats in the Philippines or Malaya, the danger of missing that connection is all the greater. The weeks count.

Markets Closed To Her

Japan piled up her war stores in the greatest possible secrecy and the governments of her foes can only estimate their extent. But the experts agree that the vital fact is these stores can be replaced only by conquest of new territories. For Japan there is no longer any access to the world's markets and from her European allies she can expect no material help. For one thing, they don't have it to spare; for another, all the routes by which supplies could be carried either way or closed.

Japan entered this war with her economic resources extended to the utmost. By the standards of the old orthodox economics she has long been on the brink of bankruptcy. But those standards no longer apply when a nation is mobilized in the totalitarian way. The Japanese, like Hitler, through necessity, have long since abandoned gold as a measure of wealth, and have fallen back on the capacity of their people for work and the actual material resources that can be commanded.

Japan's foreign trade, except with the lands she has conquered, is gone. Even if there were an income from trade it would be useless now; there is nothing to buy with it. For the past five years taxation and borrowing have climbed steadily until their total now—some 17,000,000,000 yen for the current fiscal year—is approaching the estimated national income, less than 30,000,000,000 yen. (The yen was 23.4 cents before it went off the world's markets, but this value is misleading; in many respects a yen buys as much in the Orient as a dollar in the United States.) The national debt has risen above the estimated annual national income to somewhere between 35,000,000,000 and 40,000,000,000 yen.

Japan is facing a food shortage, too. Before she mobilized some 2,000,000 young men from her little rice farms and upland fields she was virtually self-sustaining, at least in the staples of her diet—rice, coarse grains, fish, vegetables. But the farms are feeling the shortage of man power, the factories have drawn away almost as many as the army and navy. The navy's claims on man power and the fuel shortage have cut deeply into the catch of the fishing fleets, which numbered nearly 1,000,000 men and women a few years ago.

Geography is all on Japan's side in this first phase but this may change steadily with the passing months. She has an Achilles' heel in the nearness of Russian Vladivostok, only 700 miles from the crowded, flimsy industrial warrens of Tokyo, only 500 from the grimy factory communities of the Osaka region and northern Kyushu. But as long as Russia remains neutral and Japan is able to keep the Americans and British held far away in their Pacific bases, her homeland, with its high vulnerability to air attack, is reasonably safe.

Experts Warn of Danger in Underestimating Japanese

DEC 31 1941

Hope Americans Will Get Over Popular Notions About Enemy's Weaknesses

By Clarke Beach

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (Wide World)—Experts who know the Japanese through long personal contact are hoping that Americans will speedily get over a lot of popular notions about the foe's weaknesses.

Comic Characters

It is dangerous, they say, to think of them merely as dwarfish comic characters with bad eyesight, capable only of imitating foreigners and following their own leaders like sheep, as being likely to collapse from loss of face at the first bad defeat.

Enemies of Japan have always treated them with contempt. Imperial Russia before 1904 didn't think it was worth wasting time to negotiate seriously with them.

The great Empress Dowager of China at the turn of the century—five years after the Japanese had taken Formosa from her in a war—used to refer to them in all her official communications as "the island monkey people." She got this idea from the Chinese legend about the Japanese spring from a colony of Chinese who settled on the islands and married monkeys.

Imitators the Japanese are beyond a doubt. They learned their ABC's from the same ABCD powers upon whom they are now turning their guns. The Chinese gave primitive Japan printing and writing, silk culture, Buddhism and Confucianism, painting, pottery making, tea drinking and many other things. Later, in the 17th Century, the Chinese gave them the philosophy of Oyomei, which largely supplanted Confucianism and in which all the creators of the new Japan were educated.

Founded Education

America, which opened Japan's ports to foreigners in 1854, after the country had lived in seclusion for more than 200 years, founded the Japanese system of national education.

Britain reconstructed the Japanese navy. The Dutch, who during the period of hermitage were permitted to maintain a small trading colony at Nagasaki, managed to a remarkable degree to spread a bit of their language and a knowledge of medicine, hospitals, science and commerce throughout the kingdom.

The Germans and the French helped modernize the army, and the Germans were consulted about a new pattern of government. Belgians gave instructions in methods of western finance.

But this was all long ago—accomplished mainly by 5000 foreign instructors whom the Japanese employed between 1870 and 1900. There have been very few foreign instructors there during the 20th Century.

What they borrowed from the west, they selected with discrimination; and then they remolded and adapted it to suit their needs and tastes. They took only the outward form of western democracy; they used western educational methods chiefly to teach age-old Japanese though and customs. Their attitude toward the opening of Japan to the west, as one scholar expressed it, was:

"These barbarians have some useful gadgets. We'll take over those that we want."

DEC 31 1941

Made Improvements

The Japanese built upon what they learned, and in some instances made improvements. Literacy is almost universal in Japan—a record which surpassed even that of America, which took modern education to Japan. They have about 45 universities and great numbers of technical, primary and secondary schools.

While their students abroad have been constantly observing foreign progress, at home their engineers, military men, doctors and scientists have perfected their techniques and contributed a fair number of inventions and discoveries. They are not the creators that Americans are by a long shot, but they have made some notable contributions.

Much has been written about the Japanese having a national tendency toward trachoma, which would account for so many of them wearing glasses. Public health service physicians who make a study of foreign health conditions say, however, that there is no scientific foundation for this belief. And they add that the Japanese have no national disease which makes them physically weaker than other peoples in any respect.

The Japanese mothers' practice of carrying infants strapped on their backs has given rise to talk about this disturbing the child's sense of balance and thus disqualifying them as aviators. Nothing to this idea either, say the physicians.

But, one often hears, the strapping impedes circulation in the children's legs, accounting for their short stature; and the custom of relaxing by squatting on one's calves, some say, shortens the legs.

Structure Inherited

There is no foundation for either of these theories, says Dr. Hdrlicka, curator of anthropology at the Smithsonian Institution. The Japanese bone structure is a prehistoric inheritance, he says, derived from the people of Southeastern Siberia who migrated to the islands in the 3d and 4th Centuries B. C. With them they brought some Korean blood, and on the islands they mixed with the aboriginal Ainus and later with some Chinese and Malay immigrants.

Detractors of the Japanese say the habits of unreasoning obedience and discipline make it impossible for them to adapt themselves to new conditions—if, for instance, a leader, is killed in battle, of if the rules are suddenly changed. But Washington officials who have lived among the Japanese for years warn that this is dangerous doctrine, with no facts to support it, and likely to catch Americans with their guard down.

The Japanese, they say, are highly adaptable and resourceful. They are not brilliant in the mass, but when they make up their minds to learn a new job or game, they go about it with grim determination. Hours and years of practice may be required, but they don't stop until they have mastered what they are trying to do.

Frugal and Stoical

Lean rations and hardships won't disturb them; they are habitually frugal and stoical. The Japanese, moreover, are fanatically patriotic, united in a mystical belief that the sun goddess is their common ancestor and that their Emperor descended from her. Japan is the land of the gods, a chosen nation, they are taught, and even educated Japanese won't admit they don't believe this until they have closed the doors carefully.

Through Shintoism, the national cult, which all Japanese follow, they venerate their own and their Emperor's ancestors; the ashes of soldiers killed in action are sent to the Yasakuni shrine, where they are deified.

Japan's greatest weakness as a fighting nation lies in its paucity of raw materials. Flaws in the Japanese character which may contribute to their downfall are:

Superstition. Omens and auguries are taken very seriously, and the soothsayer is a well respected member of society. Old residents of Japan were not surprised to read that when Saburo Kurusu, the envoy who came here on his alleged peace mission while the attack on Pearl Harbor was being prepared, read the cards with his family just before embarking, in order to learn what would befall him.

The belief that Japan's army is unconquerable and that her islands are invulnerable. This may produce overconfidence, and it may weaken morale if successive defeats prove the belief to be unfounded. The boast that Japan has never suffered defeat does not bear examination. A Japanese army of 150,000 was defeated by the Koreans in 1593. Japan's modern army and navy have never been tested against first-class opposition; the forces of China and Japan which she defeated were at that time largely illiterate and unused to the simplest modern inventions, such as the telegraph and telephone.

Lack of Humor

Lack of humor and logic. Devoid of the power of self criticism and living in a world created by their own imagination, they may find their national poise shaken by events during their struggle against the west. The Japanese army leaders talk tenderly of their mission of peace in China, where for years they have spread war and desolation. Warriors fresh from mass slaughter and destruction in Nanking, write sweetly about the beauty of the Chinese sky at night and the first blossoms of the Chinese spring.

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON, DEC 30-(WIDE WORLD)-JAPAN'S ECONOMIC SITUATION IS SO DESPERATE THAT EXPERT OBSERVERS EXPECT HER TO GAMBLE HER DESTINY ON SWIFT, RECKLESS ATTACKS DURING THE NEXT MONTHS IN ORDER QUICKLY TO OPEN UP NEW SOURCES OF RAW MATERIALS.

DEC 31 1941

JAPAN CAN HAVE NO REASONABLE HOPE OF CARRYING ON A LONG WAR, THEY SAY, UNLESS SHE PROMPTLY GETS CONTROL OF THE MALAY STATES AND THE DUTCH EAST INDIES; AND SHE WILL LOSE HER BEST SOURCE OF SUPPLY AT PRESENT IF THE RUSSIAN FAR EASTERN ARMY INVADES MANCHUKUO AND KOREA.

THE EXPERTS WOULD NOT BE SURPRISED TO SEE THE JAPANESE TRY TO ELIMINATE THE THREAT OF THE SOVIET ARMY IN THE NORTH AND AT THE SAME TIME CARRY ON A CAMPAIGN 3,000 MILES AWAY IN THE EAST INDIES; THE FIRST STEPS WOULD BE TO CLEAR COMMUNICATION LANES BY CAPTURING THE PHILIPPINES AND SINGAPORE.

DEC 31 1941

IF JAPAN SUCCEEDED IN DOING ALL THIS, SAY ECONOMISTS, SHE STILL PROBABLY COULD NOT DEVELOP THE PRODUCTIVE AREAS IN THE SOUTH IN TIME TO HELP HER WAR EFFORT. (OCCUPIED CHINA HAS BEEN ABLE TO CONTRIBUTE LITTLE TO THE JAPANESE CUPBOARD, AND MANCHUKUO IS INCREASING ITS PRODUCTION VERY SLOWLY.) ON THE OTHER HAND, IF SHE POSSESSED THE BRITISH, AMERICAN AND DUTCH BASES IN THE ORIENT, SHE WOULD BE REASONABLY FREE FROM THE DANGER OF LARGE SCALE ATTACK FROM THESE SOURCES.

SOME BELIEVE JAPAN WAS ALREADY BLED WHITE BY HER LONG WAR ON CHINA WHEN SHE CHALLENGED THE TWO GREATEST SEA POWERS IN THE WORLD. SHORTAGES OF RAW MATERIALS AND INCREASED TAXES, WHICH THE UNITED STATES IS JUST BEGINNING TO FEEL IN A COMPARATIVELY MILD FORM, HAVE BEEN SERIOUS PROBLEMS TO THE JAPANESE FOR TWO YEARS OR MORE.

JAPANESE TAXES JUMPED 40 PER CENT BETWEEN 1938 AND 1939. THE WHOLESALE PRICE INDEX ROSE FROM 218.5 IN MAY, 1937, TO 248.4 IN MAY, 1938, WHILE WAGE INCREASES LAGGED FAR BEHIND. AS THE NATION'S WAR LEADERS AT THAT TIME BEGAN TO CLAMP DOWN ON PUBLICATION OF STATISTICS, WHAT HAS HAPPENED SINCE THEN CAN ONLY BE GUESSED.

AS EARLY AS SEPTEMBER, 1937, GASOLINE CONSUMPTION WAS BEING RESTRICTED, AND CIVILIAN USE OF A LARGE NUMBER OF COMMODITIES WAS BEING CURTAILED. NEW RESTRICTIONS WERE ANNOUNCED IN THE SUMMER OF 1938, AND THERE WAS A PANICKY RUSH OF BUYERS TO THE DEPARTMENT STORES FOR HOUSEHOLD GOODS, AS WELL AS FORECASTS THAT 800,000 PERSONS WOULD BE THROWN OUT OF WORK BY CURTAILMENT OF CIVILIAN INDUSTRIES. PRICE CONTROL WAS ESTABLISHED AT THAT TIME.

DEC 31 1941

SOME IDEA OF THE PRESENT SITUATION IN THE ISLANDS CAN BE OBTAINED FROM BITS OF INFORMATION IN RECENT REPORTS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE. ALL BUT 50 GLASS MANUFACTURERS, OF WHOM THERE ARE 960, NOT INCLUDED PLATE-GLASS MAKERS, ARE TO BE CLOSED DOWN TO SAVE SUCH RAW MATERIALS AS SODA ASH AND WASTE GLASS. MEMBERS OF THE COTTON SPINNERS' ASSOCIATION, WHICH INCLUDES MOST OF THE TEXTILE INDUSTRY, HAVE REDUCED THE NUMBER OF THEIR FACTORIES BY 50 PERCENT.

"JAPAN'S ENTIRE COMMERCIAL TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM IS REPORTED TO HAVE GREATLY DETERIORATED," SAID THE DEPARTMENT IN JUNE. "RAILWAY EQUIPMENT IS OLD AND URGENTLY IN NEED OF REPAIRS. TRUCKS AND BUSES

HAVE BEEN RUNNING FOR YEARS WITHOUT PROPER REPLACEMENTS AND LUBRICATION, AND PRIVATE MOTORCARS HAVE BEEN REDUCED TO AN EXTREMELY SMALL NUMBER.

BUSES ARE RUNNING MAINLY ON CHARCOAL, RESULTING IN SLOW SPEEDS AND FREQUENT BREAK-DOWNS. HIGHWAYS HAVE DETERIORATED, AND VERY FEW HARD SURFACED ROADS HAVE BEEN CONSTRUCTED LATELY. WHAT SHIPPING IS LEFT FOR CIVILIANS AFTER THE MILITARY HAVE COMMANDEERED WHAT THEY REQUIRE, LACKS COAL AND MATERIAL FOR REPAIRS.

DEC 31 1941

JAPAN, A NATION IS PRIMARILY DEPENDENT UPON FOREIGN TRADE FOR ITS ECONOMIC WELFARE, HAS GONE TO WAR WITH ITS BEST CUSTOMERS AND IS CHIEF SUPPLIERS OF MACHINES AND RAW MATERIALS--THE UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN. ITS BIGGEST INDUSTRY, COTTON TEXTILES, MUST GET ALL OF ITS COTTON FROM OTHER LANDS. ITS SILK INDUSTRY, ON WHICH 18,000,000 OF THE EMPIRE'S 105,226,101 PERSONS DEPEND FOR A LIVING, MUST SELL THE BULK OF ITS PRODUCT ABROAD. MOST OF THE EXPENSIVE CONSUMER GOODS MANUFACTURED IN JAPAN MUST BE EXPORTED, SINCE THE INCOMES OF THE NATIVE CONSUMERS ARE SO SMALL THAT THEY CANNOT AFFORD TO BUY.

DEC 31 1941

JAPAN ORDINARILY IMPORTS ABOUT 79 PER CENT OF ITS IRON ORE, 63 PER CENT OF ITS MANGANESE, 92 PER CENT OF ITS PETROLEUM, 85 PER CENT OF ITS ZINC, 80 PER CENT OF ITS TIN, 80 PER CENT OF ITS ALUMINUM, AND PRACTICALLY ALL OF ITS RUBBER, WOOL, COTTON, MERCURY, AND VANADIUM. IF THIS COUNTRY HAD ANY SUCH LIST OF "CRITICAL MATERIALS," OUR PRODUCTION EXPERTS IN OPM WOULD NOW BE FRANTIC.

IN FOOD, JAPAN SEEMS TO BE SELF SUFFICIENT, AS LONG AS ITS SEA LANES REMAIN OPEN TO INDO-CHINA AND THAILAND, WHO ARE LARGE

o

SUPPLIERS OF ITS RICE, AND AS LONG AS IT HOLDS MANCHUKUO, WHICH SUPPLIES BEANS, WHEAT AND OTHER MATERIALS. THE STAPLE DIET OF THE JAPANESE IS RICE AND FISH.

THE ONLY LARGE SOURCES OF SUPPLY ON WHICH THE JAPANESE CAN DEFINITELY COUNT AT THIS TIME ARE THE SO-CALLED "YEN-BLOCK" - MANCHUKUO, KWANTUNG AND CHINA. BUT IN 1939, THE LAST YEAR FOR WHICH COMPLETE FIGURES ARE AVAILABLE, THIS BLOCK SUPPLIED ONLY 23 PER CENT OF JAPAN'S IMPORTS, COMPARED TO 34 PER CENT FROM THE UNITED STATES AND 21 PER CENT FROM THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

DEC 31 1941

MANCHUKUO CAN SUPPLY SOME RAW METALS, IN ADDITION TO FOOD. BUT JAPAN'S REQUIREMENTS ARE SPECIALIZED, SINCE SHE IS ONE OF MOST HIGHLY INDUSTRIALIZED NATIONS IN THE WORLD--ABOUT 55 PER CENT OF HER PEOPLE LIVE BY INDUSTRY. IN NORMAL TIMES SHE HAS TO IMPORT GREAT QUANTITIES OF MACHINE TOOLS, MACHINERY, HIGH-GRADE STEELS, AND FINE QUALITY LUBRICATING OILS AND AVIATION GASOLINE--MOST OF IT FROM THE UNITED STATES.

DEC 31 1941

WITHOUT SUCH SUPPLIES--RECEIVED NOT ONLY AT THE PRE-WAR RATE BUT EVEN IN GREATLY AUGMENTED QUANTITIES--JAPAN WOULD BE HAMSTRUNG IN ANY EFFORT TO INCREASE PRODUCTION OF INDUSTRIES AT HOME, IN MANCHUKUO OR IN ANY REGION TO THE SOUTH WHICH SHE MAY LATER INVADE.

JAPAN'S LEADERS THROUGH THE YEARS HAVE DELIBERATELY, STEP BY STEP, BACKED THE NATION INTO THE CORNER IN WHICH IT NOW FINDS ITSELF. BEFORE ITS PORTS WERE OPENED TO FOREIGN COMMERCE, IN 1854, IT HAD ENJOYED NEARLY 250 YEARS OF PEACE, IN A SOCIETY WHICH WAS MAINLY AGRICULTURAL AND ALMOST SELF-SUFFICIENT.

THE PROCESS OF INDUSTRIALIZATION BEGAN IMMEDIATELY AND BECAME A BASIC INTEREST OF THE NATION'S POLITICO-MILITARY LEADERS. A GOOD FRIEND

"IN SPITE OF THE PLETHORA OF STATISTICS OF VISIBLE PROGRESS, I CANNOT BUT THINK THAT THE IDEA OF SOME OF HER STATESMEN, SO OFTEN REITERATED AS TO BECOME A DOGMA, THAT JAPAN MUST CONTINUE WHOLLY IN MARITIME AND INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION, DEPENDING ON THE ASIAN CONTINENT FOR HER RAW MATERIAL, THUS TEMPTING THE NATION TO DELUSIVE ENTERPRISE AND TO HOSTILE AGGRESSION, IS A MISTAKE THAT INVITES ULTIMATE DISASTER."

THIS EFFORT TO MAKE THE ISLANDS WHOLLY INDUSTRIAL WAS CONTINUED, HOWEVER, AND IT WAS CARRIED TO ITS MOST EXTREME LENGTH WHEN TOWARD THE END OF 1940 THE GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCED ITS 10-YEAR ECONOMIC PROGRAM TO CREATE A "NEW ORDER IN EAST ASIA." THE INDUSTRIAL PHASE OF THE PLAN PROVIDES THAT ALL LIGHT MANUFACTURING ENTERPRISES BE TRANSFERRED TO THE CONTINENT AND THAT ONLY HEAVY INDUSTRY REMAIN IN THE ISLANDS.

Manila's Fall Expected, Enemy in Suburbs; MacArthur Sending Wounded to Australia

JAN 1 1942

Overwhelming Invasion Army Nearing Capital

Wounded Are Sent to Australia on Hospital Ship

JAN 1 1942

By The Associated Press

In the plains and jungles of Luzon the American Philippine army appeared last night to be still falling back before overwhelming force, but it still was offering a fierce and strong resistance and Gen. Douglas MacArthur had evacuated his wounded by sea.

This was the position as announced in the war department's late afternoon communique, which said the defending forces were following prearranged defense plans.

Final Battle

Still, by all available signs, MacArthur was fighting the last battles for Manila as 1941 was ending in sadness for America but in unity and in action, where it had begun in indecision and debate.

And while it seemed that Manila was going—commercial communication to the outside having long since been halted and the Japanese claiming to stand within 20 miles of the city's wreckage—this was the one dark spot in the world-long Allied war map.

For Singapore, essential of essentials in the Pacific, clearly was gathering new strength and the British imperial troops on the Malayan peninsula above the base were on the offensive in light fighting. The Japanese had eased their pressure.

And in the Russian campaign, over which Adolf Hitler loosed yesterday a shrill and vexed lament where a few weeks ago he had shouted his boasts and threats of extirpation, twin disasters had struck the Nazi invaders.

Moreover, the expected fall of Manila left the Japanese invaders with a victory still to consolidate: Beyond Manila there was the American naval base of Cavite and at the entrance to Manila bay there stood Corregidor fortress.

Resistance Stubborn, MacArthur Reports

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. (AP)—Wtih the early fall of Manila a very real probability, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, nevertheless, reported to the war department tonight that a "stubborn resistance" was being offered the Japanese "according to pre-arranged defense plans."

The commanding general in the Far East also said that American and Filipino wounded had been evacuated on the steamship Mactan, bound for Australia. The vessel had been converted into and marked as a hospital ship, which by treaty should make her immune from enemy attack.

DENIES TOKIO CLAIMS

Meanwhile, from the navy, came a communique, apparently intended as a denial of Tokio claims that Maui, Palmyra and Johnston islands, in or near the Hawaiian group, had been effectively bombed. The situation on those islands, the navy said, was unchanged since the last report, which was received Dec. 24.

In full, the war department's communique said:

"Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commanding the United States army forces in the east has advised the war department that wounded of the American and Philippine army have been evacuated from the Manila area on the steamship Mactan, which has been converted into a hospital ship and appropriately marked in accordance with the Geneva convention of 1907. The wounded will be taken to Australia.

"American and Philippine troops are continuing their stubborn resistance according to pre-arranged defense plans."

All indications were that Manila must soon surrender to powerful Japanese forces slashing their way steadily toward the city from two directions regardless of the fierce resistance of badly outnumbered defending troops.

JAN 1 1942

There was scant news, phrased in most general terms, of what was going on, but its meaning was unmistakeably plain.

The enemy was driving upon the island capital in great force from both north and south. Japan dive bombers dominated the roads. Great quantities of tanks and armored units were being hurled against the American and Filipino defenders.

Censorship or interrupted communications had virtually ended the receipt of press dispatches from the beleaguered city. Radio telegraph companies refused to accept messages for Manila, or took them only at the sender's risk.

FALL NOT UNEXPECTED

The fall of the city had not been unexpected here, and word of its critical situation spread no gloom or discouragement in the capital. For days, the Japanese had been pouring men and war machines onto Luzon, and simply storming the island by the overwhelming force of numerically superior troops and equipment.

The great difficulty of reinforcing the American-Filipino defenders was apparent from the outset, especially in view of the time situation. In the time that has elapsed since the war began troops could barely have reached the island by now under normal circumstances, to say nothing of having to run the Japanese blockade.

JAN 1 1942

Then, too, there was the question of over-all allied strategy, which apparently considers it more important to concentrate available fighting equipment upon holding the Nazi armies in check, until industrial producton provides enough fghting tools for assuming the offensive on all fronts.

TO BE RECAPTURED

So it was that many here regretfully wrote off Manila days ago when the plight of the Philippines, and the broad outline of Allied grand strategy became apparent. They wrote it off, however, for recapture later, when the material is available for the Allied drive against Japan.

The imminent fall of the Filipino capital, however, raised several questions upon which Washingtonians speculated. Would fighting continue in the southern island of Mindanao? Was one of them, and what about Corregidor was another.

Corregidor is a rocky island fortress in the entrance to Manila bay. Military experts have said it was capable of withstanding a siege of many months. Possibly, it could make things extremely difficult should the Japs attempt to bring their warships into the harbor.

Another was what was to be the fate of Gen. MacArthur, and his high command. Could they be evacuated? Realizing that MacArthur is not the sort of soldier who would run away under such circumstances, many suggested, nevertheless, that it would be foolish for the army to surrender one of its outstanding field commanders, thru any outmoded sense of the personal chivalry of battle.

Jap Losses Heavy, U. S. Lines Are Readjusted

JAN 1 1942

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 31—The War Department said today American and Philippine troops continue "strong resistance, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy," in the fierce battle for Manila.

The communique was unusually terse and in its general terms told of "heavy pressure on all fronts, with extensive use of dive bombers and armored units."

Lines Readjusted

The text of the communique, No. 37, outlining the military situation as of 9.30 A. M., Eastern standard time:

"1. Philippine theater:

"The enemy continues to exert heavy pressure on all fronts, with extensive use of dive bombers and armored units. In spite of these difficulties, a further readjustment of our lines has been completed in an orderly manner. American and Philippine troops continue to offer strong resistance, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

The Navy Department said that at 10.25 A. M. it was still in communcation with Manila.

War Of Nerves Begins

With the battle for the Philippines in its crucial hour, the Alies invoked war-of-nerves technique against Japan today to mask the grand strategy of operations that might deveop anywhere along a 5,000-mile front.

As the overwhelming Japanese armies were smashing closer to the gates of Manila, Tokyo exhibited signs of uneasiness over the possibility of developments elsewhere.

Whether the Allied "neryes" offensive presaged a lightning thrust against Japan at some unexpected point was a subject of lively conjecture here, where all eyes were on the tide of the fighting in the Philippines.

Kamchatka Mentioned

The Capital realized that, if the 30.24—13857

30.24—13857

terrific pressure on the Philippines was to be relieved, it would take a smashing surprise attack on Japan in some other part of the vast Pacific theater.

The character of Allied pronouncements was calculated to keep Japan apprehensive on that score.

President Roosevelt spoke cryptically yesterday of Kamchatka, the Russian Siberian peninsula which juts down to the tip of the Japanese island chain.

Prime Minister Churchill simultaneously was talking of Anglo-American aid to the Netherlands East Indies, which are at the opposite end of the 5,000-mile theater in which the Japanese are operating.

It was up to Tokyo to decide at which end trouble was apt to come first, or whether it might come simultaneously in both places. With Japanese armed forces spread over such a vast area and already committed in several major operations, the latter prospect was disturbing.

Jap Raid Jitters

The Tokyo radio evidenced this by broadcasting a warning against possible air raids during the New Year holiday period. Japanese have manifested concern over the air-raid danger since the war began, but this time the eastern defense headquarters ordered partial blackouts from midnight tonight until January 4.

Another apparent indication of Japanese fear of a surprise in the northern theater was the suspected presence of Japanese submarines in the vicinity of Kodiak, Alaska, site of a United States naval air base.

While an underseas boat might expect to get an occasional shot at a merchantman in these waters, they are not the happy hunting ground that the busy shipping lanes present off the west coas of the continental United States.

It was thought probable therefore, that the main mission of the enemy craft was reconnaissance against any large scale surfac or air movement westward toward Siberia or Japan.

Fleet Mission A Mystery

The Navy Department here already has commented on Japanese anxiety to learn the location and intentions of the United States Pacific Fleet, which, behind a veil of secrecy, has been disposing itself for "an intensive and well planned campaign against the Japanese forces."

The War Department yesterday gave the enemy reason to think about the air when it made public, without comment, the recommendation of Gen. Douglas MacArthur that "retaliatory measures" be taken against Japanese cities "at the proper time" for the ruthless bombardment of Manila.

Then President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill made the statements yesterday which called attention to both ends of the 5,000-mile front which Japan must hold. Mr. Roosevelt spoke at his press conference here, Mr. Churchill in his address to the Canadian Parliament at Ottawa.

Casual Comment

Mr. Roosevelt was very casual about his mention of Kamchatka. He was talking about American production of war materials and he said no human being could tell where the finished products might go—whether to Russia, China, Britain or the Kamchatka Peninsula.

JAN 1 1942

The mention of Kamchatka caused definite surprise among the newsmen, but Mr. Roosevelt calmly volunteered that this peninsula was the most practical and available piece of land west of the Aleutians.

Hordes of Tanks and Bombers.

Manila, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Greatly outnumbered American and Filipino forces north and south of Manila are being pushed back by hordes of Japanese infantry, tanks and dive bombers, Gen. Douglas MacArthur grimly acknowledged today.

JAN 1 1942

The southern battle line was only thirty minutes from the capital by automobile early today. An Associated Press staff reporter, Clark Lee, made a trip to that front and back this morning in an hour.

Gen. MacArthur's field headquarters communique declared the Japanese dive bombers practically controlled the roads from the air. Thus the invaders were in position to make full use of tanks and armored units sent to Luzon Island with great fleets of transports.

MacArthur's Communique.

Gen. MacArthur's terse communique, issued at 11 A. M. (9 P. M., Eastern standard time Tuesday) said:

"The enemy is driving in great force from both north and south. His dive bombers practically control the roads from the air. The Japanese are using great quantities of tanks and armored units.

"Our lines are being pushed back."

Japanese military spokesmen first had declared their aim was to subdue Manila by January 1 but only yesterday they changed their schedule to "before January 10."

Mr. Lee made his trip to the vicinity of the southern front lines between 7:30 A. M. and 8:30 A. M.

[Censorship apparently kept him from filing details of his trip.]

Before the report that the Japanese were within thirty minutes driving range of Manila, they last had been reported forty-five airline miles from the capital. But a wide lake, the great Laguna De Bay, lay between that area and the capital and they apparently were forming their forces to skirt that body of water on first-class roads.

Two Columns Involved.

There were two columns involved in that maneuvering southeast of Manila. One was reported yesterday to have reached the town of Dolores, some thirty-five miles from the Atimonan beachhead gained by a landing on the night of December 23 from a fleet of forty transports. The other column then was reported at Luisiana, about fifteen miles west from the original landing at Mauban, twenty miles up Lamon Bay from Atimonan. Atimonan is a small fishing port seventy-five miles southeast of Manila.

To the north of the capital, no new picture of the battle line has been drawn since reports yesterday said that Gen. MacArthur's new and shortened line extended east and west through the town of Zaragoza, a point about sixty-five miles north of Manila.

Manila Gets a Respite.

The principal Japanese force, which began the major offensive against Manila by landing from eighty transports in the Lingayen Gulf December 22, apparently was a short distance north of this line. The northern front was formed to defend the central Luzon plain running down to Manila from the Lingayen area.

Manila, meanwhile, was enjoying a rest from the savage bomb raids which spread death and destruction through the old city during the week end. Up until this morning, no bombs have fallen on the open and defenseless capital since the two-hour and four-minute attack last Sunday. But Japanese planes have flown over the city and have delivered a heavy assault on the United States fortress of Corregidor, in Manila Bay, since that Sunday raid.

Tokyo Says Sea And Air Control Bars Reinforcing MacArthur

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Dec. 31 (Official Broadcast). Domei said today that Japanese dive bombers and tanks had blasted their way through American and Filipino forces until Japan's troops had reached a point within twenty miles of Manila.

[Berlin broadcasts of dispatches dated from Shanghai put the distance at four miles.]

Japan's greatest advance was from the south, but in the north the forces of Gen. Douglas MacArthur also were being pushed back, Domei said.

The news agency asserted it was impossible for MacArthur to get reinforcements because Japan held control of the sea and air and occupied the most feasible landing points. On the other hand, it was reported that Japanese reinforcements were continuing to land at Lingayen and at Lamon Bay.

Admonition From Premier

Premier General Hideki Tojo broadcast an admonition to Japanese to take their successes in the brief war with moderate jubilation, however, and told them it was inevitable the war would be long.

Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, Navy Minister, said "full dress war has yet to come. Britain and the United States are backed by both wealth and power."

A report from the navy said that a destroyer, two small patrol vessels and three large ships were sunk in Manila Bay by the air attack on Corregidor Fortress Monday and that the fortress barracks were set blazing.

Lists Attacks On Islands

Hangars, wireless stations and other military installations have been demolished by repeated warship attacks since December 17 on Maui, Johnston and Palmyra islands within and to the south of the Hawaiian Islands, the navy added.

An army announcement said 3,000 British and American troops have been killed and 2,000 captured since the start of the war, compared with Japanese casualties of 743 killed and 1,799 wounded.

Airplane losses have been 541 for Britain, the United States and the Netherlands, compared with 49 for the Japanese, the report said.

The army reported thirty-seven enemy ships sunk or damaged and said four Japanese ships had been sunk and twelve damaged.

20 Miles From Manila, Say Japanese

JAN 1 1942

Japanese Are Cautious.

Tokio, Dec. 31 (Official broadcast recorded by A. P.).—Domei reported today that Japanese forces had thrust to less than 200 miles from Manila from the southeast and were pushing Gen. Douglas MacArthur's troops back to new lines in a drive from the north.

Domei said that there was no way in which the United States could re-enforce the Philippines because, it contended, Japan had virtual control of the sea and air in the western Pacific.

News from Luzon Island was described as meager, but Domei declared that Gen. MacArthur was forming new defense lines in Pampangas province north of Manila and that Japanese dive bombers were blasting a path through United States tanks and infantry lines southeast of the capital.

It was in this sector where Japanese pushing up from the Lamon Bay region reached a point less than twenty miles from Manila, Domei said.

Domei added that fresh Japanese troops were being poured into the fight from landing places in the Lamon and Lingayen Bay areas and near Batangas, directly south of Manila.

A note of moderation, however, was sounded in New Year's messages to the Japanese people by Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo and Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, Minister of the Navy. Each declared that the war might be long.

Asserting that Japanese victories up to the New Year have placed important regions under Japan's control, Gen. Tojo said it was inevitable that the war would be protracted.

Admiral Shimada urged moderation in receiving news of Japanese victories.

"Full dress war," he said, "has yet to come. Britain and the United States are backed by both wealth and power. We must be prepared for a fight just as hard on the home front as on the front lines."

Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo declared: "It will not be long before the evils of Anglo-American imperialism will be liquidated in East Asia."

He said that factors favoring Japan were her initial successes, the growth and contributions of Manchukuo, collaboration of the Nanking Chinese regime and of Thailand, and "support of the Axis, which has solemnly pledged to co-operate with Japanese in realization of a new Asiatic order."

The navy section of imperial headquarters announced that Japanese warships had repeatedly attacked United States islands within and below the Hawaiian group since December 17.

British Bases Hit

The announcement said hangars, wireless stations and other military installations on Maui, Johnston, Sand and Palmyra islands had been destroyed.

The naval headquarters said that Britain's Far Eastern military headquarters and other military and naval establishments were severely damaged in a mass raid on Singapore Monday night.

Not until the dawn Tuesday did

Japanese naval flyers cease pounding the British base at the tip of Malaya, a communique declared.

Huge fires were said to have been caused. The communique said the Seleta and Kuan airfields were demolished.

"All planes returned safely, despite heavy enemy anti-aircraft fire," the Japanese reported.

Shanghai Via Berlin.

Berlin, Dec. 31 (Official Radio Recorded by A. P.).—The Berlin radio today broadcast the following dispatch, date lined Shanghai:

"Japanese tank formations which are approaching Manila, by making full use of the speed of their vehicles during their march on the city from the north and from the south, are only about four miles away from the city, according to reports from Manila received here (Shanghai) Wednesday."

(A familiar tactic of Axis propaganda is to exaggerate the progress of an advance with the objective of harming the adversary's morale).

Japs Bomb Ocean Island; Scout Other Pacific Points

By the Associated Press.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Dec. 31.—Prime Minister Peter Fraser announced today that Ocean Island, about 1,200 miles north of New Zealand, was bombed Monday.

He said there were no casualties and damages were slight.

Japanese planes also flew over the British mandated island of Nauru, 100 miles west of Ocean Island, and over the Gilbert Islands, of the Gilbert and Ellice Islands colony, the headquarters of which is situated on Ocean Island, but dropped no bombs, he said.

The Gilbert and Ellice Islands lie across the equator, about 1,200 miles due north of New Zealand. Nauru, formerly German, and all the Gilbert Islands except Ocean Island, are atolls. Ocean Island and Nauru are rich in high-grade phosphates.

The British mandate from the League of Nations forbade the establishment of naval or military bases or fortifications on Nauru Island.

TOKIO, Dec. 31 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP).—Premier General Hide i Tojo returned to Tokio today from a tour of the principal national shrines of western Japan where, according to an official announcement, he "reported Japanese military and naval victories."

Tojo visited the grand shrines of Ise, dedicated to Amaterasu Omikami, the sun goddess; the tomb of Jimmu Tenno, the first emperor, near Nara, and the tomb of Meiji Tenno, grandfather of the present emperor, near Kioto.

SIX NAZI CORPS PUT TO FLIGHT, RUSSIANS SAY

JAN 1 1942

Recapture Of Kaluga And Road Net In Center Claim

Attack Timed With Push To Relieve Siege Of Sevastopol

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Thursday, Jan. 1—The Red army announced today the recapture of the important city of Kaluga, final defeat of Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian's tank army, and routing of sixteen German divisions comprising six entire army corps on the whole central front.

In addition, a special brigade of Hitler's black-shirted Elite Guards, flown to the front from Cracow, Poland, has been routed, a special communique said.

The Nazi invaders are fleeing westward under heavy blows of the pursuing Russians, abandoning military equipment and even their wounded as they seek to hasten their escape, the Soviet communique said.

Follows Rout Near Tula

The text:

"Our troops on the western front have occupied the town of Kaluga. General Guderian has suffered defeat.

"After the route near Tula of the Second Tank Army under command of General Guderian, stubborn engagements resulted on the line of the rivers Nara, Protva and Oka.

"Fortified positions of the Fourth German Army under Field Marshal (Guenther) von Kluge were broken through in many places.

Names Corps In Flight

"In the course of fighting, our troops of the Western front routed the Twentieth, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Forty-third, Fifty-third and Fifty-seventh German Army Corps, comprising the Two Hundred and Ninety-second, Two Hundred and Fifty-eighth, One Hundred and Eighty third, Fifteenth, Ninety-eighth, Thirty-fourth, Two Hundred and Sixty-eighth, Two Hundred and Sixtieth, Sixty-second, Seventeenth, One Hundred and Thirty-seventh, One Hundred and Thirty-first, Thirty-first, Two Hundred and Ninety-sixth and One Hundred and Sixty-seventh Infantry Divisions, the Nineteenth Tank Division, and the Second SS. Brigade which was brought from Cracow by air.

"Under blows of our troops the enemy retreating in the western direction is abandoning military equipment and wounded.

"Following the clearing of the enemy out of the towns of Narofominsk, Ugolskyzavod, Aleskin, Tarusa, Schekino, Adoyev, Cherepets, Pereyskl, Likvhin Koselsk and hundreds of villages our troops on December 30 took the town of Kaluga.

"Large amounts of equipment which now are being counted were captured in Kaluga."

Frees Road And Rail Lines

Kaluga, an old city on the left bank of the Oka, is 110 miles southwest of Moscow. Its capture liberated an additional large sector of the rail and road network southwest of the capital.

There were indications that after routing Guderian's armored army in the Tula vicinity, the Reds entered Kaluga but that the town changed hands several times in days of furious fighting which led up to today's triumphant announcement of the final smashing of the tank expert's forces and the infantrymen of von Kluge.

The Russian announcement, opening the New Year, told of a victory as great as any yet claimed by either side in the great war which began with the German invasion June 22.

JAN 1 1942

Timed With Crimea Drive

In occupying Kaluga the Russians also took the big railway junction of Novy Kirishi (presumably just west of Kaluga on the Moscow-Bryansk and Tula-Vyasma railways).

The victorious Oka river push, overrunning positions which the Nazis had attempted to consolidate for the winter, was timed to coincide with the Red army offensive in the Crimea where Russian troops, following Joseph Stalin's own plan of strategy, are driving to relieve the besieged naval base of Sevastopol.

Says Enemy Is On Run

Even as the latest victory was announced, Russia's President, Michael Kalinin, told the Soviet Union in a New Year's message:

"We are now fighting the Germans on equal terms. The enemy is in retreat and on some parts of the front actually on the run."

Stalin's Crimean strategy was aimed at swift recapture of the whole Crimean peninsula from the Germans.

This, apparently, was to be the first major battlefield of 1942 on the eastern front, a year in which the Kuibyshev radio exultantly proclaimed that "we shall chase every German out of Russia and score final victory."

Two Cities Recaptured

Having landed in force across the straits from the Caucasus and having already recaptured two cities, the rescue troops were pushing toward the flanks and rear of German, Italian and Rumanian troops at the gates of Sevastopol.

Despite snow and rain and admitted tough Axis resistance, the Russians yesterday reoccupied Kerch, a potential gateway to the Caucasus' oil through the eastern Crimean panhandle, and the port of Feodosiya, fifty-five miles to the southwest, the Government announced.

Commissar Shafnin of the military council told the Communist party newspaper Pravda that the plan of attack was "evolved personally by Stalin" and was brilliantly accomplished. Stalin sent personal congratulations to Red army and navy commanders.

Pound By Land, Sea And Air

Having accomplished, in reverse, what would logically have been the next Nazi thrust—the leap over the Kerch straits between the Crimea and Caucasus—Pravda declared the Red forces were "in pursuit and annihilation" of the enemy, pounding it by land, sea and air.

"The Rostov victory closed one of the doors leading to the Caucasus," it said. "The Crimean victory announced yesterday closes the other."

The biggest Crimean plums were still to be picked, however. A successful push around the Yaila mountains to clear out the Axis forces would place the Russians again in full command of their big Sevastopol base and in a better position to combat rumored new German moves in the Balkans.

Elsewhere along the Germans' wavering front, said the Moscow radio in a New Year's salutation to the Soviet's fighters, 'The Red army is passing to the offensive on several sectors" and the Germans are suffering in fierce cold.

Fortified Lines Broken

Evidence accumulated from Russian reports indicated that the Germans had been forced to abandon fortified lines on which they had hoped to dig in for the winter.

Izvestia, the Government newspaper, said the Nazis evidently had intended to winter on the banks of the Nara river, a tributary of the Oka southwest of Moscow, but had been thrown back to the east.

On the northwest front also, it added, Soviet units have crossed the Volkhov river, in several places overwhelming fixed Nazi fortifications.

Describing the "fiasco" of German plans in that sector outside Leningrad, Maj. Gen. Fedyuninsky said Nazi casualties exceeded 15,000 men in seven days of fighting. He declared that there originally were six German divisions in the area and that they had been swept back thirty miles.

Finnish Lines Attacked

HELSINKI, Dec. 31 (AP).—The Red Army is attacking Finnish lines along the whole front, with fighting fiercest in the Svir River sector between Lakes Ladoga and Onega, a Finnish communique said today.

The Finns reported repulsing the Russian attacks generally and said counter-operations by Finnish forces were under way.

Finnish artillery was said to have broken up a Russian force concentrating for an attack east of the Stalin Canal, which links Onega to the White Sea. The war bulletin reported intensification of firing and infantry skirmishes along the Leningrad front.

Berlin Admits Red Attacks.

Berlin, Dec. 31 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—Russian landings in force on the Kerch peninsula at Kerch and at Feodosiya, to the southwest, were conceded by the German High Command today, with a declaration that necessary countermeasures are being taken. Heavily defended positions at Sevastopol, the besieged Soviet naval base, were declared to have been taken in a concentrated two-week attack by German and Rumanian troops. Of the battle of Sevastopol, the High Command said:

"In spite of the violent defense, a number of strongly armed Soviet defense positions have been taken in individual fighting and break-throughs deep into the enemy system of positions have been achieved. To relieve the defense of Sevastopol, the enemy during the last few days again landed strong forces on the Kerch peninsula and near Feodosiya. Necessary counter-measures have been started."

Bitter defensive fighting under severe weather conditions was reported along the main Russian front.

THREEFOLD ATTACK SUCCEEDS

Assault by Land, Sea and Air Disclosed as Having Been Planned in Kremlin.

Moscow, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Soviet fighting men who smashed Axis troops in the Crimean panhandle during a forty-eight-hour battle, recapturing two cities, were exhorted by Premier Joseph V. Stalin today to rid the whole Peninsula of the Germans "and their Rumanian and Italian underlings." The lifting of the six-week siege of Sevastopol, the Soviet Black Sea naval base obviously was an intermediate objective.

The fortified city of Kerch, a potential gateway to the Caucasus on the narrow strait linking the Azov and Black Seas, which was occupied by German and Rumanian units on November 16, and the Black Sea port of Feodosiya, fifty-five miles to the southwest, were regained yesterday, the Government announced. "Retreating on both these sectors, the enemy is being pursued by our units," the Soviet Information Bureau said.

Stalin's Own Plan.

Red army and navy forces—"Valiant troops and glorious seamen" in the words of Premier Stalin—co-operated in the counter-invasion, striking hard and swiftly against Kerch from the east and Feodosiya from the south. Commissar Shafnin of the military council told the Communist party newspaper Pravda of the assaults by radio telephone.

"Fire from ships accompanied the attack by land forces and air bombing" he said. "The naval forces had to operate notwithstanding a strong wind. Snowfalls and sometimes pouring rain rendered operations of infantry and the air force diffcult.

"Despite this, the Red Army men, Red Navy men and flyers brilliantly accomplished their task. They broke the enemy's stubborn resistance and captured the enemy lines according to plan." He said that this plan had been "evolved personally by Stalin."

Premier Stalin sent personal congratulations to Lieut.-Gen. D. T. Kozlov, Caucasian front commander, and Vice-Admiral E. S. Oktyabrsky, commander of the Black Sea fleet.

JAN 1 1942

Message to Commanders.

He said that their forces, in a drive effectively paralleling the counter-offensive on the mainland, had laid the groundwork for liberating the Crimea. The message follows:

[To the Commander of Troops of the Caucasian Front, Lieut.-Gen. Kozlov; to the Commander of the Black Sea Fleet, Vice-Admiral Oktyabrsky:

[I congratulate you upon the victory over the enemy and the liberation of the town and fortress of Kerch and the town of Feodosiya from the German Fascist invaders.

[greet t he valiant troops of Gen. Pervushin and Gen. Lvov and the glorious seamen of the group of warships of Captain of First Rank Basistyi, who laid the groundwork for liberation of the Soviet Crimea.

[The Crimea must be lebarated from the German invaders and their Rumanian and Italian underlings. STALIN.]

[London reports said that the German troops were hammering futilely at Sevastopol. The Russians previously had declared that the attacks cost the lives of 20,000 invaders in six days. Soviet forces based at Feodosiya are only sixty miles east of the Crimean railway line supplying the siege units about the naval base. Sea landings at Yalta, southeast of Sevastopol, or at Yevpatoriya, northwest, would constitute an even more direct threat to Adolf Hitler's Crimean army.]

Continued gains were reported officially on the central front, with Soviet forces recapturing a number of localities including Kozelsk, across the Oka River, 80 miles west of Tula, and Novosil, 35 miles west of Orel. Russian dispatches said that 106 settlements had been freed of the Germans in the Orel sector in seven days.

A communique said that "near the village of 'B' alone, our men killed 550 German officers and men and captured large booty."

[London dispatches said that rumors, chiefly from Turkey, circulated that some German soldiers were being moved out of Russia for concentration in southern Rumania. It was not brought out whether this movement implied war action from Rumania's bases or simply the use of the soil of that ally for rest camps.]

Santa Arrives For Reds With Victories, Toys

Russians Celebrate Around Gay New Year Elm Trees, Toast Future Army Gains

KUYBYSHEV, Jan. 1 (Thursday) (AP).—Flushed with victories, Soviet citizens clustered today with gay abandon around the colorfully decorated Novogodnyaia Yolka (New Year elm tree), gave presents to children and toasted Red Army triumphs to come.

For several days previous roads to Moscow, Kuybyshev, Gorki, Sverdlovsk and other big cities were reported crowded with trucks and sledges filled with elm trees. All day Russians stood in endless lines buying trees which went up in homes, schools, theaters, concert hails and clubs, decorated much as they are in the United States.

Trees were restored in Russia five years ago. Instead of gathering on Christmas, Russians mostly celebrate today. Officially the tree lighting and decorating begins on Dec. 30 and continues until Jan. 7.

Santa Claus was never exiled in Red Russia, but he did have to change from his red suit to a white one. He is very much in fashion, for cars, uniforms, tanks and armored trains are painted white now to match the snowy battlefields.

Toys have been sold in Russia since November. As the big day approached stores retailing furs, tools, household utensils and carpets were converted into toy and elm tree shops.

New Year's Day was made an official holiday, but in order not to lose a work day the Russians labored last Sunday, normally a rest day.

JAPANESE PRESSURE SLACKENS

Troyanovsky Offers Toast

KUYBYSHEV, Jan. 1 (Thursday) (AP).—Alexander Troyanovsky, former Soviet Ambassador to the United States, suggested today a toast to total defeat for the Axis in 1942 and the 'victory of our country and all its allies."

In a newspaper article he wrote that the Soviet Union "never shall forget June 22, when the wild beast flung himself upon our country, hoping to crush it with one mighty blow."

"Never will America forget Dec. 7, when Japanese militarists, egged on by the Hitlerites, swooped upon the peaceful American people in the hope of dealing them a mortal blow," he added. "Germany and Italy followed the example of the Japanese adventurers and declared war on the United States. America was forced to defend herself."

"The Moscow News," in an editorial commenting on an interview by American newspaper men with Prime Minister Churchill, said his declarations "imply in particular an especially speedy solution of the problem of the second front in Europe, which is indispensable in order to divide the forces still remaining to the Nazi barbarians."

Moscow Sends Greetings

MOSCOW, Jan. 1 (Thursday) (AP).—The Moscow radio sent its greetings early today to Britain and the United States, saying: "The intensive struggle against the ferocious enemy of mankind, bloodthirsty Hitlerism, has brought closer the Soviet, British and American people and has laid the foundation for the friendship which in the coming year must and will bring us victory."

London Analyzes Situation.

London, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—A military commentator said today that the German retreat had proceeded so far in Russia that "by no stretch of the imagination can it still be called a mere correction of their lines." First German claims that they were correcting their lines "might have had a certain degree of truth," he said, because deep salients then existed north and west of Moscow and south of Tula, but the Nazis have been pushed back much farther.

In the Leningrad region, he said, the Russian advance had been sixty or seventy miles from the point of the deepest German penetration.

HITLER CLAIMS RUSSIA WILL BE BEATEN IN 1942

New Year Broadcast To Reich Argues Winter Caused Troubles

Charges Enemies Prevent Carrying Out Cultural Reforms

JAN 1 1942

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 31 (Official Broadcast)—Adolf Hitler, in a New Year message broadcast to his people, tonight blamed the "unscrupulous, sanguinary sacrifice of the Bolshevik slaves" for Germany's troubles on the Eastern front, and told his army the Russian winter counter-attack "must and will be frustrated."

In 1942, he said, "we shall again get hold of this enemy of mankind . . . and we shall beat him. . . .

"We all shall therefore ask God almighty that the year 1942 bring the decision for the rescue of our people and of the nations allied with us."

[At the same time last year Hitler said flatly that 1941 "will bring completion of the greatest victory of our history."]

Talks Of Cultural Tasks

Today's message continued bitterly: "What I and the whole National Socialist movement will be prevented from accomplishing for years on account of this war fills me with the deepest regret. It is a shame that it is impossible to prevent the duffers and lazybones from stealing the precious time which one intended to devote to the cultural, social and economic tasks of the people.

"The statue of the also Fascist Italy where likewise a single man has eternalized his name by a civilized and national revolution of secular dimension and which likewise cannot be compared with the democratic, political blunders of those pocket thieves and dividend hunters who, for instance in the Anglo Saxon countries, squandered the wealth of their fathers or accumulated new fortunes by dirty business transactions."

Lists Japan In "Mighty Front"

Germany, he said, understands why "at last Japan, also, tired of everlasting blackmail and daring thr finally acted in self-defense the most infamous warmonge time."

He said the war was now between the "mighty front of national States" against the "Jewish, capitalistic, Bolshevist, world conspiracy."

"It simply cannot be imagined the frightful misfo e which would have come over Germany and over all of Europe if Jewish Bolshevism had been victorious as an ally of Churchill and Roosevelt; for Churchill and Roosevelt have delivered Europe to Stalin," continued Hitler who on August 24, 1939, signed a ten-year non-aggression pact with Russia which last June's invasion of Russia scrapped.

Appeals To Divine Justice

"I speak now believing in divine justice. The Bolshevik monster to which they wanted to deliver the European nations will destroy their own people in time to come. . . .

"In East Asia . . . the fighting has just begun and while two blasphemers are still praying for their businesses the nations are throwing off their shackles."

In the shorter order of the day to his army, Hitler said that the Russian enemy had been flung back more than 600 miles into his own territory, but this winter again "sought to avert his fate by attacking us."

Saying that the Russians will be beaten, Hitler then told his troops:

"The blood which has been spilled in this war shall be, we hope, the last spilled in Europe for generations. May God almighty assist us in this coming year."

Says 1941 Has Been Year of Greatest Victories in All Times.

Berlin, Dec. 31 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—Adolf Hitler, in a New Year's order to his troops, declared today that the Russian winter counter-attack "must and will be frustrated" and that the year 1942 would see the Soviet power broken completely.

Addressing his troops on the eastern front, Der Fuehrer asserted that " Germany does not want and cannot afford to be involved in battle again every twenty-five years. . . . and engage in a new war for 'to be or not to be.'

"Also Europe cannot eternally continue to lacerate itself merely that the gang of Anglo-American and Jewish conspirators may satisfy itself by its selfish machinations. The blood which has been spilled in this war shall be, we hope, the last to be spilled in Europe for generations."

His Closing Words.

His final words were these:

"We all shall, therefore, ask God Almighty that the year 1942 will bring the decision for the rescue of our people and of the nations allied with us."

[In his speech last New Year's Hitler declared flatly "the year 1941 will bring completion of the greatest victory of our history." He also stated: "God up to now has placed the stamp of approval on our battles. He will not forsake us in the future if we do our duty with courage and faith."]

JAN 1 1942

Hitler's order of the day, broadcast by the Berlin radio, said 1941 "was a year of heaviest decisions and the most sanguinary fighting" but predicted that "it will be known in history as the year of the greatest victories of all times."

His Message to Troops.

He told his troops:

"In the year 1941 you have in innumerable battles driven the enemy, who was ready to spring his attack upon us, not only from the frontiers of Finland, Germany, Slovakia, Hungary and Rumania, but you also have flung him back more than 1,000 kilometers into his own territory.

"The enemy's attempt during the winter of 1941-1942 to again avert his fate by attacking us again must and will be frustrated. Yes, on the contrary, in the year 1942 we shall again get hold of this enemy of mankind with the aid of all the preparations which have been made, and we shall beat him until the Jewish, capitalistic and Bolshevist lust for destruction of the world has been broken."

Proclamation to People.

Hitler also issued a proclamation to the German people. It was read over the Berlin radio.

In it he reiterated his statements that Germany was not the aggressor and had tried to maintain peace—even after the outbreak of fighting in September, 1939. For the failure of these alleged efforts he blamed Britain and the United States.

"Thus," he declared, "the year 1941 had to come, and with it the beginning of the greatest struggle the world ever witnessed."

Hitler complained bitterly that the war kept him from other self-imposed tasks.

"The German people will believe me," he said, "when I say that I should have preferred to choose peace instead of war. For peace included for myself a heap of fortunate tasks. What I and the whole national socialist movement will be prevented from accomplishing for years on account of this war fills me with deepest regret.

"It is a shame that it is impossible to prevent duffers and lazybones from stealing one's precious time which one intended to devote to cultural, social and economic tasks for the people."

Praises Mussolini.

Of his Fascist partner, Hitler commented:

"The same thing is true also of Fascist Italy, where likewise a single man has eternalized his name for all times by a civilized and national revolution of secular dimension and which likewise cannot be compared with democratic and political blunderers. . .who, for instance, in Anglo-Saxon countries squandered the wealth of their fathers or accumulated new fortunes by dirty business transactions."

He expressed sympathy for Japan, remarking:

"We therefore readily understand that at last also Japan, tired of everlasting blackmail and daring threats, finally acted in self-defense against the most infamous warmonger of all."

Declaring that Germany's soldiers and their Allies had written military history during 1941, Hitler asserted "in thousands of years these battles and victories will still be talked about and admired. . . ."

Scores Churchill and Roosevelt.

Fiercely denouncing Soviet Russia and Britain and the United States for aiding her, he declared "Churchill and Roosevelt have delivered Europe to Stalin" and predicted that Britain and the United States themselves eventually would succumb to Bolshevism.

"The fighting on the eastern front," he said, "is still being kept alive by the unscrupulous and sanguinary sacrifice of bolshevist lives, yet it will slowly become paralyzed at the various fronts.

"In East Asia, however, fighting has just begun and while the two blasphemers are still praying for their businesses, nations are throwing off their shackles."

Military Situation Reviewed.

The Berlin radio broadcast this military review today:

"The military situation on the eastern front and North Africa is viewed in Berlin military circles on the last day of the year with some reserve but with indisputable satisfaction and confidence.

"It is hinted in these military circles that the present line held on the eastern front would most probably be retained.

"The Soviets' offensive spirit is generally slackening, obviously on account of the small successes scored despite the tremendous sacrifices they have been making in blood and material. . . .

"While nearly the entire area now held by Soviet troops along the front is completely devastated, the German side of the front enjoys more favorable possibilities for sheltering German troops in towns and villages spared of complete destruction. Thus the winter quarters of the German forces and their winter positions enjoy a great advantage compared to the Soviets."

British Astrologers Say Stars Will Hex Hitler & Co. In 1942

JAN 1 1942

London, Dec. 31 (AP)—British astrologers who cull the heavens for signs of the future are agreed that the moon, Jupiter, Venus, Neptune, Mars, etc., are going to put the hex on Hitler, Hirohito & Co. in 1942.

Old Moore's Almanack, established in 1697, reports for 1942:

"Clearly the outlook for Hitler is bad.

"He has his progressed ascendant opposing Neptune, and Saturn and Neptune transit near about this point in May, 1942. Furthermore, the next conjunction of Saturn and Mars—in February, 1942—falls on the ascendant of the foundation map of the Third Reich."

Old Moore's sums this up in plain language: "Somewhere between the earliest and latest of these dates first Hitler, and then Naziism, will crash."

The "culminating of Jupiter in Japan" during February will give Premier Hideki Tojo's boys trouble, and peace will come early in the summer, the Almanack adds.

BRITISH DRIVE JAPANESE BACK ALONG MALAYA

Enemy Pressure Falls Off In Sector 290 Miles Above Singapore

English Forces Said To Have Taken Offensive Wherever They Met Foe

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 31—Japanese pressure fell off today in the main Perak sector 290 miles above Singapore, and all along that front British patrols successfully took the offensive at every point where they could engage the enemy.

All this—establishing that the invader not only had gained no ground but had been pushed back in some areas of the Malayan peninsula—was announced by the British command in a communique which also reported failure for another overnight Japanese air raid on Singapore.

This time, Japanese bombers sought out the Singapore airdrome, but again they were able to cause only minor damage. There was not a single casualty.

Dive Bombers Beaten Off

Japanese dive bombers likewise were hurled into action against British communications, but they, too, were able to work but little harm and one raider was shot down by light machine-gun fire.

While Perak remained relatively quiet, the second Japanese invading force seeking to beat down the eastern side of the peninsula was apparently making no progress. Enemy parties approaching that area from the direction of Trengganu farther into the north were met at once by the imperial defenders.

The Royal Air Force, meantime, again heavily assaulted the advanced Japanese air base of Sungei Patani, pounding it for the second successive night and setting fires in the airdrome.

enemy parties who had approached from the direction of Trengganu.

"Enemy aircraft made some dive-bombing and machine-gun attacks in our rear areas."

Singapore Base Raided

Japanese raiders appeared again at Singapore during the night, causing damage officially described as very slight in a raid upon the naval bastion's air base. The communique said there were no casualties.

"Aircraft of the RAF bombed the airdrome at Sungei Patani (occupied by the Japanese, in the first invasion rushes) last night," the communique reported. "Bombs were seen to fall on the airdrome and fires were started."

Slight Pressure On Perak Front Reported

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 31 (AP)—Fifteen senior officers holding commands in the Australian military forces or administrative posts in Australia will be retired or transferred under a reorganization scheme adopted by the War Cabinet, it was announced today.

JAN 1 1942

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 31—British headquarters said today that "offensive actions have been taken with good results" by British patrols against some of the Japanese invaders of Malaya and that pressure on the Perak front was slight.

British parties accepted the issue of battle wherever the Japanese were encountered, the communique said.

Fighting At Kuantan

"Enemy aircraft made some dive-bombing attacks on our communications, causing little damage. One plane was shot down by our light machine-gun fire.

Singapore Slated As Base For Offensive

JAN 1 1942

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 31—Allied strategy calls for defense of Singapore "with all the means at our disposal" in order that it may become the base for the offensive to be launched in the Pacific area, a British authority said today.

Japanese are in full control of the western Pacific area, he said, and British forces will depend on the United States Navy "until our naval forces are built up to regain control."

Threat To Singapore

A serious threat to Singapore may develop if the Japanese establish strong air forces on the Japanese-occupied island of Penang, off the Malayan west coast, this source declared, and such a force would be able to "exercise a certain amount of control over traffic in the Strait of Malacca."

Reviewing the naval year, this source commented that, "despite heavy fighting and some losses, our naval position, except in the Far East, is much better than might be expected."

He said control of the Atlantic had been established so that operations could be carried out "in the face of attacks by the enemy."

Operations In Mediterranean

In the Mediterranean, he said, there have been limitations, "but, nevertheless, we have been able to carry our operations essential to success" in the war effort.

"In the Far East," he added, "we see what apparently unopposed sea power can do."

He said the task before the Allies was "to destroy or neutralize Japanese sea power" in the combat area as a prelude to launching offensive operations.

Jap Area Raided

London, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Batavia adio said today that Dutch naval forces had carried out a raid on a Japanese settlement near the central provinces of the Netherlands East Indies.

The radio said several launches were destroyed, others were seized and the Japanese were interned, but did not specify when or where the raid was made.

Japs Scatter Bombs Over Indies Sectors

JAN 1 1942

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, N. E. I., Dec. 31—The Netherlands East Indies' urgent need for more fighter planes was stressed anew today as Japanese air raiders killed three persons and wounded nineteen in scattered bombing raids in the provinces.

Supplementing the air assault, said a communique relayed by the Aneta news agency, enemy destroyers shelled the city of Menado, on the island of Celebes, but caused no casualties and only slight damage.

Raiders Termed Slow

The communique ascribed erroneous reports of a Japanese parachute invasion of the island of Sumatra last Sunday to "faulty observations" and unofficial sources said Japanese pilots bailing out of crippled planes were mistaken for aerial invaders.

Observers who witnessed that raid on Medan, on the Sumatran east coast, said the raiders were slow. Aviation experts declared they could not have escaped if the Dutch air force had more fighters at its disposal—a need underscored yesterday by Gen. Hein Ter Porten, the Dutch colonial commander, in an appeal for reinforcements.

"Generally speaking," the communique said, "these scattered Japanese attacks appear to be entirely unsystematic. So far no serious damage has been done anywhere."

The raid probably was on one of scattered small groups of Japanese fishermen who have settled along Dutch Indies coastal areas in the past five to ten years. Most of these settlements were liquidated as soon as the war broke out.

Japanese Shell Celebes; Stage Scattered Raids

Indies Say That Neither Destroyers Nor Planes Caused Serious Damage

JAN 1 1942

BATAVIA, Dec. 31 (AP).—Scattered and unsystematic Japanese air raids on Netherlands East Indies provinces killed three persons and wounded nineteen today, and Japanese destroyers ineffectively shelled Menado, Celebes Island, the Dutch command announced tonight.

At Menado, no serious damage and no casualties were reported. Japanese bombing generally has been without apparent plan, the communique said, and thus far has wrought no serious damage anywhere.

Reports of Sunday that Japanese parachutists had landed near Medan, Dutch Sumatra, across the Malacca Strait from British Malaya, were finally and officially disproved.

It was explained that the original report had been based upon faulty observation; unofficially it was added that Japanese pilots bailing out of crippled planes had been mistaken for invading parachutists.

The Medan raid, said some who had observed it, was carried out by slow-speed Japanese planes, which could have been destroyed had the Dutch air force had more effective fighter strength.

This shortage was stressed by Lieut. Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, the Dutch colonial commander, in appealing for aerial reinforcements.

Launches Destroyed in Raid on Settlements.

London, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Batavia radio said today that Dutch naval forces had carried out a raid on a Japanese settlement near the central provinces of the Netherlands East Indies. The radio said that several launches were destroyed, others were seized and the Japanese were interned, but did not specify when or where the raid was made.

The raid, however, probably was on one of scattered small groups of Japanese fishermen who have settled along Dutch Indies coastal areas in the last five to ten years. Most of these settlements were liquidated as soon as the war broke out.

Mass Raid on Singapore.

Tokio, Dec. 31 (Official B roadcast Recorded by A. P.).—The naval section of Imperial headquarters said today that Britain's Far Eastern military headquarters and other military and naval establishments were damaged severely in a mass raid on Singaport on Monday night. Not until the dawn of Tuesday did Japanese naval flyers cease pounding the British base at the tip of Malaya, a communique declared.

Huge fires were said to have been caused. The communique said that the Seleta and Kran airfields were demolished.

"All planes returned safetly despite heavy enemy antiiaircraft fire," the Japanese reported.

The British had acknowledged four heavy assaults on Monday night, but said that the results were limited to eleven casualties and negligible damage.

Four Killed in Crash Of Australian Plane

JAN 1 1942

Batavia, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Two British women from Singapore and two children were drowned, the Aneta news agency reported today, when an Australian civilian flying boat crashed on taking off from a Netherlands East Indies harbor and sank on Monday. The cause of the accident was unknown, but it was said to have had no connection with the war.

Japs Control Western Pacific; British Report

London, Dec. 31 (AP)—A British authority today declared that the defense of Singapore would be "with al lthe means at our disposal" so it could become the main base for the Allied offensive to be launched in the Pacific.

This informant added that the Japanese were now in full control of the western Pacific are., and that the British thus would depend on the United States navy "until our naval forces are built up to regain control."

AXIS TANKS TRY TO BREAK CIRCLING MOVE

Heavy Fighting Results In Damage To Nazi Vehicles, Cairo Says

JAN 1 1942

RAF Reported Playing Vital Role In Battle Below Bengasi

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 31—British tanks and airplanes hacking away at the remnants of Gen. Erwin Rommel's Libyan army were reported tonight closing in for a New Year's Eve kill of the desert troops pocketed along the Gulf of Sirte at Agedabia.

The British officially announced that the German leader hurled his dwindling tank units and infantry against an enveloping southern British arm in an attempt to prevent encirclement.

"A heavy engagement ensued in which we again inflicted considerable damage on enemy armored fighting vehicles and motor transport," the communique said.

Follows Axis Losses Monday

That action followed Monday's in which the British said the Axis lost forty-two tanks to Britain's fourteen.

The RAF increasingly played a vital role in the bitter fighting eighty miles below Bengasi, raining explosives on Axis positions.

British planes also bombed and machine-gunned effectively Axis motorized convoys along the coastal road to Tripoli far to the west. Whether these Axis troops were in flight westward or represented reinforcements for Rommel was not stated.

But the RAF was particularly active between Tripoli and Zuara, a railhead sixty-five miles west in the direction of the French Tunisian frontier, and between Homs and Mizurata. The latter point is twenty miles east of Tripoli en route to the Agedabia battle zone.

Heavy Attacks On Malta

Some observers interpreted the heavy Axis air attacks on the British island of Malta as evidence of German-Italian determination to smash a pathway across the Mediterranean in an effort to retrieve Rommel's battered army.

But Malta, between Italian Sicily and Tripoli, held fast and continued to send waves of bombers against the Tripolitania coastal road.

The RAF reported the destruction of one German bomber on the Agedabia front, and two others attempting to attack Malta. In all these widespread operations the British said they lost only two aircraft.

Near the Egyptian border an Axis force still held out at Bardia far to the rear of the main British sweep.

British planes and artillery steadily hammered the area, and sank a small vessel in the harbor, the communique said.

Heavy Clash Below Agedabia

Rommel Uses Full Strength of Tank Forces Against British in Libya.

JAN 1 1942

Cairo, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Heavy fighting took place south of Agedabia yesterday and considerable damage was done to the armored forces of German Gen. Erwin Rommel, the British announced today.

Gen. Rommel used the full strength of his tank forces and strong infantry elements in a determined effort to prevent a British sweep around his southern flank, today's communique said. A heavy engagement resulted. Many of the German tanks were smashed and much motor transport was shot up.

In the same general area the day before, when the British claimed to have destroyed twenty-two German tanks and crippled twenty others, British losses amounted to fourteen tanks, the communique said. The Germans and Italians had claimed the destruction of seventy-four British tanks on that day and the previous one.

British artillery shelled Bardia in the frontier area and sank a small vessel in the harbor, the communique added.

While British tanks and infantry continued their pressure on Gen. Rommel's flanks along the Gulf of Sirte, the R. A. F. carried out numerous sweeps over his supply lines, bombing and gunning all motor transport that came in sight. Many fires were reported set among these vehicles.

The air force also joined with the artillery in attacks on Bardia and bombed points of resistance in that Axis-held coastal town just inside the Libyan border.

The British continued to bomb roads around Tripoli, particularly between Tripoli and Zuara, a railhead sixty-five miles to the west, and between Homs and Mizurata. Homs is sixty miles east of Tripoli, and Misurata 120 miles east of Tripoli. Zuara itself was bombed.

Claims Called Exaggerated.

London, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Military commentators said today that Axis claims that seventy-four armored units had been destroyed near Agedabia were grossly exaggerated.

It was conceded, however, that German Gen. Erwin Rommel. despite heavy losses in tanks in previous engagements, "seems to be able to pull more out of his sleeve."

difficulties in manning U-boats and adequate training of their crews."

Merchant shipping losses early in 1941 were "on a scale which caused anxiety," the review conceded.

"In the last few months, however, they have been reduced to an extent which enables the future to be regarded with confidence provided our measures for the protection of seaborne trade continue to increase in power and effectiveness as they have done during the last twelve months," it declared.

The 1941 balance in the Atlantic, it said, was heavily in Britain's favor but permitted "no relaxation either of precautions at sea or of work in shipyards throughout the British Empire and the United States."

Despite heavy initial losses, the extension of the war to the Far East "will have a vital effect on the war at sea in the Atlantic as well as in the Pacific," the summary said.

Summary Of Operations For Year Also Reports Sinking Of British Ships By Air Attack Receding

JAN 1 1942

[By the Associated Press]

London, Thursday, Jan. 1—Germany's submarine fleet has suffered such losses that the Nazi high command apparently is finding difficulty getting and training new crews, the Ministry of Information declared today.

It is said the situation at sea had changed from one of anxiety to one of confidence, as regards both German air and sea assaults on British merchant shipping.

Although no exact dates or figures were divulged, a year-end summary said Britain's shipping losses from air attacks had been cut in recent months to only eight per cent. of those early in the year.

"A very heavy loss has been inflicted on the enemy's U-boat fleet," it added, "and from time to time evidence becomes available to show that the German high command is faced with

Britain Creates 2 New Barons And 2 Baronets

George VI's New Year's Honors List Rewards Leaders in Fighting Arms

JAN 1 1942

LONDON, Jan. 1 (Thursday) (AP).—Commanders in all three British fighting branches and leaders in the empire's civilian war effort were rewarded by King George VI today in a New Year's honors list which created two new barons, two baronets and twenty-eight knights.

Sir Auckland Campbell Geddes British Ambassador to the United States from 1920 to 1924, and Lord Justice Sir Albert Charles Clauson recently Lord Justice of Appeal were the two elevated to the peerage.

Sir Auckland, sixty-two years old, is a former professor of anatomy who becomes Civil Defense Commissioner for the northwest region today. During the World War he was one of Prime Minister David Lloyd George's "discoveries" and held several war-time posts.

The two new baronets are Sir Charles Craven, Controller General of the Ministry of Aircraft Production and managing director of Vickers-Armstrongs, Ltd., and Sir Ralph Lewis Wedgwood, who, as chairman of the Railway Executive Committee, was until recently Great Britain's war-time rail chief. He is a younger brother of Lord Wedgwood, newly created Labor peer.

Field Marshal General Sir John G. Dill, who was chief of the Imperial General Staff until Christmas and is now Governor of Bombay, received the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath.

Other war leaders honored, all of them made Knights Commander of the Bath, included Vice-Admiral Ralph Leatham, former commander in chief in the East Indies; Major General Bernard Paget, chief of the home forces; General Sir Thomas Blamey, an Australian, deputy commander in the Middle East, and Air Marshal Arthur William Tedder, commander in chief of the Royal Air Force in the Middle East.

Major General Bernard C. Freyberg, commander of the New Zealand forces, was made a Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire.

Other honors were accorded to Sir Edwin Landseer Lutyens, president of the Royal Academy and designer of the Cenotaph, the Order of Merit; Sir Archibald John Kerr Clark Kerr, British Ambassador to China, the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George; Sir Albert Henry Self, director general of the British Air Commission in Washington, Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George; Piers Legh, equerry to former King Edward VIII and to King George VI, Knight Commander of the Victorian Order, and Samuel Agar Salvage, British resident of New York, Knight Commander of the British Empire.

1,200 Americans Are Trapped by Fall of Hongkong

JAN 1 1942

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. (AP)—Americans remaining in Japanese occupied Hongkong are unharmed and are being housed in the Hongkong and Shanghai bank building, the state department was informed today.

BY SPENCER MOOSA

CHUNGKING, Dec. 29. (Delayed) (Wide World)—About 1,200 United States nationals were trapped in Hongkong by Japan's conquest of that British crown colony.

But after the Japanese attack on the colony began, more than 500 Chinese slipped out in fishing boats or junks and landed safely on the coast in Chinese-occupied territory.

They made their escape in the dark, as British and Japanese guns exchanged fire, reaching safety thru the skill of nerveless Chinese boatmen familiar with every inlet and village on the coast. Even under machine gun fire, when their passengers crouched in fear, the boatmen paddled with unruffled calmness, reports reaching here said.

However, scores upon scores of other Chinese who tried to escape by the same means were killed by gunfire or drowned when their craft sank.

Embassy and consular officials, business men and foreign correspondents were among the American nationals trapped including United States Consul General Addison Southard, whose hillside home was completely demolished by Japanese gunfire, and Charles S. Reid of Sandusky, O., former consul at Hanoi, who was on his way to Chungking to become second secretary of the United States embassy.

OTHERS CAUGHT

Among others were Maj. Richard A. Grussendorf, United States military attache for air who hails from St. Louis, Mo., and Maj. Reynolds Condon, assistant military attache who comes from Berkeley, Calif.

Aboard what proved the last regular passenger plane from Chungking to Honolulu was William Hunt, prominent America Far Eastern business man who was on his way back to the United States after a brief trip to China's war time capital. Hunt arrived in Hongkong Dec. 6 and was there waiting to catch a clipper when the Japanese attacked the colony two days later.

Reports of the battle for the colony reaching here said an American woman, Florence Webb, was killed by shell splinters in the second or third day of hostilities and that William Kailey of Brooklyn on Dec. 25 had been missing several days.

Among Britons caught in Hongkong was the British consul general in Chungking, A. J. Martin, who had flown to the colony a few weeks earlier to enter a hospital. His wife, an American, accompanied him there.

BELGIAN TRAPPED

Most prominent diplomat trapped in Hongkong was Baron Jules Guillaume, Belgian ambassador to China and dean of the diplomatic corps in Chungking, who had gone there with his wife on their way to Peiping to fetch their children. Lack of shipping facilities prevented them from continuing their journey and they were waiting in Hongkong for a Belgian official to bring their children there.

Among the many Chinese notables trapped in Hongkong were Dr. W. W. Yen, sometime ambassador at Washington, and Eugene Chen, one time foreign minister.

American commercial pilots, who imperiled their lives to go to the rescue, removed about 250 Chinese and 25 Americans in the first two nights of hostilities. Prominent among them were two of the Soong sisters, Mme. Sun Yat-Sen, widow of the founder of the Chinese republic, and Mme. H. H. Kung, wife of China's minister of finance.

Others rescued by air included K. P. Chen, celebrated Chinese banker who heads the Chinese currency stabilization board and Manuel Fox, American member of the board.

JAN 1 1942

MOVIE STAR ESCAPES

Included among those who escaped in fishing boats were King Yen, China's most popular movie star and his equally popular actress wife, Wang Jen Mei. Mei Lang Fang, most famous of Chinese actors, flew to Chungking only a few days before the Japanese attack on Hongkong. Most of the Americans rescued by air belonged to Pan-American Airways and the China National Aviation corporation operated jointly by PAA and the Chinese government.

Foreign correspondents trapped in Hongkong included Vaughn F. Meisling of The Associated Press who arrived in the colony in April.

During the battle for Hongkong, United States Consul General Southard and his staff, including several women, lived in the United States consular office in the Hongkong-Shanghai bank building which overlooks Hongkong harbor and Kowloon. The building itself, perhaps the most modern one in the Far East, was reported badly damaged but the consular staff survived unscathed.

Living in Hongkong at the time of the attack were several score Britons and a sprinkling of Americans who had fled there when Shanghai was plunged into the Sino-Japanese war in August, 1937.

Of the 1,200 American citizens in Hongkong, 400 were estimated to be of Occidental parentage, 600 of Chinese and 200 of Filipino origin. A year ago there were about 2,000 American nationals there but some 800 had heeded the advice of the state department to leave.

Chinese Repulse Eight Jap Attacks

JAN 1 1942

Chungking, Dec. 31 (AP)—Eight Japanese attempts to cross the Milo river in their advance toward Changsha, in northern Hunan province, have been repulsed in fierce fighting raging all along the front, a Chinese communique said today.

The Chinese said they were still holding their positions south of the river and that the north bank was strewn with Japanese dead.

In West Kiangsi, the province just east of Hunan, the Chinese were reported increasing the intensity of their counter-attacks in the area of Kaoan, about thirty-five miles southwest of Nanchang.

In far northwestern Suiyuan province the Chinese reported the recapture on December 26 of a key point near Paotow and repulse of the Japanese west of that center.

Set for Big Air Onslaught

LONDON, Jan. 1 (Thursday) (AP).—The British Air Ministry said today the way had been paved for a great bombing onslaught upon Axis territory during 1942. It said the Royal Air Force had "established air supremacy deep into occupied territory."

Reviewing R. A. F. activities in 1941, the Ministry said British bombers had disorganized shipping along occupied territory coasts—particularly Nazi supply lines to Russia—carried out nearly 200 attacks on German submarines, seriously interrupted Germany's shipbuilding program and caused "immense damage" to the German cities of Kiel, Aachen and Muenster.

It noted that unfavorable weather conditions had prevented the bomber command from making as many attacks as during the previous year, but added that there had been a "substantial" increase in tonnage of bombs dropped on the Reich in 1941.

"Our main striking force against Germany has been substantially increased in strength," the review said. "Reinforcements comprised not only increased numbers of aircraft but bigger bombers and bigger bombs."

American Planes Praised

The review reported "outstanding performances" by American planes, mentioning in particular such aircraft as Havocs, Catalinas, Hudsons, Liberators, Tomahawks and Marylands. It said, however, that the brunt of the bombing had been carried out by British Whitleys, Hampdens, Blenheims, Wellingtons, Stirlings and Halifaxes, although American Flying Fortresses were "occasionally employed."

"The outstanding feature of operations the past year," the report stated, "has been development of daylight offensives . . . which have driven deeper into Germany itself than any attack by day on this country during the Battle of Britain. These attacks kept large numbers of German air fighters away from the Russian front."

Imprisonment of the Nazi battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the cruiser Prinz Eugen at the French port of Brest was cited as one outstanding R. A. F. feat.

In addition, raids on German coastal cities kept "submarines and warships still on slips which by German reckoning should have been at sea long ago," the Ministry added.

British Again Attack Shipping at La Pallice

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—British coastal command bombers attacked shipping at La Pallice, in German-occupied France, for the second night in a row last night, the Air Ministry said today, and "bombs were seen to burst on the mole."

"A tanker was bombed and is believed to have been hit," the Ministry said. "None of our aircraft is missing."

Calls Nazi Retreat Disastrous

SKEGNESS, England, Dec. 31 (AP).—Field Marshal Sir Archibald Montgomery-Massingberd, former chief of the Imperial General Staff, predicted today that Adolf Hitler's retreat from Moscow would be as disastrous in loss of manpower, proportionately, as that of Napoleon.

Berlin, Dec. 31 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—R. A. F. attacks on German-occupied territory cost the British nine planes yesterday, several of them four-engined bombers, the Berlin radio claimed today. German planes were said to have made several raids against the British Isles.

DARLAN UNCERTAIN

Admiral Says French Face Unpredictable Year.

JAN 1 1942

Vichy, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Vice-Premier Darlan told the French Empire in a New Year's Eve broadcast tonight that the new year confronts it with uncertainty and that its watchword must be readiness.

"At the start of the new year, still unaware of the events we shall have to face," Admiral Darlan said, "I must remind the armies of the land, sea and air about setting an aim for themselves of serving the country no matter what happens."

Col. Sergio Pinelli.

Berne, Switzerland, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—A DNB dispatch from Rome reported today the death of Col. Sergio Pinelli, 55 years old, chief of Italian Army propaganda. Col. Pinelli edited the army publication, Le Forze Armate, six years before assuming the propaganda post this year.

JAPS MAY DRINK TO NEW YEAR

Berlin, Dec. 31 (Official broadcast recorded by A. P.).—Japanese authorities temporarily lifted war-time restrictions, including the curtailment of alcoholic beverages, to enable the nation to celebrate New Year's Day in traditional style, German dispatches from Tokio said today.

FIGHT RAGES IN CHINA

Northern Hunan Front Is Engaged in Battle.

Chungking, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Fierce fighting rages along the entire northern Hunan province front, where the Japanese are driving toward Changsha, a Chinese communique said today. Chinese forces, the announcement said, are holding positions firmly on the south bank of the Milo River.

King Michael Praises Army

He and Antonescu Laud Rumanians' Fight in Russia, See Victory

ROME, Dec. 31 (Official broadcast recorded by AP).—Stefani, in dispatches from Bucharest, reported today that King Michael and Chief of State Marshal Ion Antonescu of Rumania had issued orders of the day to the army praising it for its fight in Russia and expressing assurance of victory.

Antonescu also addressed a New Year's message to the nation, Stefani said, in which he declared 1942 would be a year of hard fighting. "History will judge our war from 1940 and 1941 on not only as a struggle for our rights and justice," he said, "but as a sacrifice for the Christian civilization of Europe."

The young King said the courage of Rumanian soldiers had restored Bucovina and Bessarabia to the mother country, but both he and Antonescu said the Rumanians still had to destroy a foe who, Antonescu said, had been "beaten but not destroyed."

AXIS REPORTED TURNING GREECE INTO ARMS BASE

Observer Tells of Airports Near Turkey and Glider Mobilization.

JAN 1 1942

U-BOAT FLEET IS ASSEMBLED

Hunger in Athens Said to Be So Great Hundreds of Children Die Daily in Streets.

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 30 (Delayed) (A. P.).—An observer arriving from Greece has given the Allied authorities here information of extensive Axis military activity in Greece and has described the tragic extent to which German-Italian plundering has brought on famine in that conquered land.

30.24 — 13863

The Germans, he stated, are building new airports in Greece and the Greek islands close to Turkey, are practicing air invasion tactics similar to those used against Crete, and are building up a submarine force in the Aegean Sea. New air bases have been constructed on the occupied Greek islands of Mytilene, Chios and Samos—all less than fifteen minutes flying time from the Turkish shore and the Dardanelles.

Other new airfields outfitted with steel-re-enforced concrete runways surround Athens, this observer stated. He declared he had seen the Germans practicing with gliders attached to power planes, each glider "capable of carrying a truck, a small tank or twenty troops."

Submarines Ready for Aegean.

The German commandant at Athens, he went on, had requisitioned 3,000 rooms for air personnel "expected from Russia." He said he had learned that the Axis had put together a number of prefabricated submarines for use in the Aegean and possibly beyond.

Warehouses in the Athens area, he went on, were "stuffed with oversize bombs running between 1,250 and 2,500 pounds."

There has been another report here that large numbers of German troops and marines are in Grecian Thrace just west of the Turkish border. In this area, thus went the same account, French artillery taken from the Maginot Line was seen, but Greek patriot bands are fighting constantly against German convoys in western Thrace and many never reach their destination.

From Athens, it is reported that Axis espionage bureaus are sending spies into Turkey, Iran, Syria and Egypt under the master Italian spy, Major Emile Bassignano.

Greece's Suffering Described.

This same report described purported first-hand observation of the Greeks' suffering from famine caused by Axis seizures of the conquered country's food.

The only food available was said to be that supplied at fabulous prices by theft from Axis canteens. Very few benefit from this illicit trade, however, because of the high prices demanded even for the simplest food and the unwillingness of the Greeks to deal with the enemy.

Hundreds of bodies, mostly of children, are picked up on the streets of Athens every day, the report said, picturing a horde of children clawing in garbage cans for bits of fruit and potato peelings.

Three secret Greek newspapers were said to circulate from hand to hand in the occupied Hellenic capital, spreading principally hopeful news selected from foreign broadcasts.

Finns Need 4 Children Per Family, Nation Told

JAN 1 1942

By the Associated Press.

HELSINKI, Dec. 31.—Every family in Finland must produce at least four children to maintain the country's present population level because of the serious loss of life in two wars, the National Population League reported yesterday.

Six children per family would be necessary to guarantee a growth in the population, according to the league, which is preparing a program aimed at increasing the birth rate.

The report, declaring 40 per cent of all Finns of marriage age are single, proposed a bachelor tax, an increase in government bounties to large families and loans to newlyweds.

Papen May Be Recalled

ISTANBUL, Dec. 30 (Delayed), (AP).—A usually reliable Ankara diplomatic source said today that German Ambassador Franz von Papen would leave Turkey shortly to confer with Fuehrer Adolf Hitler and German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop in Berlin. Another source said Papen was being recalled permanently to try to mollify German Catholics, among whom, he said, there has been recent evidence of dissatisfaction.

INDIA TO RATION GAS

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 31. (AP)—Drastic cuts in gasoline rations were announced today effective Jan. 1. A communique said that supplies from Burma, one of India's main supply centers, are now liable to interruption, and "defense of India's eastern outposts must entail increased demands" by the fighting services.

EGYPTIAN MINISTER QUITS

Finance Chief Resigns And Cabinet Reshuffle Is Likely

Cairo, Dec. 31 (AP)—Finance Minister Abdel Hamid Badawy Pasha resigned today and an Egyptian Cabinet reshuffle appeared likely over import difficulties arising from the war in the Pacific.

Premier Hussein Sirry Pasha was expected to take over the Supply Ministry now headed by Hemed Guda Bey.

HEAD OF BRAZIL SUPPORTS U. S.

JAN 1 1942

Vargas Proclaims Solidarity of Hemisphere Ties.

(Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—President Getulio Vargas, speaking to the heads of Brazil's armed forces today, re-affirmed the solidarity of his Government with the United States in the world crisis. He declared that in the time of danger he was "ready to fight, win and die" for Brazil.

Addressing a luncheon given to him by the armed forces, the President said that his policy "represents the free decision of the people, whose sovereign will the Government faithfully interprets."

Nazi Envoy Quits Argentina.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Germany's Ambassador to Argentina, Baron Edmund von Thermann, appeared today finally to have been eased from his position following insistent congressional demands that he be ousted. A Berlin radio announcement heard here late yesterday said that Baron Thermann had been called home for consultation. The announcement followed closely a summons to Argentina's Ambassador in Berlin, Ricardo Olivera, to return home.

The withdrawal of the two envoys coincided with an announcement by Acting President Ramon Castillo that the Argentine delegation to a Pan-American conference in Rio de Janeiro next month had been instructed to ignore regional interests and to work for hemisphere solidarity. Foreign observers expressed the belief that the recall of Senior Olivera provided Germany with a face-saving formula for removing Baron von Thermann, who has been accused widely of abusing his diplomatic privileges in Argentina by allegedly engaging in subversive activities.

Jap Effort To Attack Panama Canal Sure, Admiral Sadler Says

Balboa, Canal Zone, Dec. 31 (AP)—Rear Admiral Frank H. Sadler, commandant of the Fifteenth Naval District, declared today that "for the Japanese not to attack the Panama Canal is, to my mind, inconceivable."

He said the Japanese apparently had spent a long time preparing the Pearl Harbor attack of December 7 and that it was known they had been planning an attack on the Canal also for a long time.

Precautions on the Atlantic side are just as necessary as on the Pacific, he declared.

U. S. Plane Reported Crashed in Mexico

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 31.—The Defense Ministry reported last night a two-motored United States Army plane had crashed and burned on Tiburon Island in the Gulf of California.

The military commandant of the zone, who received reports of the crash from five or six persons, sent out a search and rescue party.

Mexicans Form New Party

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 31 (AP).—A new political party was organized today as the "National Autarchists" by a group of young revolutionaries who announced they would campaign for Congress on a platform calling for 2,000 airplanes and 400 submarines for defense, and official recognition of Roman Catholicism as the religion of Mexico.

Venezuela Severs Relations With Axis

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Venezuela severed diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy and Japan today.

PRIME MINISTER PREDICTS BLOW AT JAPANESE

Tells Canadian Press Conference Enemy Has "Something Coming"

Praises American Fighting In Defense Of Philippines

JAN 1 1942

[By the Associated Press]

Ottawa, Dec. 31—Winston Churchill predicted with supreme surety today that the British and their Allies will hold Singapore, the naval base so essential to major operations of Allied warships in the Far East.

Beneath a green and white striped canopy in the "tent room" of Canada's Government House, the British Prime Minister puffing a six-inch cigar sent to him by President Batista of Cuba, spoke with glowing confidence to a long press conference attended by some 200 British Empire and American newspapermen.

He talked with feeling of the courageous stand of the Philippine army and predicted the Japanese, before the fight ended, would get some surprises.

"Something Coming To Them"

Asked if he could say when the Allies would bomb the Japanese, he replied more grimly that he could not say when but "they have something coming to them one of these days."

Meticulously, Churchill called them "the Japanese," explaining with an impish smile: "I don't like to call them Japs. It's a bit too familiar."

A London correspondent asked him: "Do you think we will hold Singapore?"

Has No Hesitation.

Churchill hesitated not a moment. "I sure do!" he said.

Churchill's questioners took the Prime Minister figuratively around the world, and this was the result:

Did he think Italy would be soon knocked out of the war?

"Unfortunately, the organ grinder seems to have too firm a hold on the monkey's collar."

Disposes Of Peace Feelers

Have the Allies received any peace feelers recently?

"The Axis must be hard pressed for materials of all kinds, and cannot afford to waste the ink and paper."

Will Hitler march into Spain?

"I really do not know; he has not told me. If you happen to hear, please tell me."

Had the Prime Minister made any New Year's resolutions?

Only one: "To go on doing my best to keep things going in the right direction.'

To Show Strategy In Deeds

What about the decision on the grand strategy for the future conduct of the war, to be made in conference with President Roosevelt?

He hoped they would be expressed "in deeds, and not in words."

How goes the battle of the Atlantic?

"In February, we were concerned over the high rate of losses for our ships, but now we have managed so as to keep the U-boats farther out, break their link with Nazi planes, arm our merchantmen and—allowing for new British building—we have reduced our losses to one fifth the former rate. We now feel confident that we can carry on our convoys until the great flow of ships begins coming from the United States. There's a lot of good stuff on the way, but we want more.

No Talk Of London Trip

Is President Roosevelt going to London?

The President has not talked to him about it, Mr. Churchill said, but should he go, "he will get a royal welcome."

Of other fronts and allies Churchill said:

North Africa: "I am very confident of the result in Libya, despite supplies difficulties."

Mediterranean: "I have no doubt that we shall hold Malta."

Praises Russian Offensive

Russia: "The Russians are continuing their magnificent offensive on the Eastern front and, while there will be a German front against them, no one knows just where it will be. The Russians have already inflicted such enormous losses on the Germans that it cannot help but gravely damage German arms."

China: The other Allies will work hand-in-glove with "that grand man and statesman, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek."

Nazi-occupied countries: "More than ninety per cent. of the people in conquered countries are with us. All we ask is that they not let hope die in their hearts and have no truck with the invader."

Speaks Of Serbia With Pride

He spoke with especial pride of the fight of the "brave mountain people" of Serbia, despite the Nazis' "frightful atrocities."

The Prime Minister declined to deal with the controversial question of Canadian conscripttion, and indicated there were too many difficulties involved in the formation of an empire war Cabinet as such.

He said he was sure that there would be a satisfactory solution of the Free French seizure of the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon which, he said, was done without the assent of Britain, the United States or Canada.

Sealskin Hat Presented

Just before the conference began Canadian newspapermen presented the Prime Minister with a sleek sealskin "wedge hat." Immensely pleased, Mr. Churchill, whose passion for odd hats long has amazed his homeland, rubbed the soft fur across his cheek and remarked with a grin:

"I must be on guard. I suppose some people think I'm a bit hotheaded. This fits nicely, with just a little allowance for any swelling that may take place."

JAN 1 1942

Then he wore the hat out to inspect a company of flying cadets, some of them Americans, at the Uplands air training center. He was accompanied by Canadian Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie Klng and Wing Commander William MacBrien, young commander of the training station.

Hat Presented to Churchill

OTTAWA, Dec. 31 (AP).—Just before his press conference began today, Canadian newspaper men presented the Prime Minister with a sleek sealskin "wedge hat."

Immensely pleased, Mr. Churchill, whose passion for odd hats long has amazed his homeland, rubbed the soft fur across his cheek and remarked with a grin: "I must be on guard . . . because some people think I'm a bit hot-headed. This fits nicely, with just a little allowance for any swelling that may take place."

Text of Churchill's Address in Ottawa

Prime Minister in Speech to Canadian Parliament Promises Assault on the Homelands of Enemy

JAN 1 1942

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Dec. 30.—The text of Prime Minister Churchill's address today follows:

Mr. Speaker, members of the Senate and members of the House of Commons:

It gives me the feeling of pride and encouragement that I find myself here in the House of Commons of Canada invited to address the Parliament of the senior Dominion of the crown.

I am very glad to see again my own friend, Mr. MacKenzie King, for 15 out of 20 years your Prime Minister, and I thank him for the all too complimentary terms in which he has referred to myself.

I bring you, Mr. Speaker, the assurance of good will and affection from every one in the motherland. We are most grateful for all you have done in the common cause and we know that you are resolved to do whatever more is possible as the need arises and as opportunity serves.

Canada, sir, occupies a unique position in the British Empire because of its unbreakable ties with Britain and its ever-growing friendship and intimate association with the United States.

Canada is a potent magnet drawing together those in the New World and in the Old and fortunes are now united in a deadly struggle for life and honor against the common foe.

Canada's Contribution.

The contribution of Canada to the imperial war effort in troops, in ships, in aircraft, in food and in finance has been magnificent. The Canadian Army now stationed in England has chafed not to have been in contact with the enemy. But I am here to tell you that it has stood and still stands in the key position to strike at the invader should he land upon our shores.

In a few months, when the invasion season returns, the Canadian Army may be engaged in one of the most frightful battles the world has ever seen. On the other hand, their presence may help to deter the enemy from attempting to fight such a battle on British soil.

Although, sir, the long routine of training and preparation is undoubtedly trying to men who left prosperous farms and businesses or other responsible civil work, inspired by an eager and ardent desire to fight the enemy, although this is trying to high-mettle temperaments, the value of the service rendered is unquestionable, and the peculiar kind of self-sacrifice involved will, I am sure, be cheerfully or at best patiently endured.

Sir, the Canadian government has imposed no limitations upon the use of the Canadian Army, whether upon the continent of Europe or elsewhere; and I think it extremely unlikely that this war will end without the Canadian Army coming to close quarters with the Germans as their fathers did at Ypres, on the Somme, or on the Vimy Ridge.

Already at Hong Kong, that beautiful colony which the industry and mercantile enterprise of Britain had raised from a desert isle and made the greatest port of shipping in the whole world; at Hong Kong, that colony wrested from us for a time, until we reached the peace table by overwhelming the power of the home forces of Japan to which it lay in proximity; at Hong Kong, Canadian soldiers of the Royal Rifles of Canada and the Winnipeg Grenadiers and those brave officers whose loss we mourn have played a valuable part in gaining precious days and have crowned with honor, with military honor, the reputation of their native land.

Traning Scheme for Pilots.

Another major contribution made by Canada to the imperial war effort is the wonderful and gigantic empire training scheme for pilots for the royal and imperial air forces. This has now been, as you know well, in full career or nearly two years under conditions free from all interference by the enemy.

The daring youth of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, together with many thousands from the homeland, are perfecting their training, under the best conditions. And we have been assisted on a large scale by the United States, many of whose training facilities have been placed at our disposal.

This scheme will provide us in 1942 and 1943 with the highest class of trained pilots, observers and air gunners in the numbers necessary to man the enormous flow of aircraft which the factories of Britain, of the empire, and of the United States are and will be producing.

I could, sir, I could speak also on the naval production of corvettes and, above all, of merchant ships which is proceeding on a scale almost equal to the building of the United Kingdom, all of which Canada has set on foot.

I can speak of many other activities, of tanks, of the special forms of modern high-velocity cannon; of the great supplies of raw materials and many many other elements essential to our war effort on which your labors are ceaselessly and tirelessly engaged.

But I must not let my address to you become a catalog. Now I turn to less technical fields of thought. Sir, we did not make this war, we did not seek it, we did all we could to avoid it, we did too much to avoid it.

We went so far in trying to avoid it as to be almost destroyed by it when it broke upon us. But that dangerous corner has been turned and in every month and every year that passes we shall confront the evil-doers with weapons as plentiful, as sharp and as destructive as those with which they have sought to establish their hateful domination.

Tough and Hardy Lot.

Now I should like to point out to you, Mr. Speaker, that we have not at any time asked for any mitigation in the fury or malice of the enemy. The peoples of the British Empire may love peace—they do not seek the lands or wealth of any country. But they are a tough and hardy lot who have not journeyed all the way across the centuries, across the oceans, across the mountains, across the prairies, because we are made of sugar candy.

Look at the Londoners, the cockneys. Look how they stood up so grim and gay with their cry, "We can take it," and their wartime mood, "What's good enough for anybody is good enough for us."

We've not asked that the rules of the game should be modified. We shall never descend to the German and Japanese level, but if anybody likes to play rough we can play rough, too.

Hitler and his Nazi gang have sown the wind—let them reap the whirlwind. Neither the length of the struggle, nor any form of severity which it may assume, will make us weary or will make us quit.

I've been all this week with the President of the United States, that great man whom destiny has marked for this climax of human fortune. We've been concerting the united pacts and resolves of more than 30 states and nations to fight on in unity together, and in fidelity, one with another, without any thought except the total and final extirpation of the Hitler tyranny, of the Japanese frenzy and the Mussolini flop.

There will be no halting or half measures. There will be no compromise or parley. These gangs of bandits have sought to darken the light of the world, have sought to stand between the common people of all the lands, and thence march forward into their inheritance. They shall themselves be cast into the pits of death and shame and only when the earth has been cleansed and purged of their crime and of their villainy will we turn from the task which they have forced upon us—the task which we were reluctant to undertake, but which we shall now most faithfully and punctiliously discharge.

Power of Enemy.

Mr. Speaker, this is no time, according to my sense of proportion, this is no time to speak of the hopes of the future, or of the broader world which lies beyond our struggles and our victory. We have to win that world for our children. We have to win it by our sacrifices. We have not won it yet. The crisis is upon us. The power of the enemy is immense.

If we were in any way to underrate the strength, the resources, or the ruthlessness, the savagery of that enemy, we should jeopardize not only our lives, for they will be offered freely, but the cause of human freedom and progress to which we have vowed ourselves and all we have.

We cannot, sir, for a moment, afford to relax. On the contrary, we must drive ourselves forward with unrelenting zeal. In this strange, terrible world war there is a place for every one—man and woman, old and young, hale and halt, service in a thousand forms is open.

There is no room now for the dilettante, for the weakling, for the shirker or the sluggard. The mine, the factory, the dockyard, the salt sea waves, the fields to till, the home, the hospital, the chair of the scientist, the pulpit of the preacher—from the highest to the humblest task, all are of equal honor, all have their part to play.

The enemies ranged against us; massed and combined against us, have asked for total war. Let us make sure they get it.

The grand old minstrel, Harry Lauder—Sir Harry Lauder, in fact—and no honor was better deserved—had a song in the last war which began

JAN 1 1942

"If we will look back to the history of the past, we can just tell where we are."

Entered War Unprepared.

Let us then look back. Sir, we plunged into this war, all unprepared, because we had pledged our word to stand by the side of Poland, which Hitler had feloniously invaded and in spite of their gallant resistance had soon struck down.

There followed that astonishing seven months, which was called on this side of the Atlantic, the "phoney war."

Suddenly, the explosion of pent-up German strength and preparation burst upon Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium. All these absolutely blameless neutrals, to most of whom Germany up to the last moment was giving every kind of guarantee and assurance, were overrun and trampled on. The hideous massacre of Rotterdam where 30,000 people perished showed the ferocious barbarism in which the German air force revels when entering Warsaw, and later, in Belgrade, it was able to bomb practically undefended cities.

On top of all this, came the great French catastrophe. The French Army collapsed and the French nation was dashed into what events hence have proved so far irretrievable confusion.

The French government had at their own suggestion solemnly bound themselves with us not to make a separate peace. It was their duty and it was also their interest to go to North Africa, where they would have been at the head of the French Empire. In Africa, with our aid, they would have had overwhelming sea power; they would have had the recognition of the United States and the use of all the gold they have lodged beyond the seas.

Behaviour of the Dutch.

If they had done this, Italy might have been driven out of the war before the end of 1940 and France would have held her place as a nation in the councils of the Allies and at the conference table of the victors.

But their generals misled them. When I warned them that Britain would fight on alone—whatever they did—their generals told their Prime Minister and his divided cabinet "in three weeks England will have her neck wrung like a chicken."

Some chicken!

Some neck!

What a contrast, sir, has been the behaviour of the valiant, stouthearted Dutch who still stand forth as a strong, living partner in the struggle. Their venerated Queen and government are in England. Their princess and her children have found asylum and protection here in your midst.

But the Dutch nation are defending their empire with dogged courage and tenacity by land and sea and in the air. Their submarines are inflicting a heavy daily toll upon the Japanese robbers who have come across the seas to steal the wealth of the East Indies and ravage and exploit its fertility and its civilization.

The British Empire and the United States are going to the aid of the Dutch. We are going to fight out this new war against Japan together; we have suffered together and we shall conquer together.

But the men of Bordeaux, the men of Vichy, they would do nothing like this. They lay prostrate at the foot of the conqueror. They fawned upon him. What have they got out of it? The fragment of France which was left to them is just as powerless, just as hungry as, and even more miserable, because more divided, than the occupied regions themselves.

Hitler plays from day to day a cat and mouse game with these tormented men. One day he will charge them a little less for holding their countrymen down. Another day he will let out a few thousand broken prisoners of war from the million and a half or million and three quarters he has collected. Or again, he will shoot a hundred French hostages to give them a taste of the lash.

JAN 1 1942

Warning to Vichy.

And on these blows and favors, the Vichy government has been content to live from day to day, but even this will not go on indefinitely. At any moment, it may suit Hitler's plans to brush them away. Their only guarantee is Hitler's good faith which, as everyone knows, biteth like the adder and stingeth like the asp.

Some Frenchmen there were who would not bow their knees and who like their Gen. De Gaulle have continued to fight at the side of the Allies. They have been condemned to death by the men of Vichy but their names will be held and are being held in increasing respect by nine Frenchmen out of every 10 throughout the once happy, smiling land of France.

But now, sir, strong forces are at hand; the tide has turned against the Hun. Britain, which the men of Bordeaux thought and then hoped would soon be finished; Britain, with her empire around her, carried the weight of the war alone for a whole long year through the darkest part of the valley.

She is growing stronger every day. You can feel it. You can see it here in Canada. Any one who has the slightest knowledge of our affairs is aware that very soon we shall be superior in every form of equipment, to those who have taken us at the disadvantage of being but half armed. The Russian armies, under their warrior leader, Joseph Stalin, are waging furious war with increasing success along a thousand mile front of their invaded ocuntry.

Gen. Auchinleck at the head of a British South African, New Zealand and Indian Army, is striking down and mopping up the German and Italian forces who had attempted the invasion of Egypt. Not only, sir, are they being mopped up in the desert, but great numbers of them have been drowned on the way there by the British submarines and the Royal Air Force, in which Australian squadrons play their part.

Battle Around Agedabia.

As I speak this afternoon, an important battle is being fought around Agedabia. We must not attempt to prophesy its results, but I have good confidence. Sir, all this fighting in Libya proves that when our men have equal weapons in their hands and proper support from the air, they are more than a match for the Nazi jordan.

JAN 1 1942

In Libya as in Russia, events of great importance and of most hopeful import have taken place, but, greatest of all, the mighty Republic of the United States has entered the conflict and entered it in a manner which shows that for her there can be no withdrawal except by death or victory.

(At this point Mr. Churchill lapsed briefly into French, addressing himself to the French-speaking sector of the Dominion and pledging Britain's help for "the resurrection of the French nation!")

Now, sir, that the whole of the North American Continent is becoming one gigantic arsenal and armed camp; now that the immense reserve power of Russia is gradually becoming manifest; now that the long-suffering, unconquerable China sees help approaching; now that the outraged and subjugated nations can see daylight at the end of the tunnel, it is permissible to take a broad forward view of the war.

Sir, we may observe three main periods or phases in the struggle that lies before us. First, there is the period of consolidation, of combination and of final preparation. In this period, which will certainly be marked by much heavy fighting, we shall still be gathering our strength, resisting the assaults of the enemy, and acquiring the necessary overwhelming air superiority, and shipping tonnage to give our armies the power to traverse, in whatever numbers may be necessary, the seas and oceans which, except in the case of Russia, separate us all from our foes.

30.24 — 13865

30.24 — 13865

Phase of Liberation.

It is only when the vast shipbuilding program, on which the United States has already made so much progress and which you are powerfully aiding comes into full flood that we shall be able to bring the whole force of our manhood and of our modern scientific equipment to bear upon the enemy. How long this period will take depends upon the vehemence of the effort put into production in all our war industries and shipyards.

The second phase, sir, which will then open, may be called the phase of liberation. During this phase we must look to the recovery of the territories which have been lost or which may yet be lost and also we must look to the revolt of the conquered peoples from the moment that the rescuing and liberating armies and air forces appear in strength within their bounds.

For this purpose it is imperative that no nation or region overrun, that no government or state which has been conquered, should relax its moral and physical efforts and preparation for the day of deliverance. The invaders, be they Germans or Japanese, must everywhere be regarded as infected persons, to be shunned and isolated as far as possible.

Where active resistance is impossible, passive resistance must be maintained. The invaders and tyrants must be made to feel that their fleeting triumphs will have a terrible reckoning, and that they are hunted men, and that they are courting doom. Particular punishment will be reserved for the Quislings and traitors who make themselves the tools of the enemy. They will be handed over to the judgment of their fellow countrymen.

Sir, there is a third phase which must also be contemplated—namely, the assault upon the citadels and homelands of the guilty powers, both in Europe and Asia.

Thus I endeavor in a few words to cast some forward light upon the dark, inscrutable mysteries of the future. But in thus forecasting the course along which we should seek to advance, we must never forget that the power of the enemy and the action of the enemy may at every stage affect our fortunes.

Moreover, sir, you will notice that I have not attempted to assign any time limit to the various stages; these time limits depend upon our exertions and upon our achievements and on the hazardous and uncertain course of the war. Nevertheless, I feel it is right at this moment to make it clear that while an ever-increasing bombing offensive against Germany will remain one of the principal methods by which we hope to bring the war to an end, it is by no means the only method which our growing strength now enables us to take into account.

Evidently the most strenuous exertions must be made by all. As to the form which these exertions take, that is for each partner in the grand alliance to judge for himself, in consultation with others and in harmony with the general scheme.

Let us then, sir, address ourselves to our tasks, not in any way underrating its tremendous difficulties and perils, but in good heart and sober confidence, resolve that whatever the cost, whatever the sufferings, we shall stand by one another, true and faithful comrades and do our duty, God helping us to the end.

foundland, the Royal Air Force ferry command disclosed today.

Exploit Is Lauded

Describing their exploit as a "most difficult undertaking" and "another splendid chapter" in the history of American-built Catalina aircraft, the command identified the crew only as:

Captain Gentry, pilot; N. Collins, co-pilot, both Americans; three Canadians named Glover, Maher and Coulombe, and Flight Engineer Bertrand, formerly of the United States Navy.

Their full names and home addresses were not given.

JAN 1 1942

White Caps Visible

Because higher altitude meant encountering heavy, dangerous icing conditions, the ferry command said Captain Gentry flew less than 500 feet over the sea the first eighteen hours of the twenty-three-hour flight.

"Below him the white caps of the waves were just visible all through the night," it said.

The Catalina landed in Canadian waters with sufficient fuel left for five more hours in the air. Another ship took the crew and dispatches on to Washington immediately.

DeGaulle Declares Isles Are Freed 'Forever'

Broadcasts on St. Pierre and Miquelon; U. S. Still Friendly

The Free French forces have re-established "forever" the national sovereignty and freedom of the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, General Charles de Gaulle said yesterday in a broadcast from London, heard by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

(The United States State Department has denounced the Free French seizure of the islands and called for their return to Vichy control.)

Apostolic Prefect in Opposition

ST. PIERRE, Dec. 30 (Delayed) (AP)—Opposition of the Apostolic Prefect of St. Pierre and Miquelon to the de Gaullist occupation of these islands off Newfoundland was reported by the Free French Information Service today along with a pledge that independence of worship would be maintained.

The information service said that the prefect, Monsignor A. Poisson, clashed with Vice-Admiral Emile Muselier, who occupied the islands with a force from four corvettes last week, declaring "you are occupiers; you are not a true government."

Canada's Hongkong Casualties

OTTAWA, Dec. 31 (AP).—The first Canadian casualty list from Hongkong, containing the names of the commander, his senior officer and nine others, was issued by the Defense Department tonight. Brigadier J. K. Lawson, the Canadians' commander, was listed as "missing, believed killed in action," and Colonel Patrick Hennessy was listed as "killed in action."

GERMAN ESCAPES CAMP

24-Year-Old Flier Fled from Prison in Ontario

JAN 1 1942

Bowmanville, Ont., Dec. 31—(AP)—Walter Manhardt, 24-year-old German aviator, escaped from the prison camp near here last night in an undetermined manner, authorities announced.

He was the second to escape last night, but the first, also a German flier, was apprehended less than an hour after he concealed himself in a bundle of laundry.

Then they piled into automobiles and raced at 100 miles an hour to another field 10 miles away and roared into the air in planes for dog fights all over Oahu island.

Two of the five already have been awarded the distinguished service cross.

Those gathered in the quiet of the offices of the commanding colonel of Wheeler field included smiling 23-year-old Lt. George Welch, of Wilmington, Del., who topped the list in enemy planes bagged, with four to his credit. Welch landed once while the battle raged and went up again to fight until incendiary bullets threatened to set his plane aflame.

Another was sunburned Lt. Kenneth Taylor, 22, of Hominy, Okla., who stayed with Welch until bullets ripped into one leg, grazed an arm and battered his plane's instruments.

It was to these two men that the distinguished service cross was awarded.

Then there were Lts. Lewis Sanders, 34, of Elkhart, Ind.; Philip Rasmussen, 23, of Boston, and Harry W. Brown, 21, of Amarillo, Tex.—each of whom had accounted for one Japanese plane—and every last one insisted the other was just as worthy of mention.

The young airmen spoke quietly of the deaths of two of their comrades, Lts. James G. Sterling, West Hartford, Conn., and John Dains, Mt. Olive, Ill. They said it was certain that Sterling shot down at least one enemy plane before his own burst into flames and plunged into the ocean.

Rasmussen said regretfully he had been forced to quit the fight when the fuselage of his plane was riddled by 400 bullet holes, part of his instruments shot away and his rudder jammed.

Brown related how he escaped unhurt from the strafing of enemy planes as he raced to the air field and of giving battle at an altitude of 6,000 feet when he found a comrade engaged against heavy odds.

Brown said his reddish growth of beard dated back to the morning of the assault, when he had no time to shave. He intended to keep it, he said, "until I get another whack at them and get at least one more plane."

Both Brown and Sanders characterized the dog fights as "exactly like the games we'd been practicing for a long while."

ADMIRAL NIMITZ TAKES COMMAND

JAN 1 1942

He Tells Officers of Fleet Utmost Will Be Done.

Honolulu, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, strict 56-year-old Texan, took command of the United States fleet today in a simple ceremony.

"I have just assumed a great responsibility and obligation which I shall do my utmost to discharge," he told interviewers after the ceremony at Pearl Harbor attended by high-ranking officers.

Admiral Nimitz relieved Admiral William S. Pye, who became temporary commander of the fleet when Admiral Husband E. Kimmel was relieved of his command following Japan's sneak attack on Hawaii December 7.

Known as an unyielding fighter and a stern disciplinarian, Admiral Nimitz returns to the sea after two and a half years in Washington as Chief of the Bureau of Navigation. He is a native of Fredericksburg, Tex. His only son, Chester Jr., is serving on a submarine in the Asiatic fleet.

NAVY PAYS HONOR TO WAKE MARINE

Major Paul A. Putnam's Name Placed Besides That Of Major J. P. I. Devereux

Commanded Air Unit In Fight Costing Japs 3 Detroyers And Cruiser

JAN 1 1942

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 31—The navy today placed the name of Major Paul A. Putnam, Marine Corps flyer from San Diego, beside that of Major James P. S. Devereux on the honor roll of Wake Island defenders.

Major Putnam, 38, commanded the marines' air unit of twelve planes which took to the air time after time to fight brilliantly against numerically superior Japanese squadrons and accounted for at least two enemy vessels. Naval records show the Japanese lost three destroyers and a light cruiser during the battle.

Kept Up Air Fight

Communiques received in Washington disclosed that Major Putnam kept his handful of planes in the air "until they were completely knocked out of action," while Major Devereux, in command of the band of 378 Marine Corps officers and men, directed the over-all defense of the tiny Pan-American clipper plane base.

Eight of Major Putnam's twelve planes were destroyed on the ground while refueling at the outset of the Japanese assault on Wake. undismayed, Major Putnam sent the four remaining planes aloft until they were knocked out. Besides sinking the surface craft, the planes brought down at least one heavy seaplane and eleven other hostile aircraft.

Fate Still Unknown

Major Putnam's fate, along with that of the others on Wake Island, is unknown. His wife and three children

Six-Man U. S.-Canadian Crew Pilots Flying Boat Christmas With Urgent Messages To Washington

JAN 1 1942

[By the Associated Press]

Montreal, Dec. 31—Through darkness and at an altitude limited to only 500 feet by icing conditions, a six-man American-Canadian crew piloted their flying boat across the gale-swept Atlantic Christmas Day to deliver urgent dispatches to Washington.

As most people prepared to eat Christmas dinner, the volunteer crew took off from a Scottish port for New-

Air Heroes of Attack on Hawaii Agree It Was Fun Shooting Down Jap Planes

JAN 1 1942

BY WENDELL WEBB

HONOLULU, Dec. 31. (AP)—American air heroes of the Japanese attack on Oahu island Dec. 7 agreed today it was grim fun bagging their share of Japanese planes and evidenced a restless eagerness to meet the enemy again over the Hawaiian islands.

Five young air corps lieutenants, called to a press conference, modestly and almost reluctantly described their experiences.

They told of being in their barracks when the first bombs fell and of racing to the flying field only to live in San Diego.

Major Putnam already had earned the Cross of Valor and a letter of commendation from the Secretary of the Navy, for "extraordinary heroism" in Nicaragua in 1927 and 1928, where, according to the navy's letter, he rendered "valuable assistance in the suppression of banditry."

He was born in Milan, Mich., and spent most of his youth in Washington, Iowa. He started his Marine Corps career as a private in 1923 and earned his commission as a second lieutenant in 1926.

WEAVER IS ACTING CHIEF OF AIR CORPS

His Headquarters Will Be in Washington.

Washington, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The assignment of Major-Gen. Walter R. Weaver as acting chief of the air corps with headquarters in Washington was announced today by the War Department.

The orders relieved Gen. Weaver of his assignment as commanding general of the southeast air corps training center with headquarters at Maxwell Field, Ala.

As acting chief of the air corps, he will direct all supply and training operations of the army air forces. He has been on duty here in his new assignment for several weeks.

Gen. Weaver, rated in the air forces as a pilot, combat observer and technical observer, was born in Charleston, S. C., on February 23, 1885, the son of Major-General E. M. Weaver of the United States Army. He was graduated from West Point in 1908 and has served in the Philippines, in China, as commandant at Mitchel Field, N. Y., and of Langley Field, Va.

Japs May Shell West Coast, Nimitz Warns

Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, Jan. 1 (AP).—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, new commander of the United States Pacific Fleet, warns that Japanese submarines operating off the west coast of the United States might attempt to shell coastal cities.

JAN 1 1942

Speaking to reporters aboard a big new submarine yesterday just three hours after he assumed command, Admiral Nimitz said:

"It's relatively safe and simple for a submarine to rise to the surface near a port and throw a few shells into a city. It is not beyond the bounds of possibility that Japanese submarines operating off the west coast of the United States may attempt to lay their shells into cities before they leave."

Can't Prevent It.

The ocean he added, is "too big to prevent it entirely."

A reporter asked the significance of submarine shelling of three points in the Hawaiian Islands the night of Dec. 30. Admiral Nimitz replied.

"Japanese captains desire to make the utmost use of their weapons when there are no targets for their torpedoes."

Asked about the possibilities of an attack on Hawaii if Japan succeeds in taking Manila and the Philippines, Nimitz took a long pause and replied:

"An attack on these islands is always possible. We will do our utmost to keep them from falling into enemy hands. The Pacific fleet is doing and will do the utmost possible."

NEW DECREE HITS ALL ENEMY ALIENS

JAN 1 1942

They Must Turn In Cameras and Long-range Radios.

JAN 1 1942

Washington, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Attorney-General Biddle today ordered all German, Japanese and Italian nationals in the United States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands to surrender all radio transmitters, short-wave radio receivers and cameras to the local police by 11 P. M., January 5.

The order extended a previous one concerning enemy aliens in California, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and Arizona, whose time limit for turning in the forbidden equipment already has expired.

The ban, issued under a presidential proclamation which authorizes the Attorney-General to fix regulations for the conduct of enemy aliens, affects approximately 1,100,000 Germans, Italians and Japanese. The penalty for failure to comply is forfeiture of the articles and possible internment for the duration of the war.

Certain exceptions are provided to permit the retention of studio or fixed cameras which cannot readily be removed, but such equipment must be reported and its retention approved by the United States attorney for the district.

Standard radio receiving sets which have short-wave bands must be altered so as to prevent short-wave reception.

Senator Speaking Japanese Tells Japan Over Radio She Can't Win

JAN 1 1942

Elbert Thomas, Former Missionary, Broadcasts a Short-Wave Warning

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Speaking in the Japanese language, Senator Elbert D. Thomas, Democrat, of Utah, told the people of Japan by radio tonight that "the little temporary advances your forces have made will all be swept away" and that the United States will "crush the war lords who are already crushing you."

JAN 1 1942

Senator Thomas, who passed seven years in Japan as a Mormon missionary, titled his address "Japan Vs. Japan." The speech, broadcast by KGEI in San Francisco and ten other American short-wave stations, will be rebroadcast on the Japanese New Year, Jan. 10.

"I do not know how many of you are listening to this New Year's message to the people of Japan," he declared, "because the repressions which your government practices on you keep you as far as it can from knowing the truth.

"But if only one Japanese hears my words and learns the tragic story of the way you have been betrayed by your war lords, who have sold themselves to Hitler, then it will be worth while to speak."

When the next New Year's Day rolls around, the Senator said, "the United States will still be fresh, will still be strong with an even greater strength than before, while your rapidly dwindling resources in supplies and manpower bring you a larger measure of exhaustion than is yours today.

"The little temporary advances your forces have made will all be swept away. Like the Germans in Russia, like the Germans and Italians in Africa, Japanese forces will be forced back and compelled to leave every spot which they now hold."

". . . Your new friends have lost any capacity to help you in your war. Italy has bogged down completely, and continues to survive only by Nazi domination," he continued. "Germany has suffered a disastrous defeat in Russia and North Africa. Her soldiers, lacking clothes, are freezing to death in Russia. She has been unable to invade England. She has lost her power in the Atlantic Ocean. She can do nothing for you, even if she wanted to help you."

The Senator told the Japanese that Americans, as did they, also made New Year resolutions and that here were ours:

"To build more than 40,000 warplanes and increase the production rate well beyond 50,000 a year.

"To produce 25,000 tanks and gear production for the greatest tank armada the world has ever seen.

"To launch approximately 150 fighting ships and speed construction on hundreds more.

JAN 1 1942

"To add about 600 merchant vessels to the 'bridge of ships.'

"To increase our highly trained, fully equipped army to more than 2,500,000 men.

"To train more than seventy thousand warplane pilots.

"To enroll more than a million civilian volunteers for emergency duty.

"To enlarge the army of workers in arms factories by three million.

"To increase to more than double the output of vital machine tools.

"To produce arms of all kinds at least five times faster than in 1941.

"To mobilize 80,000 industrial plants available for war production.

"To produce an ample supply of food for the United States and all its Allies.

"To continue and increase aid of every kind to all enemies of the Axis."

These resolutions "are already becoming actualities because of our almost inexhaustible resources, our fresh vigor, our determination to crush the war lords who are already crushing you, the people of Japan, to the limit of their ability," Senator Thomas added.

"The American Fleet controls the eastern Pacific," he continued. "Our patrol vessels have sunk your submarine raiders or driven them back to their bases. Despite the lying announcement of your war lords, not a single bomb has fallen on any mainland American city.

JOINT U. S.-BRITISH WAR GROUP LIKELY

Sir Gerald Campbell Declares Permanent Commission Is Possible

JAN 1 1942

Head Of British Press Service Says It Would Prosecute Fight Against Axis

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 31—Sir Gerald Campbell, director of the British Press Service, declared today it is possible a permanent commission will be set up for joint British-American prosecution of their common fight against the Axis.

He indicated Great Britain and the United States would at least amalgamate their supplies to better carry on the war effort. He inferred that such a program was being discussed between American officials and British leaders currently in Washington.

Sir Gerald added that he did not know yet whether Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of Supply, would remain here after Prime Minister Churchill and members of his staff return to London.

Staff Talks Continue

While the Prime Minister has been in Canada, Sir Gerald said, talks between the British and American staffs have been continuing and the Prime Minister will receive a report on the progress of the conferences when he returns to Washington tomorrow. He said he did not know how long Churchill would remain here.

On the home front, defense officials said the Government was considering a plan, similar to the British industrial concentration system, under which the entire civilian output of an industry would be carried on by one or two plants, leaving other plants free for war work.

They said the plan had not passed the discussion stage, but that the refrigerator and washing machine industries were being studied as particularly adaptable.

To Survey Civilian Needs

To make the concentration plan operative, they added, it would be necessary to obtain a definite estimate of civilian requirements, balanced against availability of critical materials, such studies have been begun, it was indicated.

They predicted that, if the idea was adopted, smaller units in the industries affected would be the ones designated to continue civilian production. Small plants, they pointed out, probably would be able to operate more economically on the small production quotas which would be permitted and larger plants were more readily convertible to war work. In addition, to relieve transportation problems, it might be preferable to use three or four smaller plants in different sections of the country.

NO FOOD POISONED BY FOE

U. S. says Rumors of Such Danger are Untrue

Washington, Dec. 31—(AP)—Don't get worked up over rumors that enemy agents have put poison into some of the Nation's food stocks.

JAN 1 1942

The Pure Food and Drug Administration issued this admonition to the people today, after being advised that such rumors are being circulated in some localities.

The Administration reported that to date there has not been "a single instance where enemy agents have been involved in rendering commercial food harmful to health."

Log of Destroyer at Pearl Harbor Tells of Shooting Down 6 Planes

JAN 1 1942

By The Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 31.—The Navy reported today that a single U. S. destroyer shot down six Japanese warplanes in the surprise assault upon Pearl Harbor on December 7.

An extract from the log of the unnamed destroyer, released by the Navy, read:

"Observed torpedo plane come in from direction of Merry Point between Navy Yard and Kuahua Island, 30 or 40 feet altitude, headed for a battleship. About 200 or 300 yards from battleship dropped its torpedo and hit the battleship amidships.

"Hit fourth plane coming in which was seen to crash in channel off Officers' Club landing.

"Machine gun fire on eighth plane made it swerve to left causing torpedo to drop and explode in bank about 30 feet ahead of this ship. Number one machine gun downed plane in Navy Yard channel.

"Third torpedo plane which was hit was observed headed for two cruisers astern. Plane went out of control, dropped its torpedo. This was about the eleventh plane to come in.

"Next plane hit came over dock but was downed with a short burst. Torpedo dropped in lumber pile and plane believed to have crashed on dock.

"Fifth brought down came down on starboard side, nosed directly into air and spun into crash loosing its torpedo.

"Sixth plane brought down was a dive bomber during second phase of attack and after torpedo attack. This plane was shot down by anti-aircraft gun and those from other ships."

Allies Mask Navy Moves With War of Nerves

JAN 1 1942

Roosevelt and Churchill Create Puzzle for Japs at Opposite Ends of the 5,000-Mile Theater

By The Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 31.—With the battle for the Philippines in its crucial hour, the Allies invoked war-of-nerves technique against Japan today to mask the grand strategy of operations that might develop anywhere along a 5,000-mile front.

The capital realized that, if the terrific pressure on the Philippines was to be relieved, it would take a smashing surprise attack on Japan in some other part of the vast Pacific theater.

The character of allied pronouncements was calculated to keep Japan apprehensive on that score.

President Roosevelt spoke cryptically yesterday of Kamchatka, the Russian Siberian peninsula which juts down to the tip of the Japanese island chain.

Prime Minister Churchill simultaneously was talking of Anglo-American aid to the Netherlands East Indies, which are at the opposite end of the 5,000-mile theater in which the Japanese are operating.

It was up to Tokyo to decide at which end trouble was apt to come first, or whether it might come simultaneously in both places. With Japanese armed forces spread over such a vast area and already committed in several major operations, the latter prospect was disturbing.

The Tokyo radio evidenced this by broadcasting a warning against possible air raids during the New Year holiday period. Japanese have manifested concern over the air raid danger since the war began, but this time the eastern defense headquarters ordered partial blackouts from midnight tonight until January 4.

Another apparent indication of Japanese fear of a surprise in the northern theater was the suspected presence of Japanese submarines in the vicinity of Kodiak, Alaska, site of a U. S. naval air base.

While an underseas boat might expect to get an occasional shot at a merchantman in these waters, they are not the happy hunting grounds that the busy shipping lanes present off the west coast of the continental United States.

It was thought probable, therefore, that the main mission of the enemy craft was reconnaissance against any large scale surface or air movement westward toward Siberia or Japan.

Roosevelt Casual

Mr. Roosevelt was very casual about his mention of Kamchatka. He was talking about American production of war materials, and he said no human being could tell where the finished products might go—whether to Russia, China, Britain or the Kamchatka Peninsula.

The mention of Kamchatka caused definite surprise among the newsmen, but Mr. Roosevelt calmly volunteered that this peninsula was the most practical and available piece of land west of the Aleutians, the long arc of American islands which reach from Alaska toward the Asiatic mainland.

Normandie Renamed Lafayette By Navy on Roosevelt's Order

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP).—The former French liner Normandie, now being converted into a naval auxiliary, today was given the name U. S. S. Lafayette.

The huge passenger liner, seized by the Coast Guard on Dec. 12, is the first American naval vessel to be named in honor of the Marquis de Lafayette, French hero of America's Revolutionary War.

A Navy announcement said that Secretary Frank Knox assigned the name Lafayette "by direction of the President."

The Navy declined to say more than that the 1,000 foot, 83,000 ton ship would be an "auxiliary," but previous speculation about the use of the $60,000,000 liner had given primary attention to her value as a troop transport. Extensive conversion would be needed to fit the liner as an aircraft carrier.

The name Lafayette is not entirely new in naval usage, for it was assigned by President Woodrow Wilson in the first World War to the powerful United States naval radio station built at Croix de Hins, Gironde, France.

WASHINGTON HAS AIR RAID DRILL

LaGuardia Pronounces it a Success; Downtown Area Blacked out

By EDWIN STOUT
(Associated Press Writer)

Washington, Dec. 31.—Historic Pennsylvania av. was like Whitehall under the Nazi blitz, for 15 minutes last night, as the Capital city held a practice air raid alert in deadly seriousness.

The blackout was not quite as black, the sirens were not quite as mournful, the streets were empty of pedestrians who might be called to help smother fire bombs, and the explosive sound effects were missing.

But otherwise downtown Washington might well have been central London during a lull in any one of the 500 or so raids from the fall of France to the Battle of Russia.

[Editor's Note: The writer spent 18 months in London and experienced many bombing attacks.]

Over much of the rest of Washington, street lights were dimmed or turned off, advertising signs were darkened, and restaurants and drug stores operated by candlelight or well shaded lamps for the alert period.

Civilian Defense Director F. H. LaGuardia, who toured the darkened streets, considered the rehearsal excellent.

A few Army and Navy planes circled over the city during the alert and several searchlight beams stabbed the haze. The only effects lacking for complete realism were:

The white ground-flash of anti-aircraft guns firing in quick, hammering succession and the echoing explosion of their shells in the sky;

The buzz of falling splinters and the smacking sound as they hit the pavement and struck sparks;

The wavy blue light of parachute flares;

Small incendiary bombs zipping down and bursting in globes of heat about the size of a basketball and the color and intensity of an electric welder's arc;

The flat clang of ambulance bells;

Cries of "Taxi, taxi," from people waiting outside restaurant and theater doors;

The whining descent and gulping explosion of distant bombs and the roaring, railroad-train whir, yellow-red flash and jarring thud of those nearby;

The slipping, sliding sound of brick walls falling;

Red splotches of fire ringing the horizon;

The snarl of a bomber cruising back and forth over its target;

Anti-aircraft shells bursting in bright clusters like stars winking on and off against a patch of sky;

The blitzkrieg smell—a mixture of new smoke and quenched fires, brick-plaster- and stone-dust; sewer gas, illuminating gas and a fetid smell like a sick man's breath that rose from subway stations where crowds had slept all night.

Use of Tin in 29 Items Barred

JAN 1 1942

Government Sets March 31 as Dead Line for Toys, Jewelry and Other Products.

Washington, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The Government prohibited today the use after March 31 of tin in twenty-nine different products, including musical instruments, tinfoil, toys, household furnishings, jewelry, buckles and various novelties. It also ordered an immediate 50 per cent reduction in the tin used for such purposes.

No new restrictions were put on tin used in cans and other containers, but the OPM priorities division said a conservation order would be issued soon limiting the production and use of those items.

The curtailment affects tin, tin alloys and scrap but exempts tin in type-metal for reuse in the printing and publishing trade.

OPM officials estimated that the order would cut down the potential demand for tin in 1942 by some 15,000 tons. Rigid conservation of the metal is necessary, they explained, because of the stoppage of tin shipments from British Malaya, the source of more than 80 per cent of this country's normal tin consumption of about 100,000 tons a year. The 17,000,000,000 tin-lined cans manufactured annually in the United States consume more than 60 per cent of the nation's supply.

Other Items on List.

Other items in which the use of tin will be prohibited after March 31 include advertising specialties, beverage dispensing units, buttons, chimes and bells, fasteners, ornaments and fittings, pewter, refrigerator trays, seals and labels, and slot game and vending machines.

The OPM ordered zinc producers to increase their reserve supply by 2 per cent, boosting their reserve stock pile to 31 per cent of the October production.

Producers will required to set aside an amount of zinc equal to 31 per cent of their October production for allocation by OPM's Director of Priorities in January. The OPM estimated the 31 per cent would approximate 23,000 tons.

Will Build Reserve Pool.

The OPM also announced that the Government next month would resume the building of a reserve zinc oxide pool. Producers of zinc oxide will be required to set aside, for priorities allocation, 10 per cent of the October production. There was no zinc oxide restriction this month as surplus, now exhausted, had been accumulated since the pool was started last July.

The OPM said it would not be necessary to set aside zinc dust next month.

U. S. Buys Cuba's Sugar.

Washington, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The Government took concrete steps today to protect American consumers against any possible sugar shortage and sky-rocketing prices by arranging to buy the bulk of the 1942 Cuban sugar cane crop.

The transaction, to be handled by the Government-owned Defense Supplies Corporation, was announced last night at a time when war in the Pacific clouded prospects of getting further supplies from the Philippine Islands, normally a source of about 14 per cent of United States sugar requirements.

Government authorities said that the deal would make available to the United States upward of half its annual needs. In recent years, this country has depended upon Cuba for only about 30 per cent of its requirements. A part of the Cuban crop, however, may be turned over to Great Britain and Russia under the lease-lend program.

GERMAN PLAYWRIGHT HELD

Karl Vollmoeller Jailed At Los Angeles As Enemy Alien

Los Angeles, Dec. 31 (AP)—FBI agents arrested Karl Vollmoeller, 63-year-old German playwright, today and held him in the county jail as an enemy alien.

Vollmoeller, author of "The Miracle" and other dramas, told booking officers he is a German citizen and last came to the United States in 1936. He has worked in Hollywood studios and recently collaborated on several scenarios.

First U. S. Wounded Return After Pearl Harbor Battle

Most Of Them Eager To Recover So They Can "Get Another Crack" At The Japs

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Dec. 31—"Fix us up so we can get back for another crack at 'em," a sailor wounded at Pearl Harbor said today as he and scores of other army and navy casualties arrived on ships from the Pacific battleground.

From the gangplanks as they were lowered from the tall gray sides of the ships came a thin trickle, first, of walking wounded, hobbling on crutches or their arms in slings.

Later sailor orderlies began carrying the stretchers down—boys still smiling, with cigarettes between their lips, despite burns which had left their faces raw and red or shrapnel wounds, which had torn their bodies.

Women And Children, Too

With them disembarked hundreds of the navy's wives and mothers and children—worn from a sudden trip which found them leaving their fathers and husbands behind on Christmas Day, of all days.

Women in the gray and blue of emergency [illegible] Red Cross services waited, [illegible] the evacuees, and the piers were barred by steel-helmeted army sentries to all except the waiting ambulances.

A mother came off, walking slowly down the dock, holding a boy of 2 by one hand and at her side another son, about 4, carrying a little suitcase with "Little Country Doctor" lettered on it.

Doctors and nurses, real ones, were busy tending the wounded sailors and soldiers, trying to make them comfortable for the trip to army and navy hospitals.

Most Of Them Smile

But the boys were smiling for the most part, although some of them lay still and quiet on their stretchers. Others were feverishly reading American papers, trying to get an idea of what had happened in the rest of the world.

The story told by J. R. Trammell, an American boy just turned 20, was typical. Trammell, leaning on his arm, a blue sweater tight over his gray [illegible] stocking cap pajamas, and a blue stocking cap jauntily cocked over his brown hair, is from Waurika, Okla., where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Trammell, are farmers.

"This is what happened," the boy said. "That Sunday (December 7 when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor) it didn't seem anything unusual. But about five minutes to eight we saw planes flying overhead and a little while later, a plane dropped a torpedo which hit us forward.

Hit By Shrapnel

"I was in the crew's galley when the Japs were sighted and that's where I got mine—shrapnel in both legs. All four of the boys with me were hit.

"The ship's loudspeaker began bellowing 'Japs are coming,' and we went to our stations. Our guns were manned right through the attack and, as far as I could see, we gave a good account of ourselves. I'm ready to go back right now."

Two of Trammell's shipmates, lying alongside, nodded their heads in agreement. They were L. E. Pullian, 32, of South Gate, Cal., and W. A. Schiller, 21, St. Louis. Both had shrapnel wounds, Schiller in the sides and legs and Pullian in the legs. They were members of the same gun crew, a broadside gun.

All Except Two Hit

"I got hit when a bomb exploded, and the flying shrapnel got all of our twelve-man crew, except for two," Schiller said, his face serious.

A curly-haired, blond lad alongside grinned. They were lying in rows, so close together you could hardly squeeze between the stretchers. The curly-haired boy was William B. Chose, of Wilsall, Mont. He was just 18.

"Ankle and arm was where I got it," he said, "but I'm fine. Those boys with the burns—poor guys!"

A girl, maybe a wife or a sweetheart, yellow and green leis bright over her red dress, came down between the rows, eyes searching. Then she caught sight of him and ran to his side.

Japs Strafed Civilians

Japanese airmen machine-gunned fleeing civilians on the roads during the attack on Pearl Harbor, one of the evacuees reported.

Mrs. June Cowee, of Kansas City, was visiting her sister, Mrs. Sylvia Prugel, about a half mile from Pearl Harbor when they were awakened by a terrific explosion.

"We saw several planes come down in flames," Mrs. Cowee said. "It was terrible. We didn't know what to do, so we jumped in our car to get away from there. Ahead of us on the road was a milk truck.

"As the Jap planes came over, they machine-gunned people on the road. The driver of the milk truck jumped out to hide in a field, but before he could get away, they shot him.

Bombs Fall Close

"We never thought we could get out alive. We got out of the car and flattened ourselves on the ground. It seemed as though we lay there for hours.

"All around us were planes and shots and bombs and shells exploding. One bomb fell in a cane field across the road. It showered us with dirt. I'm sure it must have blown a hole big enough to put a house in."

She, the Prugels and the two Prugel children spent the rest of Sunday in a near-by village.

When they returned home Monday there were shell fragments in the yard and bullet holes in the roof.

Flying Office Plane Enroute to Brazil

BURBANK, Calif., Dec. 31. (AP)—A "flying office" left Lockheed air terminal today for Brazil, where it is to be used by President Vargas and his staff.

Built to the order of the Brazilian minister of aeronautics, the Lockheed Lodestar, said to be one of the fastest transport planes in the world, is equipped as an office, with desk, swivel chair and davenport.

It also has a buffet compartment. The plane accommodates 12 persons, compared with the regular Lodestar's capacity of 17.

Piloted by Maj. Nero Moura, President Vargas' personal pilot, the plane departed for Washington enroute to Rio de Janeiro.

Alaska-Russia Route Urged to Bomb Tokyo

Boston, Dec. 31—(AP)—The bombing of Tokyo by planes shuttling between certain points in Alaska and Russia was pictured as a possibility today by a young scientist who has spent a dozen years studying by aerial exploration the topography of the northern territory.

Bradford Washburn, head of the New England Museum of Natural History, said in an interview that he thought it was possible for bombers to blast Tokyo by swerving from the direct course between the nearest land points en route from Alaska to Russia.

The route he visioned would be approximately 1,000 miles shorter than flights from Hawaii to Tokyo.

Bounty On Bomb For Tokyo

Smithtown, N. Y., Dec. 31 (AP)—The directors of the Suffolk County Police Association voted last night to pay out of the association's treasury a bounty og $500 in defense bonds to the crew of the American plane that drops the first bomb on Tokyo.

No U S Vessels Sunk on Northeast Coast During War

NEW YORK, Dec. 31. (AP)—Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commandant of the North Atlantic coastal frontier, said today that in the first 24 days of war there had been no sinkings of American vessels in the frontier which extends from Halifax to Hatteras.

"Nor have there been any verified reports of German submarine activity in the frontier," he said at a press conference. "I'm happy to report there has, in addition, been no attempted sabotage detected.

"I would refuse to reassure the people, however, in their security. That would be foolish."

Andrews said that everything possible was being done to protect the Atlantic coast—"and that's the best we can do."

"We have been flooded with reports from people who said they thought they saw enemy submarines," he continued. "Actually, we're glad to get these reports, even if they prove erroneous, for it puts the navy on the alert.

"Only last night we had to check a report that an enemy sub was off Ambrose light, entrance to New York harbor. We found that I was a target being towed."

He said he was gratified to note that 4,600 recruits had joined the navy in the North Atlantic district since Japan attacked Pearl Harbor.

DRUNKEN NAZI AIDED ENEMY

Soviet Radio Tells how he Helped Russians Capture Town

New York, Dec. 31—(AP)—The British radio relayed a Russian broadcast last night saying a German officer who got drunk celebrating Christmas week provided information which led to the Soviet recapture last week of Narofominsk, 35 miles southwest of Moscow.

"Advancing on the main road, the Russians captured a German officer who had been celebrating Christmas and was completely drunk," said the account heard here by CBS.

"The officer sent them to the German headquarters, and the staff officers' celebration there was interrupted by the conquering Red Army forces."

New York City Celebration Is Pervaded by Aura of War

BY GLADWIN HILL

NEW YORK, Dec. 31. (AP)—Amid elaborate air raid precautions, the nation's largest city and wassail center of the land tonight swept into a New Year celebration distinguished less for its exuberance than for the omnipresent aura of war that pervaded it.

The superficial celebration features were the same—crowds in Manhattan streets and night clubs, hysterical shouting, paper hats, sky-high prices (the top the same as last year: $20 a person), night clubs with barber chairs for lategoers and oyster bars coyly advertising "hangover stews."

Tacit Regret of War

But overshadowing it all was the tacit regret of war, and a brave new unity of hope and determination for the universal object of toast: "Victory."

The spirit was palpable in the public and private gatherings where people glanced with awe at uniformed figures and wished for absent kin and friends. . . in the defense plants which hummed away oblivious to diversions. . . in the recruiting stations which significantly remained open all night and thru the holiday. . . and in watch-night services held in churches thruout the city.

The immediacy of the war was most evident in the heart of New York's celebration, the annual New Year's eve melee of 1,000,000 persons in Times Square.

Everyone was aware of the risks of such an assemblage—a far bigger target than the transferred west coast Rose Bowl game—but after some official indecision the celebration was pursued, on a wartime basis.

Times TSquare was policed by the biggest congregation of authorities in history. The 34 blocks in the area—from 42d to 59th st. and from Sixth ave., to Eighth—were divided into 17 air raid precincts connected by telephone with three control booths in the square and outside.

Sixteen hundred air raid wardens were assigned to the area, along with 2,100 policemen. For the first time in history the city's entire detective force of 800 wao assigned to duty at the same time.

Every fire alarm box was guarded, in addition to the customary New Year's eve firemen, by an officer. Special details from the city water, gas, electric, public works and building departments were posted. Two fire engines were stationed in the square.

Fire engines, ambulances and police cars were ordered not to sound their sirens, to obviate confusion with the air raid one long-one short alarm.

Loudspeakers were installed for directing the crowds in an emergency, and signs were posted everywhere, "In case of an alarm, walk—don't run," pointing out of the square.

Radiograms to Manila 'at Sender's Risk'

San Francisco, Dec. 31—(AP)—Globe Wireless announced today that it would accept no more radiograms for Manila. Other radio and cable companies accepted messages "at sender's risk only."

Earlier most companies reported they had not been working Manila all night. There have been no direct communications by cable since the Japanese capture of Guam.

WIRELESS SERVICE TO MANILA CUT OFF

JAN 1 1942

Notice Is Given by RCA, Western Union and Globe.

Interruption of radio communications with the Philippines was reported today by RCA Communications, Inc., and by Western Union. A spokesman for RCA added, however, that he would not be surprised if contact were re-established soon.

Public notice of the interruption was given by RCA between 10 and 11 A. M. today while Western Union issued an order to cease accepting messages for the islands about that time. Cable communication had been severed when the Japanese captured Guam, but Western Union had continued its service through RCA Communications.

Globe Wireless at San Francisco also announced today that it would accept no more radiograms for Manila.

WAVELL CABLES WISHES

Hopes U. S. Army will have Success in 1942

New York, Dec. 31—(AP)—General Sir Archibald Wavell, British Commander-in-Chief in India today cabled Secretary of War Stimson wishing the U. S. Army success in 1942 "on behalf of all the troops under my command."

CBS reported the British broadcast.

25 Are Reported Dead In European Cold Wave

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—A Toulouse radio broadcast reported today a wave of cold and snowstorms over Southeastern Europe, with 25 peasants said to have frozen to death in Southern Thrace.

In Sofia, Bulgaria, the temperature dropped to 13 degrees below zero Monday night, it said. C. B. S. heard the broadcast.

Jesuit Leader Cables Cheer From Philippines

JAN 1 1942

Father Hurley Tells Fordham: 'All Well, Spirit Superb'

A message of fighting cheer was received yesterday by the Very Rev. James P. Sweeney, S. J., provincial of the New York Jesuits at Fordham University, from the Very Rev. John F. Hurley, S. J., superior of 250 Jesuits in the Philippines.

The cable said: "All well, fathers and scholastics. Magnificent work of Red Cross and firemen. Spirit superb. Cheerio! Up Kerry!"

Father Hurley sent the message from his home in the parish house of St. Ignatius's Church within the walled city of Manila. Of the 250 Jesuits over whom he presides, 115 are Americans, most of them from New York, and the others are Filipinos. Seventy-seven Jesuits are with him in Manila, the others are at other places throughout the islands.

Father Hurley is head not only of the church but of the Ateneo de Manila, the Jesuit university which has been called "the West Point of the Philippines" because of its compulsory military training, and is a sister university of Fordham; and of two seminaries, a weather observatory with 200 substations, a trade school and a retreat house. At Fordham University it was said last night that the Jesuits would undoubtedly remain in the Philippines, no matter what happens.

Japanese Disarmament Called Peace Requisite

Dr. Hu Shih Urges Use of Force to Insure Security

Complete disarmament of Japan as one of the requisites of peace was advocated yesterday at the Hotel Pennsylvania by Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, in an address at a joint meeting of the American Political Association and the American Society for Public Administration.

"I venture to suggest," he said, "that the most practical measure to lighten the burden of armaments and to establish lasting peace in the world is not through the abandonment of the use of force but through pooling and organizing the overwhelming forces of the peace-loving peoples for the sole purpose of enforcing the peace and the collective security of the world."

The meeting at the close of the session passed a recommendation that the peace include establishment of an authority to assure food for the hungry, preserve discipline, revive fallen governments and lay the foundations for a permanent and orderly society.

Dr. Butler Told U. S. in 1933 of Japan's Designs

Recalls Roosevelt Ignored Account of Pacific Aims Given by Diet Member

JAN 1 1942

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, said yesterday at the annual holiday luncheon of the Alumni Association of the university at the Columbia Club, 4 West Forty-third Street, that he had informed President Roosevelt in 1933 of Japan's intentions of dominating the Pacific. He told the President, Dr. Butler said, of a frank state of national purpose made to Dr. Butler by a member of the Japanese Diet, but the warning was ignored. Even at that date, Dr. Butler said, Japan's plans included annexation of Hawaii and the Philippines.

"In 1933," said Dr. Butler, "I had a conference in this club with a member of the Japanese Diet at his request. At that meeting the Japanese official said that his government wished to put itself on record on four things. One was that the Japanese government regarded all contracts with the Western powers as 'harmful and not helpful.' The second was that Tokio was ready to clean out all existing treaties with the Western powers. The third disclosed Tokio's designs to institute a Monroe Doctrine in Far Eastern Asia, establishing economic and, if necessary, political control over China, Siam, the Dutch East Indies, Australia and New Zealand. The fourth warned that Japan was determined to see this program carried to its end, however bitter, even if it should take 100 years or more."

After his meeting with the Japanese Diet member, said Dr. Butler, he communicated with President Roosevelt.

"Nobody paid the slightest attention to me," he said. "Now they call on you to 'Remember Pearl Harbor.' Well, I remember something prior to that. Instead of being ready now with an international police force, the United States finds itself unready and will have to spend untold billions of dollars and many lives to adjust its past mistakes.

"The trouble today is that the world is divided into two groups of nations. One group is gain-seeking and has abandoned all governmental obligations and exists amid the wreckage of the rule of law and moral principles. The other group is dedicated to service and to a high moral purpose."

Judge Mortimer W. Byers of the United States District Court in Brooklyn, a Columbia Law School graduate of 1898, questioned whether modern educational methods in the United States turned out men "adequate for the stresses and strains of war."

For the last twenty years, he said, successive college generations had been "coddled" by "progressive" education and "left wide open for the blandishments of outrageous political demagogues."

Dr. Butler, as president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, gave out a New Year's Day message yesterday urging cooperation to win the war and, after the war, establishment of an international police to prevent its recurrence.

Andrews Sees No Dunkerque In Philippines

Admiral Doubts U. S. Force Will Yield Islands; Lauds MacArthur and Army

JAN 1 1942

Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commandant of the 3d Naval District, asserted yesterday that he did not believe the American forces would evacuate the Philippine Islands under any circumstances.

In an interview at his headquarters at 90 Church Street, Admiral Andrews, answering a query concerning the Navy's readiness for a re-enactment of the British Dunkerque evacuation, said. "We have a splendid commander in chief there, General Douglas MacArthur, who has a fine army of American and nativte soldiers under him. It took time to defeat the insurrectionist forces of Emilio Aguinaldo after the Spanish-American War and it will take time to drive out the Japanese. We are taking heavy blows—but I don't look for any evacuation."

Admiral Andrews noted that long-range PBY-type patrol bombers of the Navy, based on the Aleutian Island bases recently constructed to house them, were within striking distance by air of the Japanese Empire.

Answering a question as to whether he thought New Year's Day bombing of New York City by Germany was an impossibility, Admiral Andrews said: "I'm in a position to expect the worst at a moment's notice and it would be foolish to reassure the people as to their safety beyond saying that all possible steps for their security have been taken. The Army and the Navy are co-operating closely for coast defense, and there is now an Army unit next to my headquarters in this building to see that each service has all the information relative to air defense available to the other."

Since the bombardment of Pearl Harbor 4,600 persons had enlisted at 90 Church Street alone, he said, as compared with the average 9,000 monthly throughout the nation before the attacak.

Heavy Shadows Fall Upon Manila

As United States Troops Make Heroic Stand

By DeWITT MACKENZIE.

As the shadows of New Year's Eve fell across beleaguered Manila, the increasing sounds of battle were signaling the steady approach of enemy invasion toward the gates of the city and giving grim warning that freedom might go out temporarily with the old year.

Yankee and Filipino soldiers fought desperately to block the assault, but the sheer weight of Jap numbers and equipment forced our men slowly back toward the capital. Gen. MacArthur reported in a terse communique that the enemy dive bombers practically controlled the roads from the air. This gave them an advantage for which the unfortunate defense could conjure up little reply.

So the ancient and open city, torn and bleeding from barbaric Japanese bombing, drew her shawl about her and waited to see what the New Year would bring. She prayed that it would spare her people any further frightfulness if the enemy did gain control.

Of course, no position is lost until it is won, but it would take a monumental stroke of luck to pull the Island of Luzon and Manila out of the present tight spot. Still, it's a wonderful thing to see our troops playing that long shot for all they can—staking their lives on it. They are hoping that at the last moment re-enforcements may swing into action and save the day.

Japs Prepare to Celebrate.

Meanwhile the Japs are preparing a great New Year's celebration. The authorities have lifted the wartime restrictions, including those on the liquor which the men of Nippon will need to drown their shame at the pagan methods of warfare they are employing against Christian peoples.

With the Philippines in such dire straits, we get from London a significant statement by a British authority to the effect that Allied strategy calls for the defense of Britain's great naval base of Singapore "with all means at our disposal." He said this stronghold was needed as a base for the Allied offensive in the Pacific theater.

That isn't a new thought, and what it undoubtedly means is that the Philippines and all other bases will have to be sacrificed for the security of Singapore if the worst comes. This is because Singapore is the strategic heart of the Allied position in the Far East.

Singapore Needs Help.

This base was created to meet exactly the situation which has arisen with Japan, for there was ample warning of danger in Tokio's aggression against Manchuria and China. However, it wasn't anticipated that England would be in a life-and-death struggle in Europe when the Jap blow fell.

JAN 1 1942

British military experts long have recognized that even if a big naval squadron were based on Singapore, there would have to be strong re-enforcements from the home fleet in the event of war in the Far East. If the home fleet were engaged, such re-enforcements couldn't be sent.

Exactly that position has now arisen. To make matters worse, the Japs had the luck to sink the two powerful warships, Prince of Wales and Repulse, thereby weakening the Singapore squadron immeasurably. The defense of Singapore was arranged to deal with attack by naval vessels. However, the British have admitted frankly that just now they are short not only of warships but lack sufficient warplanes in the Far East.

Now that puts the strengthening of this all-important base of Singapore squarely up to Uncle Sam. Whether we can supply the deficiency in warships and warplanes remains to be seen. Certainly re-enforcement of Singapore and defense of the Philippines at the same time is a big problem. One of the greatest Allied weaknesses in the battle of the Pacific is in air power, and a mighty lot depends on that.

To turn to something a bit more cheerful for a moment—that's fine news from the Crimea, where the Russians have captured the strategic port of Kerch on the strait of that name between the Crimea and the Caucasus. This drives another big spike in Hitler's dream of invading the Caucasus to get oil, without which his war-machine can't run.

Interpreting the War News:

If Philippines Must Fall It Will Not Be for Long

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Wide World War Analyst

Ill-omened tidings from embattled Luzon made it a bleak New Year's eve for Americans, altho elsewhere on the war front that rings the world the news was more cheering.

A two-pronged Russian incursion into the Crimea to jeopardize that Black sea anchor of the German battle line was admitted by Berlin.

In Libya Britain's tough-fibered empire war machine ground on relentlessly at shattered Axis forces seeking only escape westward.

JAN 1 1942

Sea Lanes Open

In the Atlantic there were intimations that Anglo-American vigilance by sea and air, unabated by grim events in the Pacific theater, was maintaining a new low in sea siege losses. Atlantic supply lanes to Russia via Archangel still were open. The Finns reported new surging Russian attacks north of Leningrad to free the better Murmansk route of enemy menace.

To cap this, Singapore, vital British base at the southern end of the China sea, stood fast, still partially sheltered from the full force of Japanese attack by the gallant stand of American-Filipino armies on Luzon. They were taking grim toll of the foe in step-by-step retreat on both the north and south fronts covering Manila.

There was no denying the peril to Manila. Official and terse bulletins both from Gen. MacArthur's field headquarters and from Washington were calculated to brace Americans for its probable fall. Japan's flag may soon fly over the ancient walls of the old city, once Spain's Far Eastern Gibraltar, to displace the Stars and Stripes which rose above them as token of a new nation in the making less than half a century ago.

GRIM OUTLOOK

That is a grim outlook for survivors of Dewey's fleet and of the little force of American troops, regulars and volunteers, which carried that flag into Manila to set it above those walls on Aug. 13, 1898. The writer happens to have witnessed that ceremony from the ranks of a California regiment which had pushed its way up the Calle Real from Malate suburb to the edge of the slimy, green-scummed moat that rimmed those massive old walls.

Yet there had been moments before that August day so long ago when the few thousands of American troops mustered in a peanut field encampment south of the city at Paranque to consolidate Dewey's naval victory and drive Spain from the Pacific were as uncertain of their fate as MacArthur's men are today. Spain had one powerful battleship still to recokn with. It was reported moving eastward to raise the American-Filipino siege of Manila.

Dewey's light cruiser fleet, led by the Olympia, which carried his commodore's flag, had no ship to match her in gun power or armor. Even then there was tension between the United States and Germany over American trans-Pacific war operations. A powerful German fleet rode sullenly at anchor in Manila harbor and with it Japanese warcraft, hardly less suspect in Dewey's eyes.

MONTEREY APPEARS

He planned to take his fleet to sea to meet his Spanish foe. The army ashore was prepared to fall back into the mountains and sustain itself as best it could until the sea fight was finished.

Then a midget but mighty ship appeared off the harbor mouth with the Stars and Stripes flying at her staff. It was the coast defense monitor Monterey, rusty and salt-encrusted, her low decks hardly visible except for sacked coal lashed all about the grim turrets where her giant 12-inch guns rode to solve Dewey's problem.

The voyage from San Francisco made naval history. The Monterey came in as ready to fight as the Oregon from her 17,000-mile dash to Santiago from Bremerton. She moved into place before Manila's main Krupp-gun defense battery next day at short range, and Spain's downfall in the Pacific, and the birth pangs of a Filipino nation in the making, had come. It was under the ominous muzzles of her guns that the Stars and Stripes rose over Manila.

If it is to pass now, for some brief spell, under Japan's ill-omened control, it cannot be for long. American public opinion must demand fulfillment of President Roosevelt's solemn pledges to redeem Filipino freedom whatever the cost.

JAN 1 1942

Yet the fate of MacArthur and his men grimly falling back before the ever-increasing power of Japanese attacks remains obscure even if Manila cannot be held. To what mountain fastness they might withdraw, still to threaten the enemy and keep employed on Luzon Japanese forces that otherwise could be thrown against Singapore is only conjectureable.

While they survive anywhere on the island they are still a factor in the vast battle, and there is nothing to indicate any other purpose. Already they have gained invaluable time for Singapore's defenders, and forced Japan to a costly major campaign of which the ultimate price in men, ships and airplanes would go far to wreck the Nipponese war design.

NO MIRACLE AT HAND

In these days of planes and radio no miracle to save Manila or hold fast somehow the Luzon bastion of Anglo-American power in the Far East may be possible to match the Monterey's voyage across wide seas she was never built to sail. Yet somewhere in inner councils in Washington, London, Moscow, free China and the Dutch East Indies is brewing a design of war that will assuredly crush Japan ultimately, and reap a full vengeance for her wanton surprise attacks and the merciless bombings of Manila.

Communiques of Belligerent Powers

JAN 1 1942

Russian

MOSCOW, Jan. 1 (Thursday) (AP).—A special communique issued by the Soviet Information Bureau:

Our troops on the western front have occupied the town of Kaluga.

General Guderian has suffered defeat.

After the rout near Tula of the 2d Tank Army under command of General Guderian, stubborn engagements resulted on the line of the Rivers Nara, Protva and Oka. Fortified positions of the 4th German Army under Field Marshal (Guenther) von Kluge were broken through in many places.

In the course of fighting, our troops of the western front routed the 20th, 12th, 13th, 43d, 53d and 57th German Army Corps, comprising the 292d, 258th, 183d, 15th, 98th, 34th, 268th, 260th, 62d, 17th, 137th, 131st, 31st, 296th and 167th Infantry Divisions, the 19th Tank Division, and the 2d S. S. Brigade which was brought from Cracow by air.

Under blows of our troops the enemy retreating in the western direction is abandoning military equipment and wounded.

Following the clearing of the enemy out of the towns of Narofominsk, Ugolskyzavod, Aleksin, Tarusa, Schekino, Adoyev, Cherepets, Pereyskl, Likvhin, Koselsk and hundreds of villages, our troops on Dec. 30 took the town of Kaluga.

Large amounts of equipment which now are being counted were captured in Kaluga.

The regular communique:

On Dec. 31 our troops continued to engage the enemy on all fronts.

In a number of sectors our troops, overcoming the attempt of German troops to consolidate their positions, continued to advance and occupied a number of localities, including the town of Kaluga and the large railway junction of Novy Kirishi.

In the course of the fighting the enemy sustained heavy losses in men and equipment.

During Dec. 30 four German planes were destroyed.

MOSCOW, Dec. 31 (AP).—A Soviet Information Bureau communique:

During the night of Dec. 30-31 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

On one of the sectors of the western front one of our units advanced and dislodged the enemy from several populated places.

British

SINGAPORE, Dec. 31 (AP).—A Far Eastern headquarters communique:

On the Perak front, pressure has been slight. Our patrols have been active and, where the enemy has been met, offensive actions have been taken with good result.

Enemy aircraft made some dive-bombing attacks on our communications, causing little damage. One plane was shot down by our light machine-gun fire.

In the Kuantan area there has been contact with enemy parties who had approached from the direction of Trengganu.

Enemy aircraft made some dive-bombing and machine-gun attacks in our rear areas.

Aircraft of the Royal Air Force bombed the airdrome at Sungei Patani last night. Bombs were seen to fall on the airdrome and fires were started.

Enemy aircraft raided the airdrome on Singapore last night. Very slight damage was caused. There were no casualties.

CAIRO, Dec. 31 (AP).—A Middle East headquarters communique:

Yesterday the enemy in the Agedabia area again employed the full of his remaining tank strength, supported by infantry, with the object of trying to prevent our envelopment of his southern flank. A heavy engagement ensued in which we again inflicted considerable damage on enemy armored fighting vehicles and motor transport.

In the engagement the day before in which twenty-two enemy tanks were destroyed and twenty others seriously damaged, our losses are known to have been fourteen tanks.

In the frontier area our artillery successfully attacked an enemy concentration inside the perimeter of the defenses of Bardia. Our medium artillery also engaged a small vessel seen in Bardia harbor and sank it with a direct hit.

Our air forces yesterday carried out sweeps over the area of operations, causing considerable damage and starting fires among enemy motor transport columns. A number of important targets in Bardia also were successfully attacked.

A Royal Air Force Middle East command communique:

Enemy armored and motorized formations in the Agedabia region were effectively bombed by our aircraft yesterday. Considerable damage was done, direct hits being obtained on vehicles transporting troops. Our fighters operating in the same zone intercepted a JU 88 and shot it down.

Our bombers continued their raids on enemy defensive positions within the Bardia perimeter.

On Monday enemy motor transport on the coastal roads between Homs and Misurata and between Zuara and Tripoli were again attacked with good results. Monday night objectives at Zuara were bombed by naval aircraft.

Enemy aircraft which attempted to approach Malta yesterday morning were driven off by our fighters. Later a formation of JU 88's with a strong fighter escort, attempted another raid but was again intercepted. Two enemy bombers were shot down and others damaged.

From these and other operations two of our aircraft are missing.

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP).—An Air Ministry communique:

Coastal command aircraft again attacked shipping at La Pallice last night. Bombs were seen to burst on the mole, and a tanker was bombed and is believed to have been hit. None of our aircraft is missing.

An Admiralty communique:

The commander in chief in the Mediterranean has reported that our submarines have sunk five enemy schooners, one of which was laden with ammunition.

In addition, an Italian destroyer has been hit by a torpedo.

JAN 1 1942

Dutch

BATAVIA, Dec. 31 (AP).—A Netherlands Indies fighting services headquarters communique, relayed by the news agency Aneta:

Enemy attacks were made on various small places in the outer provinces. Three dead, five seriously and fourteen slightly wounded resulted from these bombing attacks.

The search for parachutists who were supposed to have landed near Medan on Sunday last has proved that the original report was based on faulty observations. The enemy dropped no parachutists over Medan.

An attack was made on Menado by Japanese destroyers which shelled the town for some time without causing serious damage. There were no casualties.

Generally speaking, these scattered Japanese attacks appear to be entirely unsystematic. So far no damage has been done anywhere.

During the attack by Japanese bombers on naval aircraft resting on the water, mentioned in the communique of the Netherlands Indies fighting services of Dec. 28, Flight Surgeon R. Siezen and aircraftman G. Bruinhout were killed. Four other members of airplane crews were wounded. The condition of the wounded is satisfactory.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 31 (Official broadcast recorded by AP).—A high command communique:

JAN 1 1942

Systematic attacks against the fortress of Sevastopol have been in progress since Dec. 17, with the collective use of all German and Rumanian forces available in the Crimea. In spite of the violent defense, a large number of strongly armed Soviet defensive positions have been taken in hand-to-hand fighting, and breakthroughs deep into the enemy system of positions have been achieved.

To relieve the defense of Sevastopol the enemy during the last few days again landed strong forces on the Kerch peninsula and near Feodosiya. Necessary counter measures have been started.

At several other sectors of the eastern front there was bitter defensive fighting in severe frost.

Heavy artillery effectively shelled important military installations in Leningrad.

The air force supported defensive fighting by the army, particularly in the central sector of the front, by effective dive-bombing attacks. At several points enemy infantry and cavalry ready to attack were dispersed with heavy losses.

In North Africa there was successful skirmish activity in the area east of Agedabia.

Strong attacks against British columns of motorized vehicles, supplies and canvas camps in Cyrenaica and Marmarica caused heavy fires.

Several airdromes and other military installations in Malta were again attacked by German bombers.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 31 (Official broadcast recorded by AP).—A high command communique:

There was patrol activity in the district around Agedabia. There was lively activity in the districts around Sollum and Bardia.

The Axis air force has supported fighting of ground forces. South of Agedabia one of our reconnaissance planes took up a fight against eleven enemy fighters. After having shot down three of the fighters it crashed in flames in our lines. Two members of the crew were able to save themselves by parachute.

German airplanes have bombed the island of Malta repeatedly. One enemy submarine and a merchant vessel were hit and several enemy airplanes set ablaze on the ground. Three Hurricanes were shot down by escorting German fighters.

JAPANESE

Sunk or damaged (by the Japanese): 33 large type vessels and four small vessels.

Captured: Mechanized units including armored cars, 76; automobiles, 1,038; railway cars, 301; artillery of all types including guns at Hong Kong, 106; machine guns, 223; rifles, 4,925; cartridges, 79,950.

Aircraft shot down or destroyed on the ground: 541—135 of them bombers and 406 fighters.

Enemy losses; 3,000 killed and 9,000 captured.

Japanese losses: 743 killed and 1,799 wounded; airplanes, 49; ships sunk, 4; ships damaged, 12.

Army and Navy Communiques

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP).—A War Department communique:

1. PHILIPPINE THEATER:

General Douglas MacArthur, commanding the United States Army Forces in the Far East, has advised War Department that wounded of the American and Philippine Army have been evacuated from Manila area on the steamship Mactan, which has been converted into a hospital ship, and appropriately marked in accordance with the Geneva Convention of 1907. The wounded will be taken to Australia.

American and Philippine troops are continuing their stubborn resistance according to pre-arranged defense plans.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

An earlier communique from the War Department:

1. PHILIPPINE THEATER:

The enemy continues to exert heavy pressure on all fronts with extensive use of dive bombers and armored units. In spite of these difficulties, a further readjustment of our lines has been completed in an orderly manner. American and Philippine troops continue to offer strong resistance, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

A Navy Department communique:

GENERAL PACIFIC: The naval situation in respect to Maui, Johnston and Palmyra Islands remains unchanged. There have been no further attacks since last reported.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

The following note was appended to the communique:

The Navy makes no claim of enemy losses, except when borne out by positive evidence. The Navy will not indulge in the common enemy practice of estimating losses, but will report only such facts as can be substantiated.

MANILA. Dec. 31 (AP).—A communique from General MacArthur's headquarters:

The enemy is driving in great force from both north and south.

His dive bombers practically control the roads from the air. The Japanese are using great quantities of tanks and armored units. Our lines are being pushed back.

(ADVANCE) LONDON, THURSDAY, JAN. 1-(AP)-CONSOLIDATION OF MIDDLE EAST POSITIONS FROM THE CAUCASUS TO BENGASI, BRINGING IT INTO "DIRECT TOUCH WITH OUR ALLIES, RUSSIA AND TURKEY," WAS CITED AUTHORITATIVELY TODAY AS THE BRITISH ARMY'S MAJOR ACCOMPLISHMENT OF 1941.

SUMMARIZING OPERATIONS, THE WAR OFFICE SAID:

"IN THE MIDDLE EAST, THE YEAR 1941 HAS SEEN COMPLETE DESTRUCTION OF THREE ITALIAN ARMIES TOTALING ABOUT 650,000 MEN (CORRECT) AND A GERMAN FORCE WHICH, THOUGH SMALL IN NUMBERS, (ESTIMATED AT 47,000) WAS THE ELITE OF THE GERMAN ARMY."

THIS WAS THE FIRST AUTHORITATIVE BRITISH CLAIM TO ACTUAL MILITARY DESTRUCTION OF THE NAZI AFRICAN FORCES UNDER COMMAND OF MAJ.GEN.ERWIN ROMMEL, AS WELL AS AN ESTIMATED 100,000 (CORRECT) ITALIANS, IN THE CURRENT LIBYAN CAMPAIGN. REMNANTS OF ROMMEL'S ARMORED FORCE ARE, HOWEVER, STILL FIGHTING IN WESTERN CIRENAICA.

JAN 1 1942

30.24—13879

30.24—13879

THE REMAINING ITALIAN LOSSES CLAIMED BY THE BRITISH WERE MARSHAL RODOLFO GRAZIANI'S LIBYAN ARMY OF 250,000 MEN, DESTROYED EARLY IN 1941 BY FORCES OF GEN. SIR ARCHIBALD P.WAVELL, AT A COST OF LESS THAN 2,000 CASUALTIES, AND THE ENTIRE ITALIAN ARMY OF 30,000 WHICH WAS WIPED OUT IN EAST AFRICA.

JAN 1 1942

"GERMAN STRATEGY PLANNED FOR 1941 IN THE MIDDLE EAST CAMPAIGN WAS TO HAVE DRIVEN THE BRITISH OUT OF THE MEDITERRANEAN AND MIDDLE EAST," THE REVIEW SAID.

"THIS WAS TO HAVE BEEN ACHIEVED BY THE HABITUAL PINCERS MOVEMENT DIRECTED AGAINST EGYPT. ONE ARM OF THAT PINCERS WAS ROMMEL'S ARMY IN LIBYA.

"EXPLOITING THE OTHER PINCERS ARM; GERMANY WAS TO OVER-RUN GREECE AND SEIZE CRETE AFTER WHICH CYPRUS WAS TO BE TAKEN. REVOLT WAS TO BREAK OUT IN IRAQ, SUPPORTED BY AXIS AIRCRAFT BASED AT SYRIA. TO SECURE THE AXIS HOLD UPON THAT COUNTRY, GERMAN FORCES WERE TO BE FLOWN TO SYRIA VIA RHODES, CRETE AND CYPRUS EVEN IF TURKEY, BY THAT TIME COMPLETELY ISOLATED, STILL REFUSED TO FACILITATE GERMAN TROOP MOVEMENTS BY GRANTING LAND TRANSPORTATION THROUGH ANATOLIA.

"BY EARLY JUNE THE STAGE WAS SET FOR A SIMULTANEOUS ADVANCE ON EGYPT FROM LIBYA AND SYRIA.

"AS EVENTS PROVED, BY JUNE 1 ROMMEL WAS ON THE BORDER OF EGYPT BUT IN A LESS FAVORABLE POSITION THAN GRAZIANI HAD BEEN ON DEC. 1, 1940, FOR OUR TROOPS ALSO WERE STILL IN THE FRONTIER AREA. AND OUR FORCES ON HIS FLANK IN TOBRUK CONSTITUTED A PERMANENT THREAT TO HIS COMMUNICATION LINES WHICH VIRTUALLY IMMOBILIZED HIM.

"GERMAN LOSSES IN GREECE HAVE BEEN CONSIDERABLE, BUT IN THE ATTACK UPON CRETE, WHERE ITS DEFENSE WAS PROLONGED FAR BEYOND NAZI EXPECTATIONS, THEY LOST A VERY LARGE PROPORTION OF THOSE HIGHLY SPECIALIZED FORCES, SUCH AS PARACHUTISTS AND AIR-BORNE TROOPS, UPON WHICH THEY DEPENDED FOR A SUCCESSFUL ACTION AGAINST CYPRUS AND SYRIA.

JAN 1 1942

"IN IRAQ, THANKS TO THE TIMELY LANDING OF OUR FORCES AT BASRA, THE REVOLT BROKE THREE WEEKS BEFORE THE SCHEDULED DATE AND GERMAN HELP TO THE REBELS WAS REDUCED THEREBY TO A MINIMUM AND HAS BEEN INEFFECTIVE. BY JUNE 1, IRAQ WAS DEFINITELY UNDER OUR CONTROL AND SINCE UNTIMELY ACTION HAD GIVEN FULL WARNING OF GERMAN DESIGNS IN SYRIA, HITLER COULD HAVE NO DOUBTS REGARDING OUR INTENTIONS OF ANTICIPATING HIM THERE ALSO.

"HIS ATTACK ON EGYPT COULD NOT BE DELIVERED AND ALL HIS HOPES OF OBTAINING OIL SUPPLIES FROM IRAQ HAD TO AT LEAST BE POSTPONED.

"ON JUNE 3 HITLER MET MUSSOLINI AT BRENNER PASS TO DISCUSS THE SITUATION. ON JUNE 22 HITLER ATTACKED RUSSIA."

WASHINGTON,DEC 31-(AP)-THE FEDERAL TREASURY SPENT A RECORD-BREAKING TOTAL OF $18,811,000,000 IN 1941, AND THAT WAS BEFORE THE FORMULATION OF THE PRESENT ASTRONOMICAL WAR SPENDING PLANS.

THIS SUM HAS BEEN APPROACHED ONLY ONCE BEFORE IN THE NATION'S HISTORY. THAT WAS IN THE LAST YEAR OF THE FIRST WORLD WAR, WHEN THE TOTAL WAS A FEW HUNDRED MILLIONS SMALLER.

IT REPRESENTED ABOUT 21 PER CENT OF THE ESTIMATED $90,000,000,000 NATIONAL INCOME THIS CALENDAR YEAR. WHAT THE NEW PLANS ENVISAGE, AS INDICATED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT YESTERDAY, ARE THE SPENDING OF 27 PER CENT OF THE NATIONAL INCOME IN THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1942, AND 50 PER CENT OF AN ESTIMATED $100,000,000,000 NATIONAL INCOME IN THE FOLLOWING 12 MONTHS.

TREASURY BOOKS ARE KEPT ON A FISCAL YEAR BASIS (12 MONTHS ENDING ON JUNE 30), BUT A RECAPITULATION OF THE CALENDAR YEAR WHICH WILL EXPIRE TODAY, SHOWS THESE TOTALS AND COMPARISONS WITH 1940:
(FIGURES BASED ON TREASURY DOCUMENTS FROM JAN. 1,1940 THROUGH DEC. 27,1941)

JAN 1 1942

	1941	1940
TOTAL EXPENDITURES	$18,811,000,000	$9,657,000,000
DIRECT DEFENSE COSTS (INCLUDED IN TOTAL)	12,431,000,000	2,600,000,000
TAXES, OTHER REVENUES	8,836,000,000	5,834,000,000
DEFICIT	10,075,000,000	3,823,000,000
DEBT AT YEAR-END	57,600,000,000	45,024,000,000

THE SPENDING TOTAL THIS YEAR REPRESENTED NEARLY TWICE AS MUCH MONEY AS THERE IS IN CIRCULATION IN THE COUNTRY. IT WAS ONLY POSSIBLE TO SPEND SO MUCH BY UTILIZING THE CHECKING SYSTEM.

THE SPENDING TOTAL ALSO REPRESENTED THE EQUIVALENT OF ABOUT $143 FOR EVERY MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD IN THE COUNTRY, OF WHICH $94 WENT FOR DIRECT DEFENSE COSTS. SOME OF THE REST OF THE MONEY ALSO CONTRIBUTED TO DEFENSE BY TRAINING DEFENSE FACTORY WORKERS, FINANCING FBI ACTIVITIES, AND SIMILAR INDIRECT WORK. BUT THE TAXES COLLECTED WERE ONLY $67 PER PERSON.

COMPARED TO THE WORLD WAR, THE FIGURES SHOWED THAT WHILE THE GOVERNMENT'S CASH OUTLAY REACHED A PEAK OF $2,061,000,000 IN DECEMBER, 1918--A MONTH AFTER THE ARMISTICE--THE TREASURY PAID $2,400,000,000 THIS DECEMBER--WHEN THE UNITED STATES HAS BEEN BATTLING ONLY THREE WEEKS IN THE CURRENT STRUGGLE.

DIRECT DEFENSE COSTS--MOSTLY ARMY, NAVY AND LEND-LEASE--TOOK AT LEAST HALF THE FEDERAL OUTLAY IN EACH MONTH OF 1941, WITH THE PROPORTION GROWING STEADILY UNTIL IN DECEMBER DIRECT DEFENSE EXPENDITURES AMOUNTED TO ABOUT 75 PER CENT OF ALL CHECKS PAID

ONLY IN ONE OF THE 12 MONTHS WERE REVENUES LARGER THAN EXPENDITURES IN MARCH, WHEN THE BIGGEST INCOME TAX PAYMENTS WERE MADE, REVENUES REACHED THE RECORD MONTHLY TOTAL OF $1,566,000,000, WHICH WAS $187,000,000 MORE THAN WAS SPENT THAT MONTH. THE BIGGEST ONE-MONTH DEFICIT WAS $1,637,000,000 IN OCTOBER, WHEN THE GOVERNMENT SPENT CLOSE TO $2 FOR EVERY DOLLAR IT COLLECTED.

UNDATED MANILA

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IT WAS NEARLY 44 YEARS AGO THAT THE AMERICAN PEOPLE WERE ELECTRIFIED BY THE NEWS THAT THE SPANISH FLEET HAD BEEN DESTROYED IN MANILA BAY IN A DAWN-TO-LUNCH BATTLE WITH DEWEY'S CRUISERS.

PASSING THE THEN LIGHTLY ARMED ISLAND OF CORREGIDOR, WHERE BIG GUNS NOW GUARD THE ENTRANCE, COMMODORE GEORGE DEWEY ATTACKED THE SPANISH FLEET ANCHORED IN THE BAY ON MAY 1, 1898, AND DESTROYED IT TO THE LAST SHIP.

THE SURRENDER OF MANILA FOLLOWED ON AUG. 13. PREVIOUSLY THE PHILIPPINE CAPITAL HAD BEEN OCCUPIED BY THE SPANIARDS IN 1565, CAPTURED AND SACKED BY THE BRITISH IN 1762 AND RETURNED BY THEM TO THE SPANIARDS IN 1763.

JAN 1 1942

SAILING FROM MIRS BAY NEAR HONGKONG, DEWEY DISREGARDED THE DANGER OF MINES AND TORPEDOES TO TAKE HIS FOUR LITTLE ARMORED CRUISERS OLYMPIA, BALTIMORE, RALEIGH AND BOSTON, THE UNARMORED CRUISER CONCORD, THE GUNBOAT PETREL, AND THE ARMED REVENUE CUTTER HUGH M'CULLOCH INTO THE BAY AT DAWN ON MAY 1, 1898.

ADMIRAL MONTOJO OF SPAIN HAD ANCHORED HIS TWO ARMORED CRUISERS, TWO GUNBOATS, AN OLD WOODEN STEAMER AND TWO OTHER WARSHIPS IN LINE JUST EAST OF THE SPIT ON THE SOUTH SIDE OF THE BAY THAT BECAME THE UNITED STATES NAVAL BASE OF CAVITE.

DEWEY, PARADING HIS SHIPS PAST IN A LINE, OPENED FIRE AT 5,000 YARDS AT 5:41 A.M., ---"YOU MAY FIRE WHEN YOU ARE READY, GRIDLEY"--- AND THEN QUIT AT 7:35 A.M., FOR BREAKFAST.

JUST BEFORE LUNCH HE RESUMED THE BATTLE, BUT BY THAT TIME TWO OF MONTOJO'S BEST WARSHIPS WERE AFIRE, AND ALL DEWEY HAD TO DO WAS SINK THE REST OF THEM AND SILENCE THE SHORE BATTERIES.

JUST SEVEN AMERICANS WERE WOUNDED. THE SPANIARDS LOST 167 KILLED AND 214 WOUNDED.

TAKING POSSESSION OF CAVITE, DEWEY SENT WORD TO WASHINGTON THAT HE COULD CAPTURE MANILA ANY TIME, BUC LACKED THE MEN TO HOLD IT. HE WAITED THERE MOST OF THE SUMMER UNTIL NEARLY 11,000 TROOPS HAD ARRIVED FROM SAN FRANCISCO. THEN THE AMERICANS ENTRENCHED WITHIN 1,000 YAR OF THE CITY ON AUG. 7.

THE 13,000 SPANIARDS WITHIN THE CITY WERE SURROUNDED BY FILIPINO INSURGENTS AND WERE UNABLE TO PUT UP A PROLONGED FIGHT WHEN THE GENERAL ASSAULT BEGAN ON THE MORNING OF AUG. 13. THEY RAISED THE WHITE FLAG AT 11 A.M.

MANILA-BEHIND THE NEWS

JAN 1 1942

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, PRIME PRIZE OF THE PHILIPPINES, HAS COME TO ITS DARKEST HOUR CLAMPED HARD IN THE VICE OF A JAPANESE MILITARY MACHINE PLEDGED TO WREST FROM THE UNITED STATES HER MOST DISTANT OUTPOST IN THE PACIFIC.

ALREADY THE PHILIPPINE CAPITAL WHICH ROSE FROM POVERTY TO A FLOURISHING POSITION AS A TRADE CENTER SINCE THE SPANIARDS HANDED IT OVER TO THE UNITED STATES IN 1898 HAS BEEN HIT HARD FROM THE AIR.

ITS ANCIENT BUILDINGS OF THE OLD SPANISH DAYS LIE IN BLACKENED RUINS AND MANY OF ITS CITIZENS ARE DEAD OR WOUNDED FROM THE RAIN OF BOMBS LOOSED BY THE JAPANESE AFTER THE CITY WAS DECLARED UNDEFENDED AND STRIPPED OF ITS GUNS.

THE JAPANESE, AT FIRST TIMING THEIR DRIVE AGAINST MANILA TO CELEBRATE ITS CAPTURE ON THE NEW YEAR'S HOLIDAY, WERE THROWN OFF SCHEDULE BY THE VALIANT FILIPINO AND AMERICAN RESISTANCE WHICH WIPED OUT ONE LANDING PARTY IN THE LINGAYEN GULF DURING THE FIRST WEEK OF THE WAR, REPULSED OTHERS AND CONFINED THREE TO THE AREAS AROUND VIGAN, 200 MILES NORTH OF MANILA; APARRI, 250 MILES NORTH OF THE CAPITAL, AND LEGASPI, 250 MILES SOUTHEAST OF THE CITY.

THE JAPANESE WERE SLOW--IN COMPARISON WITH THE TERRIFYING SUDDENNESS OF THE RAIDS ON DEC. 7 AGAINST HAWAII--IN OPENING UP ON MANILA. THEY BOMBED MILITARY BASES UP AND DOWN THE PHILIPPINES ON THE DAY AFTER HOSTILITIES OPENED, BUT IT WAS NOT UNTIL TWO DAYS AFTERWARD--DEC. 9--THAT THE AIR RAID SIRENS SOUNDED AND IT WAS NOT UNTIL THE NEXT DAY THAT BOMBS FELL IN THE MANILA AREA.

JAN 1 1942

FROM THEN ON, WHILE THE JAPANESE WORKED TO ESTABLISH THE LANDING BASES THEY FINALLY OBTAINED, JAPANESE PLANES LASHED AT THE MANILA AREA AND CAPPED THEIR FEROCIOUS WORK WITH TWO MASS ASSAULTS IMMEDIATELY AFTER MANILA WAS DECLARED AN OPEN CITY AND ITS DEFENSES WERE REMOVED.

AFTER THE FIRST HARD TREATMENT AT THE HANDS OF THE AMERICANS, THE JAPANESE WAITED UNTIL THEY COULD SEND AN EXPEDITION IN FORCE AGAINST MANILA AND ON DEC. 22 THE DEFENDERS OF THE PHILIPPINES KNEW THE HOUR HAD STRUCK.

EIGHTY TRANSPORTS CRAMMED WITH SOLDIERS AND EQUIPMENT STEAMED INTO LINGAYEN GULF SOME 100 MILES NORTHWEST OF MANILA AND THE LANDING OPERATIONS BEGAN. THAT OFFENSIVE WAS DEVELOPED FULLY DESPITE THE MOST BITTER FIGHTING.

ON DEC. 31, GENERAL DOUGLAS MACARTHUR, COMMANDER OF THE UNITED

30,24 — 13887

30,24 — 13887

STATES ARMED FORCES IN THE FAR EAST WHO HAS MAINTAINED THAT THE PHILIPPINES COULD BE DEFENDED, ACKNOWLEDGED THAT HIS MEN WERE BEING PUSHED BACK BOTH NORTH AND SOUTH OF THE CAPITAL BY THE HAMMER BLOWS OF JAPANESE INFANTRYMEN, TANKS, ARMORED UNITS AND DIVE BOMBERS. BUT THEY FOUGHT DOGGEDLY ON.

THE ATTACK FROM THE SOUTH WAS OPENED AFTER THE NORTHERN PUSH GOT UNDER WAY.

JAN 1 1942

ON CHRISTMAS EVE, WITH THE NORTHERN FIGHTING TWO DAYS OLD, MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS ANNOUNCED THE JAPANESE WERE LANDING MEN FROM 40 TRANSPORTS AT ATIMONAN, A DEEP-SEA FISHING RENDEZVOUS 75 MILES SOUTHEAST OF MANILA.

LATER MORE TROOPS CAME ASHORE AT MAUBAN, 20 MILES UP LAMON BAY FROM ATIMONAN.

THE AIM OF THE TWO SOUTHEASTERN COLUMNS APPARENTLY WAS TO JOIN FORCES BELOW THE GREAT LAGUNA DE BAY, AND THEN SKIRT THAT BODY OF WATER TO REACH THE CAPITAL ON GOOD, FIRST-CLASS HIGHWAYS.

ON TUESDAY, DEC. 30, THEY WERE REPORTED 45 AIR LINE MILES ACROSS THE LAKE FROM THE CAPITAL--AND HOW WELL THEY WERE ADVANCING WAS SEEN IN A REPORT WEDNESDAY, DEC. 30, THAT THE SOUTHERN BATTLE LINE WAS ONLY 30 MINUTES BY CAR FROM MANILA. THIS INDICATED A FAIR ADVANCE AROUND THE LAKE.

THE JAPANESE WERE FORCED TO REVISE THEIR TIME-TABLE. WITH THE NEW YEAR APPROACHING, THE TOKYO SPOKESMAN BROADCAST ON DEC. 30 THAT THE JAPANESE TROOPS MEANT TO TAKE MANILA "BEFORE JAN. 10."

IN THE CAPITAL, THE PEOPLE KEPT UP THEIR AFFAIRS AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE. DOUBTLESS THEY RECALLED THAT IN THE CITY'S LONG HISTORY IT WAS LOOTED BY THE BRITISH IN 1762 AND WAS TORN BY DESTRUCTIVE EARTHQUAKES IN 1645, 1863 AND 1890.

JAN 1 1942

THE EARTHQUAKE OF 1863 KILLED SEVERAL THOUSAND PERSONS.

PHYSICALLY, MANILA WAS NOT TOO ATTRACTIVE UNTIL RECENT YEARS. IT WAS BUILT ON GROUND ALMOST ON SEA LEVEL AT THE MOUTH OF THE PASIG RIVER AND FOR YEARS IT WAS KNOWN AS ONE OF THE MOST UNSANITARY CITIES IN THE ORIENT. IT WAS CLEANED UP WHEN THE AMERICANS TOOK CHARGE.

IT HAS ONE OF THE LARGEST LAND-LOCKED HARBORS IN THE WORLD, GUARDED BY THE ISLAND FORTRESS OF CORREGIDOR, WHICH THE JAPANESE ONLY RECENTLY ATTACKED HEAVILY FROM THE AIR.

MANILA, WITH A POPULATION OF MORE THAN 620,000, IS THE CAPITAL OF A COMMONWEALTH MADE UP OF 7,083 ISLANDS WITH A POPULATION OF 16,356,000 PERSONS LIVING PRINCIPALLY UPON ELEVEN LARGE ISLANDS.

UNDATED NEW YEAR

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE DARKNESS OF BLACKOUTS, THE RUMBLE OF GUNFIRE, AND THE SOBER REALITY OF WAR HAVE BROUGHT IN A SOMBER 1942 TO THE WESTERN PACIFIC BATTLEFRONT.

FROM THERE THE EBBING HOURS OF 1941 ARE TICKING OFF AROUND A WORLD AT WAR TOWARD THE UNITED STATES. AMONG THE FEW COUNTRIES WHERE

CELEBRATION WILL BE BUT LITTLE RESTRAINED.

EVEN HERE, HOWEVER, THE THREAT OF BLACKOUTS LURKED BEHIND GALA PARTY PLANS AND ON BOTH COASTS RESIDENTS OF THE LARGEST CITIES HAVE BEEN URGED TO FOREGO THE CUSTOMARY HORN-TOOTING AND WHISTLE-SOUNDING WHICH MIGHT CAUSE TRAGIC CONFUSION IN THE EVENT OF AN AIR RAID ALARM.

THE NEW YEAR BROUGHT MANILA, OUTPOST OF THE UNITED STATES IN THE FAR EAST, TO HER GRAVEST HOUR. TANK-LED INVASION ARMIES WERE SMASHING CLOSER TO THE CAPITAL ALREADY FIRE-BLACKENED AND BOMB-SCARRED FROM UNRESTRICTED AERIAL ATTACKS.

JAN 1 1942

BLACKED-OUT SINGAPORE SAW IN THE NEW YEAR UNDER MARTIAL LAW.

THE JAPANESE, FLUSHED BY EARLY SUCCESSES, TOASTED IT IN DRINKS ON WHICH WARTIME RESTRICTIONS WERE LIFTED TEMPORARILY.

JAPAN WAS IN A MOOD OF CELEBRATION, ALTHOUGH ITS LEADERS WARNED THE JAPANESE PEOPLE THAT THEIR EARLY SUCCESSES IN THE PACIFIC WAR MUST BE CONSIDERED ONLY THE PRELUDE TO A LONG, HARD STRUGGLE AGAINST THE ANGLO-SAXON POWERS.

MANY WARTIME BANS, HOWEVER, WERE RELAXED, INCLUDING THOSE ON ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES, AND THE JAPANESE PREPARED TO MAKE THE DAY AS USUAL THE MOST FESTIVE OF THE YEAR.

FOR THE JAPANESE THE NEW YEAR IS NOT 1942, SINCE THEY DO NOT RECOGNIZE THE CHRISTIAN ERA. INSTEAD IT IS THE 17TH YEAR OF SHOWA, THE ERA OF EMPEROR HIROHITO'S REIGN. SHOWA, INCIDENTALLY, MEANS "PEACE MADE MANIFEST." THE JAPANESE ALSO RECKON THE NEW YEAR THE 2602ND OF THEIR EMPIRE, WHICH THEIR MYTHOLOGY DATES FROM 660 B.C.

BOTH GERMANY AND SOVIET RUSSIA TOOK TO THE RADIO TO GIVE THEIR PEOPLES NEW YEAR'S ASSURANCES OF TRIUMPH.

THUS, WHILE THE GERMANS WERE HEARING AN ORDER OF THE DAY FROM ADOLF HITLER PREDICTING THAT SOVIET POWER WOULD BE SMASHED IN THE NEW YEAR, THE KUIBYSHEV RADIO WAS BROADCASTING THAT "IN 1942 WE SHALL CHASE EVERY GERMAN OUT OF RUSSIA AND SCORE FINAL VICTORY."

FOR SOVIET RUSSIA THE NEW YEAR BROUGHT A WARTIME INCOME TAX, ALONG WITH CONTINUED CHEERING NEWS OF SUCCESSES ALONG THE FAR-FLUNG BATTLE LINE SOUTH INTO THE CRIMEAN PENINSULA WHERE GERMAN TROOPS BESIEGING SEVASTOPOL WERE MENACED BY A RED ARMY COUNTER STROKE.

ACROSS EUROPE THE DARK SHADOW OF CONQUEST AND WANT SMOTHERED THE GAIETY OF OLD TIME CELEBRATIONS.

JAN 1 1942

EVEN IN ENGLAND WHAT PARTIES WERE ARRANGED WERE TO BE HELD BEHIND BLACKOUT CURTAINS WITH JOYOUSNESS AND CELEBRATION LONG SINCE GIVEN WAY TO GRIM DETERMINATION.

APPROACH OF ENEMY INVASION TOWARDS THE GATES OF THE CITY AND GIVING GRIM WARNING THAT FREEDOM MIGHT GO OUT TEMPORARILY WITH THE OLD YEAR.

JAN 1 1942

YANKEE AND FILIPINO SOLDIERS FOUGHT DESPERATELY TO BLOCK THE ASSAULT, BUT THE SHEER WEIGHT OF JAP NUMBERS AND EQUIPMENT FORCED OUR MEN SLOWLY BACK TOWARDS THE CAPITAL. GENERAL MACARTHUR REPORTED IN A TERSE COMMUNIQUE THAT THE ENEMY DIVE BOMBERS PRACTICALLY CONTROLLED THE ROADS FROM THE AIR. THIS GAVE THEM AN ADVANTAGE FOR WHICH THE UNFORTUNATE DEFENSE COULD CONJURE UP LITTLE REPLY.

SO THE ANCIENT AND OPEN CITY, TORN AND BLEEDING FROM BARBARIC JAPANESE BOMBING, DREW HER SHAWL ABOUT HER AND WAITED TO SEE WHAT THE NEW YEAR WOULD BRING. SHE PRAYED THAT IT WOULD SPARE HER PEOPLE ANY FURTHER FRIGHTFULNESS IF THE ENEMY DID GAIN CONTROL.

OF COURSE NO POSITION IS LOST UNTIL IT IS WON, BUT IT WOULD TAKE A MONUMENTAL STROKE OF LUCK TO PULL THE ISLAND OF LUZON AND MANILA OUT OF THE PRESENT TIGHT SPOT. STILL, IT'S A WONDERFUL THING TO SEE OUR TROOPS PLAYING THAT LONG SHOT FOR ALL THEY CAN--STAKING THEIR LIVES ON IT. THEY ARE HOPING THAT AT THE LAST MOMENT REINFORCEMENTS MAY SWING INTO ACTION AND SAVE THE DAY.

MEANWHILE THE JAPS ARE PREPARING A GREAT NEW YEAR'S CELEBRATION. THE AUTHORITIES HAVE LIFTED THE WAR-TIME RESTRICTIONS, INCLUDING THOSE ON THE LIQUOR WHICH THE MEN OF NIPPON WILL NEED TO DROWN THEIR SHAME AT THE PAGAN METHODS OF WARFARE THEY ARE EMPLOYING AGAINST CHRISTIAN PEOPLES.

WITH THE PHILIPPINES IN SUCH DIRE STRAITS, WE GET FROM LONDON A SIGNIFICANT STATEMENT BY A BRITISH AUTHORITY TO THE EFFECT THAT ALLIED STRATEGY CALLS FOR THE DEFENSE OF BRITAIN'S GREAT NAVAL BASE OF SINGAPORE "WITH ALL MEANS AT OUR DISPOSAL." HE SAID THIS STRONG-HOLD WAS NEEDED AS A BASE FOR THE ALLIED OFFENSIVE IN THE PACIFIC THEATER.

JAN 1 1942

THAT ISN'T A NEW THOUGHT, AND WHAT IT UNDOUBTEDLY MEANS IS THAT THE PHILIPPINES AND ALL OTHER BASES WILL HAVE TO BE SACRIFICED FOR THE SECURITY OF SINGAPORE IF THE WORST COMES. THIS IS BECAUSE SINGAPORE IS THE STRATEGIC HEART OF THE ALLIED POSITION IN THE FAR EAST.

THIS BASE WAS CREATED TO MEET EXACTLY THE SITUATION WHICH HAS ARISEN WITH JAPAN, FOR THERE WAS AMPLE WARNING OF DANGER IN TOKYO'S AGGRESSION AGAINST MANCHURIA AND CHINA. HOWEVER, IT WASN'T ANTICIPATED THAT ENGLAND WOULD BE IN A LIFE-AND-DEATH STRUGGLE IN EUROPE WHEN THE JAP BLOW FELL.

BRITISH MILITARY EXPERTS LONG HAVE RECOGNIZED THAT EVEN IF A BIG NAVAL SQUADRON WERE BASED ON SINGAPORE, THERE WOULD HAVE TO BE STRONG REINFORCEMENTS FROM THE HOME FLEET IN EVENT OF WAR IN THE FAR EAST. IF THE HOME FLEET WERE ENGAGED, SUCH REINFORCEMENTS COULDN'T BE SENT.

EXACTLY THAT POSITION HAS NOW ARISEN. TO MAKE MATTERS WORSE, THE JAPS HAD THE LUCK TO SINK THE TWO POWERFUL WARSHIPS PRINCE OF WALES AND ~~RESOLUTE~~ Repulse, THEREBY WEAKENING THE SINGAPORE SQUADRON IMMEASURABLY.

THE DEFENSES OF SINGAPORE WERE ARRANGED TO DEAL WITH ATTACK BY NAVAL VESSELS. HOWEVER, THE BRITISH HAVE ADMITTED FRANKLY THAT JUST NOW THEY ARE SHORT NOT ONLY OF WARSHIPS BUT LACK SUFFICIENT WARPLANES IN THE FAR EAST.

NOW THAT PUTS THE STRENGTHENING OF THIS ALL-IMPORTANT BASE OF SINGAPORE SQUARELY UP TO UNCLE SAM. WHETHER WE CAN SUPPLY THE DEFICIENCY IN WARSHIPS AND WARPLANES REMAINS TO BE SEEN. CERTAINLY REINFORCEMENT OF SINGAPORE AND DEFENSE OF THE PHILIPPINES AT THE SAME TIME REPRESENTS A BIG PROBLEM. ONE OF THE GREATEST ALLIED WEAKNESSES IN THE BATTLE OF THE PACIFIC IS IN AIR POWER, AND A MIGHTY LOT DEPENDS ON THAT.

JAN 1 1942

TO TURN TO SOMETHING A BIT MORE CHEERFUL FOR A MOMENT--THAT'S FINE NEWS FROM THE CRIMEA, WHERE THE RUSSIANS HAVE CAPTURED THE STRATEGIC PORT OF KERCH ON THE STRAIT OF THAT NAME BETWEEN THE CRIMEA AND THE CAUCASUS. THIS DRIVES ANOTHER BIG SPIKE IN HITLER'S DREAM OF INVADING THE CAUCASUS TO GET OIL, WITHOUT WHICH HIS WAR-MACHINE CAN'T RUN.

EJ911AES

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"MAY GOD ALMIGHTY ASSIST US IN THIS COMING YEAR"--ADOLF HITLER.

THUS THE GERMAN LEADER SPOKE TO HIS SOLDIERS AND PEOPLE LAST (WED NIGHT IN A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE WHICH SHARPLY CONTRASTED WITH HIS OWN FLAT STATEMENT A YEAR AGO THAT 1942 WOULD SEE "COMPLETION OF THE GREATEST VICTORY OF OUR HISTORY." AND THUS IT WAS AGAIN: "WAIT TILL NAXT YEAR!"

IN LONDON, RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR IVAN MAISKY SAID:

"I HAVE JUST SEEN FOR MYSELF A VAST SNOWFIELD LITTERED WITH GERMAN CORPSES...I HEARD RUMBLINGS OF A RETREATING GERMAN ARMY."

PRESIDENT MICHAEL KALININ OF THE U.S.S.R., IN HIS BROADCAST FROM MOSCOW, DECLARED: "WE ARE NOW FIGHTING THE GERMANS ON EQUAL TERMS. THE ENEMY IS IN RETREAT AND ON SOME PARTS OF THE FRONT ACTUALLY ON THE RUN."

JAN 1 1942

THERE WAS NO DOUBT THAT THE NAZI CONQUERORS WERE IN TROUBLE--THESE MEN WHO VANQUISHED THE WEST OF EUROPE, BOWLED OVER YUGOSLAVIA AND GREECE, PLANTED THEIR TROOPS IN RUMANIA AND BULGARIA, AND ALL BUT REACHED MOSCOW.

NEWS DISPATCHES TOLD OF THE GERMAN REVERSES, AND HITLER HIMSELF ADMITTED IT INDIRECTLY--BLAMING THE "UNSCRUPULOUS BOLSHEVIK SLAVES" FOR ROBBING HIM OF THE VICTORY HE PREDICTED A YEAR AGO.

ASIDE FROM RUSSIA THE NEW YEAR FOUND THE TATTERED NAZI DESERT DIVISIONS OF GEN. ERWIN ROMMEL BEING POUNDED TO PIECES IN LIBYA NEAR AGEDABIA BY BRITISH TROOPS.

THE ONLY BRIGHT PAGE IN THE AXIS NEW YEAR CALENDAR WAS IN THE FAR EAST WHERE THE ALLIED SITUATION ADMITTEDLY WAS GRAVE. HARDEST PRESSED OF ALL, GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR'S AMERICAN AND FILIPINO TROOPS WERE BEING PUSHED BACK ONTO MANILA, THE PHILIPPINE CAPITAL, BY HEAVY JAPANESE FORCES.

IN TOKYO THE ANCESTOR-WORSHIPPING JAPANESE GAILY CELEBRATED THESE VICTORIES ALTHOUGH THEIR LEADERS WARNED THEM THAT THE WAR WOULD BE LONG, THAT MANY TROUBLES LOOMED IN THE COMING YEAR.

IN OTTAWA PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL OF BRITAIN PREDICTED THAT

30.24—13891

30.24-13891

SINGAPORE WOULD STAND--"I SURE DO," HE SAID. AS FOR ALLIED GRAND STRATEGY IN THE COMING YEAR HE SAID HE HOPED IT WOULD BE EXPRESSED "IN DEEDS, AND NOT IN WORDS."

GEN. CHARLES DE GAULLE, WHOSE FREE FRENCH FORCES RECENTLY OCCUPIED THE ISLANDS OF ST. PIERRE AND MIQUELON OFF NEWFOUNDLAND, DECLARED: "WE INTEND TO LIBERATE ALL FRENCH TERRITORIES AND CITIZENS FROM THE ENEMY OR TRAITORS WHO ARE SERVING IT."

(EDS: 2ND GRAF PLS MAKE READ: "XXX THAT 1941 WOULD" ETC.)

IN VICHY THE PRO-NAZI VICE-PREMIER ADMIRAL JEAN DARLAN TOLD HIS CONQUERED FRENCH PEOPLE THAT THE FUTURE WAS UNCERTAIN BUT THAT THE ARMY MUST BE READY TO SERVE THE COUNTRY "NO MATTER WHAT HAPPENS."

JAN 3 1942

YEARLY REVIEWS OF THE BRITISH ARMED SERVICES GAVE THIS PICTURE:

THE ARMY'S GREATEST ACCOMPLISHMENT IN 1941 WAS THE CONSOLIDATION OF ITS MIDDLE EAST POSITIONS FROM THE SOVIET CAUCASUS TO BENGASI IN LIBYA AFTER DESTROYING THREE ITALIAN ARMIES OF 650,000 MEN AND AN ELITE GERMAN FORCE ESTIMATED AT 47,000 MEN.

THE NAZI SUBMARINE FLEET HAS SUFFERED SUCH HEAVY LOSSES THAT GERMANY APPARENTLY IS HAVING TROUBLE OBTAINING AND TRAINING NEW CREWS.

THE RAF HAS A 2-TO-1 ADVANTAGE IN LOSSES IN FIGHTING OVER GERMAN-OCCUPIED EUROPE, HAS DAMAGED SEVERELY GERMAN SHIPPING, UPSET THE NAZI SHIPBUILDING PROGRAM, AND PAVED THE WAY FOR A GREAT BOMBER ASSAULT ON AXIS TERRITORY IN 1942.
